Rosa Bonheur the French painter, loves the animals she paints, and is in turn adored by them, says the Philadelphia Telegraph. She showed her recent purchase, a magnificent lion, who purred and writhed like a gigantic cat when his owner fearlessly stroked his mighty head. Then, showing the head of a most superb specimen of the African lion transferred to canvas with startling realism, she tells the story of Nero. He was her first pet lion, and was reputed untamably ferocious and lived for several years in the garden at By. At last one day Rosa Bonheur was about to travel, and disposed of Nero to the Jardin des Plantes. She parted with him reluctantly, for he was a great pet, and would greet her always with a peculiar little note of welcome.

When she returned from her wanderings two years later she went to see her Nero, and beheld a sad sight. The poor creature had not been so carefully tended as he was used to be at By. Ophthalmia had set in, and the splendid brute lay blind and ailing, unheeding the curious crowds that stared at him. Rosa Bonheur watched him for a moment and then called "Nero!" The effect was magical. The lion rose to his feet, uttered his accustomed note of welcome, and sprang toward the well-beloved voice with such impetuosity that the shock against the bars sent the sightless brute rolling, stunned, back on the floor. The great artist took him back, soothed his last days with attendance and petting, and finally he died in her arms at the foot of the staircase at By, his huge paws clinging to his mistress as if imploring her not to forsake him in his death struggle, and his last movement being a feeble attempt to lick the hands that held him with such infinite tenderness. "You see," said Rosa Bonheur, as she meditatively ruffled her new lion's mane, "to be really beloved by wild beasts you must really love them."

Robbery Strangely Traced.

"Here," said a Lewiston detective "is a queer thing to convict a man of burglary with," and he held up the head of a hammer which he had kept in a drawer in his table. It was an ordinary hammer head, only the striking end of it was battered in a strange and peculiar way. One side of it was broken off.

"A break was made in a Lewiston home last winter, and besides a small lot of jewelry a bundle of papers was carried away. The papers were of a private nature, and such that the owner desired as much to recover them as he did the jewelry. The robber had entered the house through the kitchen and, while picking the lock, had set a hammer down in a pan of molasses candy that had been put into the back entry to cool during the night. When he took up the hammer it had left the imprint of its head in the candy. I saved that pan and kept it on ice all last summer in an uptown ice house. This winter I was in a local junk store and found this hammer in the pocket of a coat in the pile of old clothes. I knew it by the head of it to be the one dropped into the candy pan.

"'Who did you buy this of?' I asked.

"The dealer happened to remember, and I took the hammer head and went to the man's house. There I found that he had died during the summer, but his widow recognized the hammer. I asked if her husband had left any old letters or papers, and she brought out the lost bundle. She knew nothing about any jewelry, but her husband had left $300. I took the papers to their owner and told him the thief was dead."—Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

Egg Within an Egg.

"I've got something new for you this time, sure," said a reputable Spring street physician to a reporter. "It is right here in this box reposing on a bed of cotton. It was done by the laying of a hen—my hen, too."

Lifting the lid of the box he disclosed a wonder in the shape of a fully developed hen egg inside of a soft-shelled egg. The outer shell was very soft, nearly the size of a duck egg.—Los Angeles (Cal.) Express.

GIVING THE NEWS UP TO THE TIME OF GOING TO PRESS.

Happenings of Interest Presented in Brief and Pithy Paragraphs.

Pursuant to the decision of the Central Building League and a majority of the leading builders of Chicago, the lockout of all the employes engaged in the building trades has begun. No man affiliated with a trades union will be taken back to work until a general agreement is reached.

Col. W. P. Breckinridge, of Kentucky, will be dropped from the roll of honorary membership in the Union League Club of Chicago immediately after the verdict is rendered in the suit now pending in Washington. This announcement was made by an official of the club after an informal conference of the president and directors.

A dispatch from Murphy, N. C., says: A spring freshet is imminent and unless the heavy rainfall abates the streams will be swollen out of their banks. It has been raining for more than a week. The wet weather together with the cold snap, will throw farm work late, besides doing considerable damage. Seeds of all kinds, especially oats, are very scarce.

The southern end of the coke region is again in turmoil. Early Wednesday morning four hundred strikers swooped down upon the Youngstown, Pa., works of Frick Company, completely surprising and capturing almost every one of the seventy workingmen and deputies, and took them with them without firing a shot. The attack was a complete surprise to both operators and guards.

A Pan Handle freight train of fourteen cars left the track near Hartford, City, Ind., and plunged down an embankment. A. W. Benheim, the head brakeman, was instantly killed; J. A. Phillips, engineer, fatally injured, and C. L. Tucker, fireman, had both legs broken. The accident was caused by the engineer running into an open switch in the belief that he was on the main track.

The republicans of Oregon have nominated a full state ticket, headed by W. P. Lord for governor. Lord is chief justice of the state supreme court. It is expected that the democrats will endorse Nathan Pierce, the nominee of the populists. The platform reaffirms the principles of the national declaration of 1892; affirms that the policy of protection is necessary and denounces the action of the democrats in congress.

The hangman will be busy in Montgomery county, Ala., soon. There are five negroes in the county jail under the death sentence, and four of the number have been found guilty. Some time ago Mr. Ed Grant was brutally assassinated and it was developed that the murder was the result of a conspiracy, concocted by three brothers named Woodley and a negro named Jack Gabriel, who made Jim Calloway do the murder. Calloway confessed.

The following resolution was unanimously adopted by the National Miners' convention at Columbus, Ohio: "Resolved, That on and after 12 o'clock, noon, Saturday, April 21, 1894, no coal shall be mined in any state or territory where the organization has control until authorized by the national officers of the executive board." This will throw 300,000 men in idleness and will no doubt be the most stupendous strike of coal miners this country has ever seen.

Rev. J. William Jones, of Virginia, formerly of Atlanta, Ga., who was chaplain to R. E. Lee, will deliver an address at the Winnie Davis wigwam during the confederate reunion at Birmingham, Ala., on the night of April 27th. His subject will be "The Boys in Gray; What They Were and What They Accomplished." Dr. Jones is the author of the "Life of General Lee," and is perhaps better informed on the history of the war from a southern standpoint than any man living.

A special from Pottsville, Pa., says: The storm in Schuylkill county is the greatest in point of snowfall in forty years. At Pottsville there was fifteen inches. At Frackville, the head of Mahanoy plane on Broad mountain, the snow is twenty-eight inches deep. Not a coal train has been moved and all the track laborers and extra hands are kept busy in digging open the switches and the main tracks, while engines with snow plows are at work clearing the tracks to the mines. The collieries are all idle.

A New York dispatch says: The engagement between Miss Odette Tyler, the actress, and Howard Gould, the son of the famous financier, is reported to be broken off. It is supposed that Miss Tyler, for reasons of personal import, has changed her mind and reconsidered her determination to wed the young millionaire. Miss Tyler's friends say that the probable reason for Miss Tyler breaking off the engagement was that some person had been in Savannah recently inquiring into the history of Miss Tyler's antecedents.

FORNINST THE DISPENSARY.

The South Carolina Supreme Court Said to Have Decided Adversely.

The following dispatch has been received at Columbia, S. C., from Darlington, the home of Chief Justice McIver. "Information has been received from a source entirely trustworthy that a decision in the dispensary cases has already been drawn up and has been signed by Justices McIver and McGowan, and has been sent to Justice Pope, in whose hands it remains. It declares the act to be unconstitutional, but whether in whole or in part could not be ascertained."

SIMS FOR GOVERNOR.

Tennessee Populists Adopt a Platform and Name Candidates.

The Tennessee populist state convention met at Nashville and J. L. Baxter, state lecturer of the alliance, was made permanent chairman. Messrs. T. J. Ogilvie, of Bedford, and A. L. Mims, of Davidson, were placed in nomination for governor. When the latter's name was mentioned the convention went wild and rose en masse. Seeing defeat before him Mr. McDowell arose and gracefully withdrew the name of Mr. Ogilvie, and Mims was nominated by acclamation.

After Mims' speech of acceptance, Colonel A. E. Garrett, an old union soldier of Smith county, was nominated for supreme court judge by acclamation. No other nomination was made.

The platform which was adopted arraigns the party in power for criminal neglect in refusing to correct existing evils, denounces the increase of the bonded indebtedness and refusal to coin idle bullion, declares Cleveland's veto the greatest crime of the age; declares that he has divested himself of his democratic robes, turned his back upon the party and faced Wall street but still manipulates his party in the interest of home and foreign capitalists. The democratic party in Tennessee is denounced for issuing $600,000 of new bonds, for passing iniquitous election laws for partisan purposes. The platform then hails with delight the efforts of the west and south to unite against the plutocratic east, and demands, among other things, a flexible currency of not less than $50 per capita, the free coinage of silver, a graduated income tax, the abolishing of internal revenue laws, election of senators by a direct vote of the people, abolishing the convict lease system and the repeal of the poll tax law.

A VERDICT OF MURDER

Returned by the Jurors in the Darlington, S. C., Tragedy.

A Columbia, S. C., dispatch says: The military court of inquiry that sat at the inquest over Darlington's dead, with the regular jury, has reported that the killing of Norment by Constable McLendon, and Redmond by Cain, was felonious murder. The report says:

"We firmly believe had McLendon not interfered the chief of police would have had no trouble in preserving order and avoiding the tragedy. We conclude from the evidence that Frank E. Norment came to his death from the effect of a gunshot wound inflicted by one J. D. McLendon and that the said killing was felonious murder; and that W. P. Gaillard, C. B. McDowell, J. C. Murphy, J. L. Nunnamaker, R. M. Gardner, John Felder, J. M. Scott, L. H. McCants, William Livingston, O. C. Cain, E. C. Black, J. W. Holloway, W. H. Bryson, Jack Holling and Wash Owens are accessory.

"We conclude that R. H. Pepper came to his death at the same time and place from the effect of a gunshot wound inflicted by one Lewis Redmond, and that the said Lewis Redmond came to his death at the hands of O. C. Cain, and that the said killing was felonious murder. Redmond was running from the constables and Cain shot him in the back with a Winchester rifle."

It bears date of April 9th, and, after reciting the act of congress, declares that it is "proclaimed to the end that its provisions may be known and observed. And I hereby proclaim that every person guilty of a violation of the provisions of said act will be arrested and punished as therein provided, and all vessels so employed, their tackle, apparel, furniture and cargo will be seized and forfeited."

A GALE ON THE COAST.

Many Lives Lost and the Shore Strewn With Wreckage.

A fearful gale has swept the New Jersey coast. The beach along the Atlantic ocean from Sandy Hook as far south as Long Branch, N. J., is strewn with wreckage. Wednesday morning a large schooner was noticed in distress a short distance from the coast at Sea Bright, N. J. Owing to the heavy gale and tremendous surf the lifeboats were useless and it was impossible to successfully land the life lines. Before assistance could reach the vessel it went to pieces. Six bodies have been washed ashore and it is feared that others have been lost in the surf.

TRAIN ROBBER KILLED.

Shot Down by a Brave Express Messenger.

The Daltons or other train robbers attempted to hold up the Rock Island train No. 1, four miles below Pond creek, in Oklahoma territory. They met an unexpected resistance at the hands of Jake Harmon, the Wells-Fargo express messenger, who shot and killed the first man who tried to break into the express car by the use of dynamite. The other men in the gang tried to escape, but the trainmen succeeded in wounding and capturing another of them and two horses. The other bandits succeeded in getting away, but without any boodle.

Books from the public library at Indianapolis are spreading diphtheria through the city, If Dr. Hurty, the city chemist, is correct. He says that his son was attacked with the disease soon after taking a book from the library. The doctor noticed marks of teeth on the book, and subsequent microspic examination showed him diphtheria bacilli in the book precisely like those from his son's throat.

Mrs. Margaret Walker, aged 53, was hanged at Liverpool for the murder of her husband. The murder was one of the most brutal and revolting in the criminal annals of Great Britain. She killed him for paying attention to another woman. Mrs. Walker, who was of masculine build, chained her husband to a bed-post in one of the upper rooms in their house, and for four months administered to him daily a beating, finally finishing him by battering his brains out with a steel chain.

An Indianapolis dispatch says: Dr. J. A. Houser has again heard from Queen Lil regarding the proposed lecture trip. Through her representative in Washington and a "high official" the queen, Dr. Houser says, agrees to his proposal, but intimates that she is fearful that there would not be any money in it. A London cable dispatch says: The Behring sea bill passed its third reading in the house of commons without amendment, Sir Charles Russell having accepted Sir Richard Webster's suggestion that the clause to which the United States government is said to object be altered in the house of lords. In accepting Sir Richard Webster's suggestion, Sir Charles Russell spoke at some length. The American and English bills, he said, were substantially the same. There were a few points of difference, but these were trivial.

CHARGES OF DISLOYALTY.

A Sensational Address Issued by Minnesota Democrats.

Probably the most remarkable political address of the year has been issued by the democratic leaders of Minnesota through the Democratic Association of Minnesota. The address begins as follows:

"It is useless to disguise the fact that our party is confronted with serious peril. It is time for plain words; silence now is disloyalty to our party and its cause.

"In less than two years after winning the most complete victory that any party ever won, while in full possession of the powers then given us, we present the appearance of a defeated party while our opponents, routed in the battle, wear all the airs of victory. What has brought this astounding change? Whence comes this peril? Not from our opponents; not from the brawling horde of protectionists whom we met and overthrew in 1892, but from malignant and treacherous influences, allied with weakness or cowardice, within our own ranks."

Cholera in Constantinople.

Cholera is spreading in Constantinople in an alarming manner. Calliadi Bey, a councilor of state and a servant attached to the Greek legation, were suddenly seized with choleric symptoms and died within a few hours.

The woman vote was large, and the increase was especially noticeable in the best residence part of the city. The entire republican ticket was elected by increased majorities. COXEY'S MEN RELEASED.

The Judge Gives Them Ten Days to Find Work or Leave the City.

A Washington dispatch says: After a protracted hearing in the police court, the gang of men who reached the city with "Captain" Primrose, from the borders of Texas and Arkansas, and who were arrested as suspicious characters, were ordered released by Judge Kimball, who said they did not appear to be vagrants, but bona fide workingmen in search of employment. He said he would give them one week in which either to find employment or leave the city, and if at the end of that time they were still here they might expect to be dealt with under the law. He gave warning that any actual vagrants coming to the city would be severely dealt with.

The terms of the settlement are a cash payment of $5,000 and the deed of real estate to M. H. Clift, trustee, to be sold to raise the remaining $20,000. The real estate is valuable and will likely bring more than twice the sum needed. His bondsmen are amply secured, and by the settlement the case is ended and all losses provided for.

SNOW AND RAIN.

Terrific Storms Raged all Through the West.

Telegrams from the west indicate that heavy snow and rain storms raged throughout that part of the country Monday night.

"Such Going up Stairs."

At the great slaughter-houses in the Parisian suburb of La Villette there is a granary from which the beasts awaiting execution are fed. The way to it is up a substantial ladder staircase. One of the bullocks having escaped from the pens, climbing up this staircase before he could be stopped. When his escape was first discovered he was seen on the stairs slowly and laboriously making his way upward. As soon as he reached the granary two or three attendants followed him and endeavored to get him down, but all their efforts were unavailing. There was nothing to be done, therefore, but to leave the beast there to eat his fill and then see whether he would be clever enough to return by the way he went. Possibly some thought of exhibiting him in public may have crossed the minds of his guardians, but if so they were doomed to disappointment. The stupid animal, instead of trusting to the staircase, got out of a window on the opposite side of the building, and put one foot on a little thin ladder standing against it. There was a crash, the ladder broke in half, and the too adventurous bullock fell, breaking all his legs, so that he had to be killed on the spot.—[London News.

THE most noteworthy features of the Midwinter Fair are by all odds the county exhibits. They may not seem as novel to Californians as handsome vases and other manufactured articles, but if they are inspected carefully, says the San Francisco Chronicle, they will produce an impression of profound surprise on the minds of the best informed. No one, for instance, could enter the Northern California counties' building without being struck by the almost infinite range of products displayed. Localities that are supposed to place their chief dependence on wheat, exhibit as fine oranges, olives, figs and other rare products as the counties which make a specialty of them. The only inference that can be drawn from these exhibits is that there are precious few part of California in which the farmer may not profitably diversify his crops and add to his own and the State's prosperity by so doing.

HALLS OF CONGRESS

DAILY PROCEEDINGS OF BOTH HOUSE AND SENATE.

The Discussion of Important Measures Briefly Epitomized.

THE HOUSE.

The Atlanta, Ga., exposition bill was set rolling in the house Friday morning by the introduction by Congressman Livingston of a bill with the following title: "An act to authorize the holding of a Cotton States and International Exposition at Atlanta, Ga., in the year 1895." The bill was referred to the committee on appropriations, of which the author is a member. The object in introducing the bill at this time is to get the matter before the committee in proper shape. The text of the bill is quite similar to that introduced for the Chicago exposition. The amount of money to be appropriated is left blank. The introduction of the bill makes the exposition national in its scope at once.

The house fooled away another day in filibustering Saturday. No quorum voted on the measures presented and the speaker held that the house was not operating under call and that a quorum was essential to the further progress of business. That decision stopped all further proceedings, and the house at 2:10 o'clock adjourned until Monday.

The house consumed the day Monday in District of Columbia business. The house consumed [illegible] day in debate over the [illegible] ties for the south and [illegible] Atlanta. THE SENATE.

The resolution requesting the president to enter into negotiations with Mexico looking to the coinage by the United States mints of standard American dollars with the view to regulating commercial relations with China and other Asiatic countries, was laid before the senate Friday morning and Mr. Teller argued in its favor. The senate refused to adjourn until Monday.

In the senate, Saturday, the house bill to extend the time for the St. Louis and Birmingham Railroad Company to build a bridge across the Tennessee river at Clifton, Tenn., was passed with a substitute. The remainder of the session was spent in a long and rather dull discussion of the Behring sea question.

The senate was the all observed body of congress Monday. The opening proceedings were made of interest by the swearing in of Georgia's new senator, Patrick Walsh. After Mr. Walsh was sworn in Senator Walcott delivered a strong silver speech in favor of his resolution providing for the negotiation of a treaty with Mexico for the coinage of Mexican dollars at our mints for shipment to Canada. Even Senator Sherman agreed to the resolution, but under the rules it went over until Tuesday. Then the show of the day came off in the senate. It was the speech of David B. Hill, of New York, defining himself on the tariff bill. The chamber and the galleries were packed almost to suffocation to hear what he would say. Almost the entire house turned into the senate chamber.

In the senate, Tuesday, the bill introduced some time since by Mr. Peffer, generally known as Coxey's "good roads" bill was reported adversely from the committee on education and labor. Mr. Quay offered a resolution, which went over, that the senate hold a session Saturday, the 21st, to hear the committee of working men in opposition to the tariff bill. Mr. Walcott's resolution for the coinage of Mexican standard dollars in the United States mints was agreed to.

In the senate, Wednesday, the urgency deficiency bill was taken up and discussed until 1 o'clock, when the tariff bill was laid before the body and Mr. Hale proceeded to argue against it.

Valuable Horses Burned.

Bernard Manion's handsome three-story livery and boarding stable at Baltimore has been burned, together with 120 horses, 150 carriages and a large quantity of feed. Manion estimates his loss at about $200,000. The value of the boarders cannot be learned as yet. The total loss will, however, approximate nearly $500,000.

Tillman Offers a Reward.

Governor Tillman has offered a reward of $500 in each case for the apprehension and conviction of the parties who broke into and destroyed the liquor in the dispensaries at Timmonsville and Florence.

COMMENTS.

Of Those Who have been Cured or Greatly Benefitted by Using the Electropoise.

ALABAMIANS.

Capt. T. H. Hobart, conductor on the L. & N. railroad, Decatur, Ala., used it on his baby for nervousness and indigestion, the doctors having said the child could not live a week. From the first application of the Electropoise he began to improve, and now, after two weeks use of it he is entirely recovered.

B. F. Land, Dothan, used it for paralysis and have been wonderfully improved in every way, says: "I fully believe that the Electropoise is all in all to the sick, and will do all that is claimed for it."

George S. Valrotn Mobile: "The Electropoise has been of great value to me, curing me of a distressing case of hay fever of ten years standing, and my entire household use it as a prompt cure for colds, fever, sore throat and violent pains."

Joseph Williams, Stevenson: "The Electropoise has entirely cured my rheumatism, and my general health is much improved."

Rev. J. S. Knowles, Headland: "The value of the Electropoise is inestimable."

A similar list could be given from other states. There are many others, but the testimony of such men ought to convince the most skeptical. Don't impose upon their time and patience. It our business.

A convention of the Democratic and Conservative party of the county Chilton, is hereby called to meet on Wednesday, May 16th 1894, at the court house in Clanton for the purpose of electing five delegates to the convention of the Democratic and Conservative party of Alabama, to meet on the 22nd day of May, 1894, at the State Capitol in the city of Montgomery for the purpose of nominating State officers to be voted at the next genera election in this State, and the transaction of such other business as may properly come before it.

Under the resolution adopted by the State Convention, fixing the representation upon a population basis, the beats of the county are entitled to the following number of delegates in said county convention, to-wit:

Beat No. 1,	Mims,	Delegates 1

Beat meetings to elect delegates to said County Convention are hereby called to be held on Saturday the 12th day of May, 1894, at the respective places of voting in said beats, and each meeting will report to Dr. W. E. Stewart, the names of the delegates elected to said county convention. All qualified voters are entitled and requested to participate in said beat meetings, who come under any one of the following classifications, to-wit.

First, all those who voted in the last election for Cleveland and Stevenson.

Second, Those Democrats who would have voted for Cleveland and Stevenson in the last national election, but were prevented from so doing, because they were not able to go the polls.

Third all those who will be entitled to vote in the next election who are Democrats, who were not qualified voters in the last election, and who will support the ticket nominated by the next Democratic State Convention.

This call is made by me under advice of Hon. A. G. Smith, Chairman of the State Executive Committee, as shown by the correspondence hereto attached. The time for holding the Beat meetings and the County Convention and qualification of voters, is as fixed by the State Executive Committee in its call for the State Convention.

W. E. SEWART, Secretary.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Birmingham, Ala., Mar. 24, '94.

Hon. A. G. Smith, City.

Chairman of the State Executive Committee, Democratic and Conservative party of Ala.

Dear Sir:—Having removed from the county of Chilton, it was of course, proper that I should tend my resignation as Chairman of the County Executive Committee of the Democratic party, and with this view, I called a meeting of said County Executive Committee to be held on the 15th day of March, and was in Clanton on said day, but failed to secure a meeting of the committee. Only one member attended.

I am advised by Dr. W. E. Stewart, Secretary of the Committee that by reason of the resignation of some and the refusal of others to act, that a meeting of said committee cannot be had. I am desirous of taking such course as you may deem proper in the premises, and kindly ask that you advise me at once your views. Yours truly,

Wm. A. Collier.

Birmingham, Ala. Mar. 26, '94.

Hon. Wm. A. Collier, City.

Chairman Dem. Ex. Com. of Chilton Co.

Dear Sir:—Yours of the 24th to hand. In reply I have to say that you are still the Chairman of the Democratic Executive Committe of Chilton county, and in as much as you cannot get a meeting of your committee as its chairman, you should proceed to order primary elections or beat meetings to be held in Chilton county on Saturday the 12th day of May to elect delegates to a county convention to be held at some convenient place in the county, on Wednesday, May 16th, for the purpose of electing delegates to the State Convention, to be held at Montgomery, on May 22nd.

When this convention meets, if it sees proper to do so, it can elect another Executive Committee, which will take more interest in the welfare of the party. I understand that your executive committees have heretofore been elected by your conventions. If the people of Chilton county desire it, this same convention could nominate persons for each county office, as will have to be elected in August, or if they prefer it, the new executive committee, elected by this convention, can call another convention for that purpose.

Allow me to call attention to the fact that the representative from each county to the State convention is upon a population basis, and under that, Chilton county is entitled to five delegates. I enclose you also a copy of the call for the State convention, and in that call you will observe the qualifications of voters who may participate in the primary or beat meetings, as prescribed by the Executive committee under authority conferred by the last State convention.

It is very desirable that Democrats should now work together for the good of the party, and I feel sure that our friends in Chilton county will recognize this, and will aid you in ever way in their power in bringing about an organization of the parts in that County.

Yours very truly,
A. G. SMITH,
Chairman.

DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.
"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

Nigh Unto Death

Sound as a Dollar After Taking Five Bottles of Hood's.

"In the spring of 1892 I was taken with severe pains in my breast so that I could hardly straighten myself up. I could not sleep at night and shortly after I was taken with night sweats. I had no appetite and when I did eat

I Became Deathly Sick.

Then large lumps the size of a hen's egg formed upon both sides of my neck. I opened them and closely followed the doctor's directions, but I grew worse and the hair commenced to fall off my head. Finally, I heard so much talk about Hood's Sarsaparilla I decided to take it. I continued until I took five bottles which cured me as sound as a dollar, and from that time until now I have not had a sick day and have not felt the slightest effects of rheumatism." L. A. WYSE, 27 Prospect St., Hagerstown, Md.

Beauty's Varieties.

The French say there are several "ages" as well as kinds of beauty—the beauty of mere youthfulness, which they call la beante du diable; also a beauty of "ugliness," of "old age" and of "thinness," called la beaute du singe. Frederika Bremer, the Swedish novelist, had the beauty of "plainness." She was so very plain of face that her expression of trustfulness, as though appealing to you to find some other qualities in her than mere "looks," shone out with a perfect radiance that ennobled her face and drew friends to her because she had no other beauty. But Miss Bremer took pleasure in her well-kept hands, of which she used to say, "Even hands have their moments" of charm.

THE last words of John B. Gough were, "Young man keep your record clean." No better motto can be adopted by a young man who is ambitious to make the most of his life and its opportunities.

Products that Deluge

The lowland weed miasma, the parent of chills and fever, bilious, remittent and other forms of malarial disease. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is a sure defense against them all. Nor is it less effectual as a safeguard against rheumatic and kidney complaints caused by a wetting. Dyspepsia, liver complaint, constipation and nervousness are likewise eradicated by it. Take it regularly.

Business continues to prove that those who prophesied improvement were false prophets.

A Spring Song.

To old and young, in early spring,
This is the timely song I sing:
If you would be from sickness free

It cleanses the blood with magic art,
Makes every function do its part,
Gives restful sleep and appetite,
And puts disease and pain to flight.

A brick, three-story building at Memphis collapsed and four persons were killed and five wounded. There are believed to be two others in the ruins. A Columbia, S. C., special says: The supreme court played a sort of April fool joke, Tuesday, on the spectators who assembled to listen to an expected delivery on the dispensary law. It was quite a disappointment, when, after asking if there were any motions to be made and receiving no reply, Chief Justice McIver observed calmly, "the court will then take a recess until Saturday next at 11 o'clock."

The Norwegian steamship Sunniva, arrived at Mobile, Ala., with a cargo of 18,000 bunches of bananas. FIREMEN KILLED.

DAVIDSON'S THEATRE AT MILWAUKEE, WIS., BURNED

And Ten Unfortunate Firemen Hurled to Their Death.

The Davidson theatre and hotel at Milwaukee, Wis., was destroyed by fire Monday morning and ten firemen lost their lives. The structure is valued at $300,000. The alarm was promptly responded to, but not until the roof was a sheet of flames. Immediately on the arrival of the firemen ladders were run up and the men rushed up on the roof, which is six stories from the ground. In doing so Allie Reese, one of the men, slipped and fell to the ground, being killed by the fall.

All the men from engine house No. 4 were directed to the rear platform portion of the roof, right over the stage, where the fire was doing its worst. These firemen and others took their stations and began work, when, without warning, the roof under them gave way, precipitating nine of the eighty men below into the fire on the stage of the theater, all of whom were either killed by the fall or burned or suffocated to death.

The correct list of the dead are as follows: Third assistant chief, August Jansen; Frank McGurk, lieutenant truck company No. 4, acting captain; Fred Krosschmuer, fireman chemical engine No. 2; Captain Archie Campbell, of Fire boat Foley; Allie Reese, company No. 3, killed by falling from ladder; James C. Freeman, lieutenant company No. 4.

A man was crushed beyond recognition and found in the balcony of the theatre.

GROWTH OF THE SOUTH.

The Industrial Situation as Reported for the Past Week.

The review of the industrial situation in the South for the past week shows that the farmers are actively engaged in preparing fields on which crops were injured by the recent cold weather. Time enough has elapsed to show that the injury was very extensive, although not so great as was at first anticipated. The fact that it was not great indicates that the industry of growing early crops for Northern markets is now one of the largest and most profitable branches of Southern agriculture. It is steadily increasing wherever railroad facilities are available.

The iron market is a little firmer, with no increase in the output. A review of the year shows that the coal miners have fallen but little behind the average in their outputs but have sold on a par over a term. There is more activity in the lumber markets and stocks are drawing down. Mercantile business is improving steadily, collections are good, and money is in fair supply at reasonable rates.

Forty-six new industries were established or incorporated during the week, together with six enlargements of manufactories and eighteen important new buildings. The following are among the important new industries of the week: The Dudley Lumber Manufacturing Co of Parkersburg, W Va., capital $100,000; the Acme Brick Co., of Louisville, Ky., capital $50,000; the American Improvement Manufacturing Co., of Houston, Texas, capital $50 000; the Paris Compress and Warehouse Co., capital $50,000, of Paris, Texas, the sandstone Boom and Manufacturing Co., of Hinton, W Va., capital $50,000, and a $27,000 brick plant at Birmingham, Ala.

Brick works are reported at Magnolia, Ark., and Alexandria, Va., a planing factory at Mobile, Ala.; a cigar factory at Greensboro, N. C., and cotton mills at Athens, Ga., Concord N. C., Hampton Court House and Greenville, S. A large grain elevator is reported at Mobile, Ala.; flouring mills at Jett, Ky., and Shelbyville Tenn.; foundries and machine shops at Morristown, Tenn., and Pulaski, Va.; a match factory at Atlanta, Ga., and cotton seed oil mills at Hope, Ark., and Gainesville, Texas. A shoe factory is to be built at Norfolk, Va., and a sugar refinery at Perry, La. The new wood working plants reported for the week are as follows, Dunham and Elam, Ala., Carrobelle, Fla., Cordele and Columbus, Ga., Frankfort, Ky., Bay St. Louis, West Point and Hattiesburg, Miss., Greenville, Hampton C. H and Summerton, S. C., Nebo and Pinewood, Tenn., and Parkersburg, W. Va.

Among the new buildings of the week are an asylum to cost $36 000 at Jackson, La., an $80,000 church at Mobile, Ala., a $25 0 0 one at Jackson Miss., and one to cost $10,000 at Valdosta, Ga., a $10,000 residence at Charleston, S. C., and two $10 000 school buildings at Hearne, Tex.—Trade-man (Chattanooga, Tenn.)

Modified the Injunction.

A Milwaukee dispatch says: Judge Jenkins has modified his injunction order against the striking employes of the Northern Pacific railroad by striking out the clause, "and from ordering, recommending, approving or advising others to quit the service of the receivers of the Northern Pacific on January 1, 1894, or at any other time." In all other respects the the judge denies the motion of the men.

Strike Ordered.

A special from Columbus, Ohio, says: The United Mine Workers of America have ordered a general strike on April the 21st.

WHAT IS GOING ON AT UNCLE SAM'S HEADQUARTERS.

Comment Concerning Transactions in the Various Departments.

The house committee on agriculture has perfected the Hatch anti-option bill and directed Mr. Hatch to report it to the house favorably. The vote on the bill was 12 to 2.

It is understood that Secretary Gresham, who has been confined to his apartments with a bad cold for several days, contemplates spending several days at Chickamauga battle field before the end of this month. As soon as the Behring sea and Mosquito matters are settled it is possible that Mr. Gresham will make quite a southern tour, lasting about two weeks.

The president sent to the senate Monday the following nominations: Edward H. Strobel, New York, envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to Ecuador; William W. Rockhill, Maryland, to be third assistant secretary of state, vice Edward H. Strobel. Postmasters—Mississippi, John D. Bills, at Corinth; Virginia, Robert G. Howerton, at West Point.

Senator Hill's speech is still the talk of almost every one at Washington. The democrats are all indignant at the threats he made, but all declare it to be as strong an argument against the income tax as could be made. They, of course, admire a bold, fearless man, but they think Mr. Hill made a mistake in the threats he indulged in. The speech without them would have been more effective.

It is stated upon good authority that the Earl of Kimberley's explanation of the situation given to United States Embassador Bayard, at an interview, concerning the carrying out of the findings of the Behring sea court of arbitration, were entirely satisfactory. A bill giving legal operations to the provisions of the court's findings will be presented to parliament and every effort be made to expedite its passage.

A bill was introduced in the house Saturday which exactly falls in with statements made by well informed treasury officials as to a projected administration measure combining authority to issue 3 per cent. bonds and to protect the gold reserve and to proceed with the coinage of the silver seigniorage. The secretary of the treasury is authorized by section 2 to issue and sell bonds of the character and description mentioned at not less than par, in coin, and apply the proceeds thereof to the redemption of the ten-year 5 per cent. bonds now outstanding.

Wednesday the house committee on interstate and foreign commerce heard Representative Grosvenor of Ohio, in support of his resolution directing the committee to investigate the legality of the action of Governor Tillman, of South Carolina, in the seizing the telegraph lines of South Carolina during the recent disturbance there, and preventing the transmission of press dispatches. Grosvenor said that under the statute and decision of the supreme court of the United States telegraph dispatches were subject to interstate commerce law, and that states had no authority to interfere with them.

L. H. Campbell, of counsel for commissioner of patients has filed in the supreme court of the United States a motion to dismiss the appeal of the state of South Carolina from the judgment of the court of appeals for the District of Columbia in what is known as the Palmetto trademark case. The motion is based on the ground of a lack of jurisdiction. Governor Tillman appealed to the commissioner of patents for a registration of the trademark "Palmetto," to be applied to intoxicating liquors sold under the dispensary law of South Carolina. The application was refused by the commissioner of patents and his action sustained by the court of appeals.

Senator Walsh Sworn In.

Mr. Patrick Walsh, of Georgia, was made a United States senator before crowded galleries Monday morning. The new senator held an informal reception in the vice president's and the democratic cloak rooms, and every senator had shaken hands with him before the chaplain had finished his prayer. It was just five minutes past twelve when General Gordon sent the new senator's commission to the clerk to be read. When this was done the two Georgia senators walked arm in arm to the vice-president's desk and Mr. Stevenson administered the oath of office. Mr. Walsh wore a sprig of violets in his new black Prince Albert, and, with his iron-gray hair brushed tumblingly back from his massive brow, made a striking picture standing before the vice-president with right hand up swearing an allegiance to the constitution of his country. While the new senator was inscribing his name on the senate roll Mr. Hoar, of Massachusetts interposed an objection to the form of his credentials. They were not addressed to the senate. "The State authorities," he said, "should conform to the customs of the senate. These credentials are not properly made out. A while ago a form was prepared and sent to the various executives, and it does seem to me that they might take the trouble to address the new credentials to the senate in the proper and formal way. However, I make no formal objection. I only wish to call attention to the error." The first man to shake hands with the new senator was Dr. Milburn, the blind chaplain.

Advices from Buenos Ayres state that the insurgent Admiral da Gama has made his escape from the Portuguese warship Mindello and has arrived at the Buenos Ayres quarantine station. The Portuguese sailors made no resistance to his leaving the warship.

Admiral da Gama, with a number of his officers, was confined on board the Mindello awaiting the arrival of the steamer Angola, which sailed from Lisbon April 4th, to convey him and his followers to Portugal, the remainder of his staff being similarly held on board of the Almeo de Albuquerque.

THE SQUIRE'S EXPERIENCE.

HOW SQUIRE WEBB, OF WEST VIRGINIA, CONQUERED AN ATTACK OF "NERVOUSNESS."

His Case Baffled Physicians—Almost a Physical Wreck—Cured at Last.

(Baptist Banner, Huntington, W. Va.)

St. Albans is one of the busiest little towns along the line of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway in West Virginia. Its situation on the Kanawha and at the mouth of Coal River makes it a very desirable shipping point for timber.

Some days ago a representative of the Baptist Banner was compelled to spend a few hours here, between trains. After viewing the magnificent scenery of the Kanawha Valley he took occasion to have a chat with some of the prominent business men of the place.

The reporter called on magistrate S. L. Webb at his office, and heard him relate the following strange but interesting story in regard to himself. The Squire, by the way, is a handsome, intelligent man, about forty years of age, possessing a large amount of that fascinating "Old Virginia" culture, and withal a prominent and influential man in political and business circles along the Kanawha River.

"I was affected for ten or twelve years with a troublesome case of 'nervousness,' as I call it. (I don't know or care what the medical name is.). It was the result of indigestion and some kind of stomach trouble. I had also—since our troubles never come singly—a chronic bowel complaint, at the same time painful and unhandy. I had to give up my work almost entirely and was rapidly becoming a physical wreck, at the period when I should have been most strong and vigorous. I tried every kind of medicine that I could find without avail. A prominent doctor of Charleston, now deceased, spent a great deal of skill and time on my case without accomplishing any good results. Finally my mother induced me to try just one more treatment. She had used a medicine known as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills with great benefit, and she persuaded me to try a box. That was in January, 1893. I was down at Mr. C. E. Griffith's store that day, and he and I weighed ourselves on his scales. I weighed but 140 pounds. From that day I began to improve. The first thing I noticed was my appetite. I wanted to eat all the time. Then my clothes got too tight for me, and actually when I weighed the other day on the very same scale my weight was 167½ pounds. Now I am a new man, and just now came from a picnic, where I have been romping around and having a big time. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills did the work for me."

Squire Webb is such an enthusiast that he has his office ornamented with all the Dr. Williams advertisements that he can find and spends his extra time, between cases, in telling people about his remarkable cure and about the pills. He is an influential member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

The reporter next visited Mr. C. E. Griffith, at his store on Main street. He said:

"Squire Webb is certainly a new man since he began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. He used to be thin and nervous, but now he is healthy and robust, and is in every way a noble specimen of manhood. I have been taking some of the pills for the after effects of the la grippe, and they have been of great benefit to me. Just the other day I sent for some more, and I am going to keep them on hand. All that Mr. Webb has told you about his condition and cure is true, to my personal knowledge."

Squire Webb said on parting with the scribe, that he had made a solemn vow with himself to do all in his power to get people to use the medicine that had cured him. The Baptist Banner is glad at any time to find such ready testimonials to the efficacy of any reliable medicine, so listened with a good deal of satisfaction to the story of Squire Webb.

An analysis of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills shows that they contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effects of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, and all forms of weakness either in male or female. Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price (50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50—they are never sold in bulk or by the 100) by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y., or Brockville, Ontario.

The World of Workers.

The single woman who chooses her occupation wisely, or who, compelled for a time to engage in something that is not congenial, gradually wins her way to one that suits her taste, has one of the best possible prospects of a happy life. She knows nothing about killing time. Every hour dies a natural death, and she hardly has leisure to remember that it existed. Her occupation becomes her inspiration. She loves it and delights in growing with it and making it and herself honored factors in the life of the city or town where she dwells. Success commands respect. Whether she be a wise physician, gifted writer or experienced dressmaker, she finds herself sought out and her friends increasing. The world of workers, if they be honest, whole souled faithful workers, is always a happy world.—Boston Herald.

Weather Bracelets.

The well known effect in deadening or in increasing the temperature of the body by cooling or warming the wrists has been applied by a Philadelphia woman in an ornamental way. In winter she wears an inch-wide strip of asbestos, a noted nonconductor of heat, folded in gold embossed velvet and buckled with a jeweled loop. For summer use her pulse coolers are spheroids of rose quartz about an inch in diameter, linked together with filigree silver, these possessing to a marked degree the quality of absorbing cold. The woman claims proof against suffering from weather variations while thus braceleted.

IF every man in the country would strictly prohibit himself from drinking there would be no need of a prohibition party.

Mary Magdalene's Grave.

Fifteen thousand pilgrims annually visit St. Baume, in Provence, not far from Marseilles, where Mary Magdalene is said to have spent the last thirty years of her life.

The legend, according to the Nouvelle Revue, runs that Mary Magdalene came from Judea in a small boat with Lazarus, Martha, the two Marys and Salome, bringing with them the body of St. Arthemas, the head of St. James the Less and a few wee bones of the Innocents martyred by King Herod. But from all ages this story has been disputed, and the Abbe Duchesne, one of the most erudite writers on the early Christian saints and martyrs, considers that the relics of Mary Magdalene were probably sent from Constantinople about the seventh century. A Greek breviary, however, speaks of the saint as having died at Ephesus.—New York Recorder.

It will, perhaps, require a little stretch of the imagination on the part of the reader to recognize the fact that the two portraits at the head of this article are of the same individual; and yet they are truthful sketches made from photographs, taken only a few months apart, of a very much esteemed citizen of Illinois—Mr. C. H. Harris, whose address is No. 1,622 Second Avenue, Rock Island, Ill. The following extract from a letter written by Mr. Harris explains the marvelous change in his personal appearance. He writes: "Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery saved my life and has made me a man. My home physician says I am good for forty years yet. You will remember that I was just between life and death, and all of my friends were sure it was a case of death, until I commenced taking a second bottle of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' when I became able to sit up and the cough was very much better, and the bleeding from my lungs stopped, and before I had taken six bottles of the 'Golden Medical Discovery' my cough ceased and I was a new man and ready for business.

I now feel that it is a duty that I owe to my fellow-men to recommend to them the 'Golden Medical Discovery' which saved my life when doctors and all other medicines failed to do me any good.

I send to you with this letter two of my photographs; one taken a few weeks before I was taken down sick in bed, and the other was taken after I was well." These two photographs are faithfully re-produced at the head of this article.

Mr. Harris's experience in the use of "Golden Medical Discovery" is not an exceptional one. Thousands of eminent people in all parts of the world testify, in just as emphatic language, to its marvelous curative powers over all chronic bronchial, throat and lung diseases, chronic nasal catarrh, asthma, and kindred diseases.

Eminent physicians prescribe "Golden Medical Discovery" when any of their dear ones' lives are imperilled by that dread disease, Consumption. Under such circumstances only the most reliable remedy would be depended upon. The following letter is to the point. It is from an eminent physician of Stamps, Lafayette Co., Ark. He says: "Consumption is hereditary in my wife's family; some have already died with the disease. My wife has a sister, Mrs. E. A. Cleary, that was taken with consumption. She used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and, to the surprise of her many friends, she did well. My wife has also had hemorrhages from the lungs, and her sister insisted on her using the 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I consented to her using it, and cured her. She has had no symptoms of consumption for the past six years. Feeling that having this disease can take no better remedy." Yours very truly,

W. C. Rogers, M. D.

From the Buckeye State comes the following: "I was pronounced to have consumption by two of our best doctors. I spent nearly $300, and was no better. I concluded to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I bought and used eight bottles and I am now say with truth that I feel just as well as to-day as I did at twenty-five, and can do as much as good a day's work on the farm, although I had not done any work for several years." Truly, your friend,

William Dulaney

"I had catarrh in the head for years and trouble with my left lung at the same time. You put so much faith in your remedies that I concluded to try one bottle or two, and derived much benefit therefrom. I used three bottles of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, five bottles of your "Golden Medical Discovery," and in four months I was myself again. I could not sleep on my left side, and now can sleep and eat heartily. So long as I have your medicines on hand I have no need of a doctor; I do not think my house in safe without them. Yours truly,

If it would be any more convincing, we could easily fill the columns of this paper with letters testifying to the cure of the severest diseases of the throat, bronchia and lungs by the use of "Golden Medical Discovery." To build up solid flesh and strength after la grip, pneumonia, "lung fever"), exhausting fevers, and other prostrating diseases, it is no equal. It does not make fat like cod liver oil and its nasty compounds, but solid, muscle-some flesh.

A complete treatise on Throat, Bronchial and Lung Diseases; also including Asthma and Chronic Nasal Catarrh, and pointing out successful means of home treatment for these maladies, will be mailed to any address by the World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. The Arval Dinner.

The arval dinner appears to be an ancient custom. This was properly a solemn festival on the day of interment and when the corpse was exposed to view. The relatives and friends were invited to attend, so that having inspected the body they might vouch that the death was a natural one, and thus exculpate the heir and all others entitled to the deceased's possessions from accusations of having used violence.—Westminster Gazette.

If everything seems wrong
And you feel a yearning strong
To leave this world of sorrow, sin and care,
We would tell you, if requested,
That your food is undigested,
And your liver or your stomach's out of gear.

For when from this mournful vale
A weary soul would sail
To a country where everything is fair,
It is now always agreed
That somebody's off his feed
With a liver or a stomach out of gear.

If, then, from your point of view,
A mansion in the blue
Has more attractions than a flat down here,
You can't feel differently to-morrow
If you'll but now will swallow
For your liver or your stomach's out of gear.

AN HONEST DEALER.

A country gentleman was being pestered by an umbrella hawker, and in order to get rid of him he purchased one of his umbrellas for the sum of two marks. After paying the money he tapped the man on the shoulder and laughingly inquired:

"Now, tell me candidly, how long do you suppose the thing will really last?"

The hawker cast a wistful glance at the clear sky, and frankly replied:

"If this sort of weather continued, Herr Baron, I'll guarantee the umbrella to hold out at least six or eight weeks."—Localanzeiger.

THEN HE LEFT.

Several municipal councilors of a large Swabian town had been indulging their humorous faculties at the expense of an honest fellow burgess who was noted for his rough-and-ready manners, and it seemed as though they intended at all hazards to make him the butt of their wit and ridicule for the rest of the evening. This was more than our worthy citizen could stand. He, therefore, emptied his glass and took his departure, not, however, without giving the councilors a riddle to solve.

"Well, now, gentlemen, as you make yourselves out to be the cleverest people in the world, just tell me the difference between a horse and a donkey."

The city fathers thought the matter over at considerable length. One replied:

"A horse has short ears; a donkey long ones."

Other answers followed from the rest.

"All wrong, said the problem maker. When pressed for the correct answer, he replied:

"A horse has never found its way into the Council Chamber, but—good night, gentlemen!"

So saying he left the company of his abashed tormentors.

PARENTAL FEARS GROUNDLESS.

"Mabel, my child, come here."

There was a world of tenderness in the father's tone and manner as he caressed the dark brown wavy hair of the petted daughter who came in answer to his summons and sat on a low stool at his feet.

"You have always found me willing to make any reasonable sacrifice for your comfort and happiness, have you not, my daughter?"

"Yes, papa."

"Your home is not an unhappy one, is it?"

"Oh, no!"

"You would not turn your back upon it unless your calm and deliberate judgment seconded the impulse of your heart, would you, my child?"

"Why, papa, what is—"

"Pardon me, dear, but the time has come when I must speak of a matter that concerns me greatly because it concerns you. I have observed of late a growing inclination on the part of young Mr. Spoonamore to seek your society. Now, while Mr. Spoonamore is a harmless and well-meaning young man, against whom nothing can be said on the score of personal character, disposition or family connection, he is hardly the sort of man I should select as a fitting mate for you, Mabel. He is not your equal intellectually. You must have discovered that. To encourage him, my child, would be an act of coquetry to which I hope you could not bring yourself. I think it best to speak of this now because he may presume upon his acquaintance with you to hint at a nearer tie—"

"He—he has done so already, papa."

"Then my admonition has come too late?"

"Why—he asked me last night to marry him."

"And you, Mabel!" exclaimed the father, with an anxious tremor in his voice. "Can it be possible that you—"

"Don't be uneasy, papa," replied the girl. "I turned him down in great shape!"—Chicago Tribune.

Hours of Dining.

The hours of dining and the time of retiring at night have, it would appear, been undergoing a constant change in England as well as in other countries in the course of the last few hundred years. The fashionables of Edward IV.'s court rose with the lark, despatched their dinner at 11 o'clock, and shortly after 8 were wrapped in slumber. In the Northumberland House Book for 1512 it is set forth that the family rose at 6 in the morning, breakfasted at 7, dined at 10 and supped at 4 in the afternoon. The dinner hour, which was once so early as 10 o'clock, has gradually got later and later, until now it would be though the excess of vulgarity in the fashionable world to sit down to table earlier than 6.30 o'clock, while others extend it to 9 or 10.—New York Sun.

Seattle, Washington, was so called after a powerful Indian chief of the neighborhood.

There was just $249,180.76 worth of dispensary liquor sold in South Carolina during the quarter ending February 1st. There were fifty-seven dispensaries in operation and the net profits for equal division between the counties and towns were $41,160.49.

The Glamorgan pipe and iron works of Lynchburg, Va., were totally destroyed by fire. The loss will be between $75,000 and $100,000. Insurance unknown. The company employed about three hundred men, and had enough orders ahead to run them six months.

The West End Land Company of Nashville, Tenn., has made an assignment for the benefit of its creditors. The liabilities are stated to be something more than $100,000, and the assets, mainly real estate, were valued last year at between $350,000 and $400,000.

The attorneys for the receivers of the Central railroad, have received a copy of a bill filed in the Middle district United States court of Alabama, to foreclose the mortgage on the Columbus and Western railroad, a part of the Savannah and Western system, between Columbus and Montgomery.

A brick, three-story building at Memphis collapsed and four persons were killed and five wounded. There are believed to be two others in the ruins. All the killed, injured and missing are negro laborers. The building was built in 1860 and was regarded as unsafe because of the inferior material used in its construction.

At all the mines in Jellico, Tenn., district notices have been posted to the effect that on May 1st wages will be reduced at least 20 per cent. In the fifteen or eighteen mines about 1,500 men will be involved and they will doubtless strike. Throughout the whole coal field a huge strike is expected on May 1st. It will involve in the East Tennessee valley at least 4,000 men.

A report comes from Murphy, N. C., of the finding of a gold nugget on Brasstown creek that measured 1x2 inches in size. This nugget is worth a small fortune and should many of them be found they will soon make millionaires. The mining interests of the section are looking up considerably and enthusiasts declare that the truth has not been told of the mineral wealth yet undiscovered.

The Tennessee democratic state executive committee met at Knoxville. The chairman was authorized to appoint a finance committee of five or more. John W. Childress, of Davidson, was elected treasurer. The question of selecting a date for the calling of the convention to nominate a candidate for governor was then taken up and after some discussion Wednesday, August 15th was selected.

From the headquarters of the Vicksburg, Shreveport and Pacific Railroad Company in Cincinnati comes the announcement, under date of April 13th, that a reduction of 10 per cent on the salaries and wages of the employes of this road will take effect on the 15th of May. T. Houston. Rodgers was discharged. The other four waived examination and were placed under a bond of $1,000 each for their appearance at the next term of the circuit court at Columbia.

The arguments in the Peckwood murder case were began at Tavares, Fla., Tuesday. There is no time limit on the speeches and it will probably be two or three days before the jury retires to reach a verdict. It is rumored that John B. Verona and Mrs. Poppleton, whom the state depended on to clinch the case against the accused men, have been paid to leave Florida. At any rate these two witnesses could not be found and the lawyers for the prosecution say their evidence was most important.

A special from Tampa, Fla., says: The United States government has begun war on the Honduras (the old Louisiana) lottery company in earnest. Since the establishment of the Graham printery, at Port Tampa City, and a steamer put on between that port and the Honduras end of the old Louisiana lottery business, the lottery company has kept aboard of this vessel a lot of printing presses and material. The object was to provide against any revolution that might arise in Honduras, or, possibly, any unfavorable turn as regards the legal status of their business in this country.

In the United States court at Savannah argument was heard on the intervention of the Western Union telegraph against the Central railroad. The master reported allowing the Western Union compensation for messages sent under the contract between July 31, 1889, and July 1, 1891, the time the Central was leased to the Georgia Pacific. The amount is about $3,000 for telegrams sent according to the contract with the Central during the time of the lease up to March 4, 1892. Judge Speer held that the contract was made between the Western Union and the Central was not affected by the lease to the Georgia Pacific.

ZEB VANCE DEAD.

NORTH CAROLINA'S JUNIOR SENATOR DIES UNEXPECTEDLY.

For Years He Was a Conspicuous Figure in Public Life.

Senator Zebulon B. Vance, of North Carolina, died at his residence in Washington Saturday night from an apoplectic stroke. The senator had not been in good health for the past year, and in the early part of the session of congress was compelled to abandon his senatorial duties and take a trip to Florida in the hope of recuperating. His trip proved beneficial and on his return to Washington he was able for a while to partially resume his official duties. His improvement, however, did not continue long and for the last few weeks he has been confined to his bed. He was practically an invalid, but lately has been able to receive a few intimate friends and superintend the looking after the interest of his constituents. During the past week he has been reported as doing well as could be expected and the serious change for the worse was wholly unexpected.

Shortly before 11 o'clock Saturday morning he had an attack of apoplexy and became unconscious, regaining consciousness only a few minutes before his death.

SKETCH OF HIS LIFE.

Zebulon B. Nance, of Charlotte, was born in Buncombe county, North Carolina, May 13, 1830; was educated at Washington college, Tennessee, and at the University of North Carolina, studied law, was admitted to the bar in January, 1852, and was elected county attorney for Buncombe county the same year; was a member of the state house of commons in 1854; was a representative from North Carolina in the thirty-fifth and thirty-sixth congresses; entered the confederate army as captain in May, 1861, and was made colonel in August, 1864; was elected governor of North Carolina in August, 1862, and re-elected in August, 1864; was elected to the United States senate in November, 1870, but was refused admission, and resigned in January, 1873; was the democratic nominee for the United States senate in 1872, but was defeated by a combination of bolting democrats and republicans; was elected governor of North Carolina for the third time in 1876; was elected to the United States senate as a democrat in place of A. S. Merrimon, democrat; took his seat March 18, 1879; and was re-elected in 1884 and 1890. His term expires March 3, 1897.

DAVID DUDLEY FIELD DEAD.

He Was a Distinguished Author and Jurist.

David Dudley Field died suddenly at his home in New York of pneumonia. He was born in Hadden, Conn., February 13, 1805, and was the eldest of four brothers—Henry M., Cyrus W. and Stephen being the other three—all of whom have achieved distinction. David was graduated from Williams college in 1825, and was admitted to the bar in New York city in 1828. He early became prominent, and, after eleven years' practice, wrote a letter on "The Reform of the Judiciary System," which he followed up later with a pamphlet on the same line. The result of this agitation was that the constitutional convention of 1846 recommended a general code and a reform of the practice on the line of his suggestions.

In 1866, Mr. Field undertook the prepation of an international code, which he presented to the social science congress after seven years' work. This work attracted the attention of the jurists of the world, and was translated into several tongues. Mr. Field was originally a democrat, until the nomination of Fremont in 1856, when he supported that ticket. During 1876 he served two months in congress, filling the unexpired term of Smith Ely. From that time on he acted with the democrats, and was on that side in the Hayes-Tilden contest. Mr. Field has published a number of works of high literary value besides his great lawbooks, on which however, his fame chiefly rests. He has lived for several years at 22 Gramercy park, enjoying remarkable health and vigor up to the time of his death.

Big Blaze at Buffalo.

The American glucose works, at Buffalo, N. Y., the largest of the kind in the country, have been destroyed by fire. Several firemen were injured and taken to the hospitals. It is rumored that some of the employes of the works were caught by the flames and burned to death. The total loss is about $1,200,000, on which there is an insurance of about $500,000.

NATIONAL CAPITAL.

WHAT IS GOING ON AT UNCLE SAM'S HEADQUARTERS.

Comment Concerning Transactions in the Various Departments.

Senator Morrill, of Vermont, reached his 84th year Saturday and was congratulated by a number of senators from both sides of the chamber.

Among the actions of the court at Washington in the Central litigation not reported was an order passed at the request of the operation of the property monthly instead of quarterly, as they are required to do at present.

The hearing in chambers before Associate Justice White, of the supreme court, in the Georgia Central and Savannah and Western litigation proceedings was concluded at Washington Monday. Justice White reserved his decision.

The president Wednesday nominated to be postmasters: Georgia—Chas. R. Pendleton, Valdosta. Tennessee—Isaac B. Williams, Paris. Also, Commodore Joseph Skerrett to be rear admiral; Captain Joseph N. Miller to be commodore.

W. C. P. Breckenridge appeared on the floor of the house Monday morning. He was shunned by the great mass of members, though a few shook his hand as he passed among them. No demonstration of any kind was made. It is probable that he will go to Kentucky at once to begin his canvass for re-election.

The conferees of the two houses on the urgent deficiency bill met Wednesday morning and came to an agreement on practically all the items in the bill. The Senate added $700,000 to this bill, but as all the items are in the nature of court expenses and absolutely necessary, the house conferees will agree to them.

It is said among the North Carolina delegation at Washington that Governor Carr will appoint either Congressman Henderson or Alexander to succeed Senator Vance. Personally the governor will be inclined towards Mr. Alexander, who represents the Charlotte district. They are close, personal friends and Governor Carr succeeded Mr. Alexander as president of the North Carolina Farmers' Alliance several years ago.

Mr. Swanson, of Virginia, who has been making a poll of the democrats of the house relative to a bill repealing the 10 per cent bank tax, says that 121 democrats favored unconditional repeal, thirty-seven expressed themselves for repeal with safe restrictions, thirty-one are opposed to any measure, believing only in the extension of a national banking system, while of the remaining democrats, some have no opinion upon the subject and the rest are absent from the city.

The verdict of $15,000 damages against Breckinridge in the Pollard-Breckinridge case was a surprise to Washington. Almost every one expected the jury to fail to agree. Breckinridge may appeal. His friends say he will not resume his duties in the house of representatives at present. He fears that his colleagues will snub him or show their contempt for him in in some manner. It is said that he will go to Kentucky immediately and begin stumping his district for re-election.

Senator Walsh, of Georgia, offered his first bill in the senate Saturday. It was a bill to effect a minor reform in the judiciary. A resolution offered by Mr. Quay, to give a hearing in the senate chamber to a committee of the workingmen's associations of the United States in opposition to the tariff bill, was laid on the table by a vote of yeas, 34; nays, 9. At 1 p. m., the further urgent deficiency bill was passed, and the tariff bill taken up, when Mr. Quay addressed the senate in opposition.

Col. W. L. Nugent, of Meridian, Miss., attorney of the Gulf and Ship Island Railroad Company, made an argument before Secretary Smith of the interior department in support of the company's claim for 76,800 acres of land. If this claim is allowed the railroad company will then have 116,800 acres of pine timber land in Mississippi, as 40,000 have already been allowed. With this amount of land Captain W. H. Hardy, president of the company, says they will be able to resume work on the road and finish it to Hattiesburg. This land is the finest pine timber land in the state and is well worth half a million of dollars.

L. H. Campbell, of counsel for commissioner of patients has filed in the supreme court of the United States a motion to dismiss the appeal of the state of South Carolina from the judgment of the court of appeals for the District of Columbia in what is known as the Palmetto trademark case. The motion is based on the ground of a lack of jurisdiction. Governor Tillman appealed to the commissioner of patents for a registration of the trademark "Palmetto," to be applied to intoxicating liquors sold under the dispensary law of South Carolina. The application was refused by the commissioner of patents and his action tion sustained by the court of appeals.

CENTRAL ORDERED TO PAY

$181,000 to the Southwestern—Lawyers get their Share.

A Washington special says: Justices Jackson and White have ordered that the Central pay over to the Southwestern $181,000, the amount of its earnings for the last six months of last year. About $25,000 of this amount will go to the Southwestern's lawyers. This is, however, not fees in the case alone, but in the tripartite bond case and all the other matters.

INSPECTING GEORGIA MINES.

Northern Capitalists Greatly Pleased With the Prospect.

Mr. E. P. Oates, of Athens, Ga., has returned from a trip through Lumpkin, Hall and White counties, where he has been with Messrs. Reed and Baker, of Detroit, Mich., inspecting the mineral resources of that section of the state. The two gentlemen are capitalists and experienced in mining affairs. They visited the state as the representatives of a large western syndicate which will in all probability invest in the mines of Georgia.

LAID TO REST.

REMAINS OF SENATOR VANCE BURIED AT ASHEVILLE.

Thousands Pay Homage to the Dead Statesman.

At the hour of noon Wednesday the remains of the late Senator Zebulon B. Vance were deposited in their resting place at Asheville, N. C., overlooking the beautiful French Broad river—a fitting spot for the last repose of this great man. The funeral train arrived just after dawn, from Raleigh, with committees of both houses of congress, the governor and other officers of state, and three cars of distinguished friends of the dead senator.

Notwithstanding the late hour at which the train passed Hickory, Morganton and other stations, large crowds pressed into the funeral car and demanded to see the remains. The demonstration in Asheville was the greatest of the occasion. The body was placed in the First Presbyterian church at 8 o'clock, and from that hour until 11:30, thousands of people from his native county of Buncombe passed to take a last look.

An immense crowd of confederate veterans, followed by the different fraternal organizations, the Asheville Light Infantry and the Bingham school cadets, filed by. Mrs. Vance spent a half hour in private with her dead husband, and asked that she be the last one to see his face. The procession was then formed, reaching almost from the church to the cemetery, a distance of two miles. The crowd that marched out to the cemetery is estimated at 10,000.

ALABAMA MINERS

Order an Extensive Strike to Take Place April 23d.

A proclamation has been issued by the committee on resolutions appointed by the Alabama miners ordering a big strike on April 23d. The preamble recites that, "in view of the fact that the operators of Alabama having a contract with the miners until July 4, 1894, and in lieu of the said contract and the depressed financial condition of the country having closed down a number of their mines, thus leaving a number of miners at Blue Creek, Pratt mines, Coalburg, etc., out of employment, causing a surplus of idle men on the market to compete with those at work for a living, we deemed it advisable, in view of our surrounding circumstances and the low, unprecedented condition of the iron trade, voluntarily to offer said operators a reduction of 10 per cent on scale now in force on certain conditions, which proposition was rejected by said operators, and in return said operators made a counter-proposition of 22 per cent, which proposition was submitted to a popular vote of the miners and was rejected and our former proposition was modified, giving said operators a further concession to enable them to put in operation the mines and furnaces now idle; but our second proposition was not more successful than our first, and in view of our deplorable condition, we cannot grant any further concession for the best interest of ourselves, the operators and the community."

DEATH OF GENERAL SLOCUM.

Contracted Pneumonia and Was Ill Only a Few Days.

General Henry W. Slocum died Saturday morning at his home, in Brooklyn, of pneumonia. General Slocum had been ill only a few days, but his death was not unexpected.

SKETCH OF THE DEAD GENERAL.

Henry Warner Slocum was born in Onandaga county, New York, September 24th, 1827. He was graduated from West Point in 1852, appointed second lieutenant of artillery and ordered at once to Florida. In 1855 he was made first lieutenant, but in 1856 he resigned to practice law in Syracuse. He entered the war as colonel and after Bull Run was commissioned brigadier general, finally succeeding to the command of the division formally led by General W. B. Franklin.

He took command of the twentieth corps during Sherman's march to the sea; he commanded the left wing. Resigning from the army in 1865 General Slocum resumed his law practice in Syracuse. He was democratic candidate for secretary of state, and in 1868 was elected to congress, and re-elected in 1870. In 1884 he was again elected to congress. His name was brought forward at the national democratic conventions of 1888 and 1892.

No Dispensary Decision Yet.

A Columbia, S. C., dispatch says: Contrary to expectations the supreme court did not render a decision Saturday in the case to test the constitutionality of the dispensary law. The court met at 11 o'clock, and after some minor business was transacted the November term of court was adjourned. The law requires that the supreme court shall render its decision upon any matter heard before it within sixty days after adjournment of the term in which the case was heard.

THE RULE PASSED

AND MEMBERS PRESENT AND NOT VOTING TO BE COUNTED.

The Adoption of the New Plan by a Vote of 212 to 47.

The house, by a vote of 212 to 47, adopted the rule submitted by the committee for counting a quorum, at Tuesday's session. The forty-seven votes represent democrats who have not forgotten the scenes or their positions in the fifty-first congress, when Tom Reed held the reins. The scenes attendant upon the adoption of the rule were interesting and spirited. The republicans gave the committee on rules all the assistance possible. In the fifteen minutes allowed them for discussion, Mr. Reed only reserved three for himself and contented himself almost solely with the statement: "I congratulate the fifty-third congress for its vindication of the fifty-first." Mr. Reed also gave three minutes each to Buck Kilgore, Amos Cummings and Ben Russell, of Georgia. All three attacked the rule. Ben Russell attacked it as revolutionary and a return to czar rule. He also declared his belief that the rule was unconstitutional and that oftentimes it was the highest duty of a representative to decline to vote if he could thereby prevent vicious legislation being saddled on his constituents. He spoke with great earnestness, and added to his reputation as a forceful speaker. The democrats who spoke in favor of the rule were warmly applauded by the republicans. There were a number of votes cast for the rule under protest on the democratic side.

7,000 MINERS OUT.

The Strike in Alabama Growing Very Serious.

Monday's developments in the miners' strike in Alabama show that every mine in the Birmingham district except those at Warrior and in Tuscaloosa and Walker county, is shut down. Fully 7,000 men are out. No attempt has been made to put in negro labor at the Blue Creek mines, where trouble is threatened. Armed deputy sheriffs were on hand, but the negroes refused to work, fearing violence from the strikers. The strike is growing, and the situation is becoming more serious.

THE SITUATION IN TENNESSEE.

A Knoxville special says: James R. Wooldridge, of the Wooldridge Jellico Coal company. Speaking of the general strike of coal miners which has been ordered on the 21st by the United Mine Workers of America, says that all the miners of district No. 19, of which the Jellico district is a portion, have signaled their intention to strike.

Work has been very light in the district the past season, and the indications are that they will not be able to hold out long without assistance, but it is more than likely that the strike will remain on until August 1st. The Jellico district is now paying the highest prices in the United States, and any result will necessarily be beneficial to the operators.

A convention of the operators and miners of the district has been called to meet at Jellico on the 26th to consider a new contract. The supply of coal for the southern states will not be entirely cut off, as the Tennessee, Coal Iron and Railroad Company have about 2,000 convicts digging for them in Alabama and Tennessee. Unless the organized men use violent methods to close these mines, the strike will prove a bonanza to the lessees of convicts, as it will be the only company in the United States to operate its mines.

REORGANIZING THE MILITARY.

Governor Tillman Wants Men Who Will Obey Him.

A Columbia, S. C. special says: Governor Tillman has begun to dismiss from the military service of the state those companies which failed to respond to his call during the Darlington trouble. He has written a letter to the captain of one of the companies which failed to respond, telling him that he did not want such "recreant sons of South Carolina" in her military service. The reorganization of the militia of the state is going on speedily. Many new companies, who will in the future be loyal to the commander-in-chief, have been organized and asked to be mustered into service.

The Movement Is Now On Between Port Royal and Liverpool.

A representative delegation of merchants and manufactures from Atlanta and Augusta spent a day at Port Royal inspecting the wharves, warehouses and loading vessels. The Mexican, which will sail from Liverpool Monday is the twelfth ship, and the cargo for the next, which will sail ten days later, is already there. Eighty-one thousand bales of cotton, besides train loads of corn and flour, and thousands of tons of phosphate rock have been hauled.

Beauty's Varieties.

The French say there are several "ages" as well as kinds of beauty—the beauty of mere youthfulness, which they call la beaute du diable; also a beauty of "ugliness," of "old age" and of "thinness," called la beaute du singe. Frederika Bremer, the Swedish novelist, had the beauty of "plainness." She was so very plain of face that her expression of trustfulness, as though appealing to you to find some other qualities in her than mere "looks," shone out with a perfect radiance that ennobled her face and drew friends to her because she had no other beauty. But Miss Bremer took pleasure in her well-kept hands, of which she used to say, "Even hands have their moments" of charm.

THE last words of John B. Gough were, "Young man keep your record clean." No better motto can be adopted by a young man who is ambitious to make the most of his life and its opportunities.

A Columbia, S. C., special says: The supreme court played a sort of April fool joke, Tuesday, on the spectators who assembled to listen to an expected delivery on the dispensary law. It was quite a disappointment, when, after asking if there were any motions to be made and receiving no reply, Chief Justice McIver observed calmly, "the court will then take a recess until Saturday next at 11 o'clock."

The Norwegian steamship Sunniva, arrived at Mobile, Ala., with a cargo of 18,000 bunches of bananas. The Sunniva also brought as a passenger Mr. Theodore Boekman, a well-to-do planter of Rama, who was seen by the Southern Associated Press correspondent as to the state of affairs in Nicaragua, and from him was learned the detailed account of the killing of the Americans at Rama some two weeks ago.

The Hamilton County (Tenn.,) Retail Brewers' Association met in monthly session at Chattanooga and passed strong condemnatory resolutions on the market house ordinance recently enacted by the city council. The ordinance prohibits hucksters peddling on the streets during morning hours. The growers denounced this as "class legislation and coercion" and voted to stand by any member of the association who violated the ordinance.

A jail delivery has occurred at Jasper, Tenn., and among the prisoners that escaped were the two Kennedy brothers, who murdered Lowry, the telegraph operator, at Shell Mound. "General" Kennedy was recaptured, however, after a hot pursuit with hounds. The dogs are now on the trail of his brother, John. John is familiar with the mountain fastnesses of that region. He is a very desperate man, and he may have to be killed before he can be taken.

Receiver Comer, of the Central railroad of Georgia, has filed a supplemental report showing the earnings and expenses of the steamship companies between March 4, 1894, and December 31, 1893. The Ocean Steamship Company's New York line for the six months ending December 31, 1893, earned $680,756.18, of which $72,788.71 is net. The Philadelphia line shows a deficit of $16,510.67 and the Boston line a deficit of $50,636.66. The wharf property netted in the same time $38,119.56.

A Chattanooga dispatch says: Rev. Charles W. Lewis, the monumental negro pension fraud and imposter, has been sentenced by United States District Judge Key to twenty-eight years in the Kings county, New York, federal prison. The cases that could be made against him run into the hundreds, but only fourteen counts were returned, most of the Kansas City charges being barred by the statute of limitation. These fourteen were selected as test cases, which, if won, would send him up for the rest of his natural life.

FIREMEN KILLED.

DAVIDSON'S THEATRE AT MILWAUKEE, WIS., BURNED

And Ten Unfortunate Firemen Hurled to Their Death.

The Davidson theatre and hotel at Milwaukee, Wis., was destroyed by fire Monday morning and ten firemen lost their lives. The structure is valued at $300,000. The alarm was promptly responded to, but not until the roof was a sheet of flames. Immediately on the arrival of the firemen ladders were run up and the men rushed up on the roof, which is six stories from the ground. In doing so Allie Reese, one of the men, slipped and fell to the ground, being killed by the fall.

All the men from engine house No. 4 were directed to the rear platform portion of the roof, right over the stage, where the fire was doing its worst. These firemen and others took their stations and began work, when, without warning, the roof under them gave way, precipitating nine of the eighty men below into the fire on the stage of the theater, all of whom were either killed by the fall or burned or suffocated to death.

The correct list of the dead are as follows: Third assistant chief, August Jansen; Frank McGurk, lieutenant truck company No. 4, acting captain; Fred Krosschmuer, fireman chemical engine No. 2; Captain Archie Campbell, of Fire boat Foley; Allie Reese, company No. 3, killed by falling from ladder; James C. Freeman, lieutenant company No. 4.

A man was crushed beyond recognition and found in the balcony of the theatre.

GROWTH OF THE SOUTH.

The Industrial Situation as Reported for the Past Week.

The review of the industrial situation in the South for the past week shows that the farmers are actively engaged in preparing fields in which crops were injured by the recent cold weather. Time enough has elapsed to show that the injury was very extensive, although not so great as was at first anticipated. The fact that it was so great indicates that the industry of growing early crops for Northern markets is now one of the largest and most profitable branches of Southern agriculture. It is steadily increasing wherever railroad facilities are available.

The iron market is a little firmer, with no increase in the output. A review of the year shows that the coal miners have fallen but little behind the average in their outputs but have sold on a narrower margin. There is more activity in the lumber markets and stocks are drawing down. Mercantile business is improving steadily, collections are good, and money is in fair supply at reasonable rates.

For the week new industries were established or incorporated during the week, together with six enlargements of manufactories and eighteen important new buildings. The following are among the important new industries of the week: The Duddy Lumber Manufacturing Co of Parkesburg, W Va., capital $100,000; the Acme Brick Co., of Louisville, Ky., capital $50,000; the American Improvement Manufacturing Co., of Houston, Texas, capital $50,000; the Paris Compress and Warehouse Co., capital $50,000, of Paris, Texas, the sandstone Boom and Manufacturing Co., of Hinton, W Va., capital $50,000, and a $27,000 brick plant at Birmingham, Ala.

Brick works are reported at Magnolia, Ark., and Alexandria, Va.; an elevator for coal at Mobile, Ala.; a cigar factory at Greensboro, N. C.; cotton mills at Athens, Ga., Concord, N. C., Hampton Court House and Greenville, S. C. A large grain elevator is reported at Mobile, Ala.; flouring mills at Jett, Ky., and Shelbyville Tenn.; foundries and machine shops at Morristown, Tenn., and Pulaski, Va.; a match factory at Atlanta, Ga., and cotton seed oil mills at Hope, Ark., and Gatesville, Texas. A shoe factory is to be built at Norfolk, Va., and a sugar refinery at Perry, La. The new wood working plants reported for the week are at Lewiston, Dunham and Hilton, Ala., Carbondale, Fla., Cordele and Columbus, Ga., Frankfort, Ky., Bay St. Louis, West Point and Hattiesburg, Miss., Greenville, Hampton, C. Hand Summerton, S. C., Nebo and Pinewood, Tenn., and Parkersburg, W. Va.

Among the new buildings of the week are an asylum to cost $36,000 at Jackson, La., an $80,000 church at Mobile, Ala., a $5,000 one at Jackson Miss., and one to cost $10,000 at Valdosta, Ga., a $10,000 residence at Charleston, S. C., and two $10,000 school buildings at Hearne, Tex.—Trade-man (Chattanooga, Tenn.)

Modified the Injunction.

A Milwaukee dispatch says: Judge Jenkins has modified his injunction order against the striking employes of the Northern Pacific railroad by striking out the clause, "and from ordering, recommending, approving or advising others to quit the service of the receivers of the Northern Pacific on January 1, 1894, or at any other time." In all other respects the the judge denies the motion of the men.

Strike Ordered.

A special from Columbus, Ohio, says: The United Mine Workers of America have ordered a general strike on April the 21st.

NATIONAL CAPITAL.

WHAT IS GOING ON AT UNCLE SAM'S HEADQUARTERS.

Comment Concerning Transactions in the Various Departments.

The house committee on agriculture has perfected the Hatch anti-option bill and directed Mr. Hatch to report it to the house favorably. The vote on the bill was 12 to 2.

It is understood that Secretary Gresham, who has been confined to his apartments with a bad cold for several days, contemplates spending several days at Chickamauga battle field before the end of this month. As soon as the Behring sea and Mosquito matters are settled it is possible that Mr. Gresham will make quite a southern tour, lasting about two weeks.

The president sent to the senate Monday the following nominations: Edward H. Strobel, New York, envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to Ecuador; William W. Rockhill, Maryland, to be third assistant secretary of state, vice Edward H. Strobel. Postmasters—Mississippi, John D. Bills, at Corinth; Virginia, Robert G. Howerton, at West Point.

Senator Hill's speech is still the talk of almost every one at Washington. The democrats are all indignant at the threats he made, but all declare it to be as strong an argument against the income tax as could be made. They, of course, admire a bold, fearless man, but they think Mr. Hill made a mistake in the threats he indulged in. The speech without them would have been more effective.

It is stated upon good authority that the Earl of Kimberley's explanation of the situation given to United States Embassador Bayard, at an interview, concerning the carrying out of the findings of the Behring sea court of arbitration, were entirely satisfactory. A bill giving legal operations to the provisions of the court's findings will be presented to parliament and every effort be made to expedite its passage.

A bill was introduced in the house Saturday which exactly falls in with statements made by well informed treasury officials as to a projected administration measure combining authority to issue 3 per cent. bonds and to protect the gold reserve and to proceed with the coinage of the silver seigniorage. The secretary of the treasury is authorized by section 2 to issue and sell bonds of the character and description mentioned at not less than par, in coin, and apply the proceeds thereof to the redemption of the ten-year 5 per cent. bonds now outstanding.

Wednesday the house committee on interstate and foreign commerce heard Representative Grosvenor of Ohio, in support of his resolution directing the committee to investigate the legality of the action of Governor Tillman, of South Carolina, in the seizing the telegraph lines of South Carolina during the recent disturbance there, and preventing the transmission of press dispatches. Grosvenor said that under the statute and decision of the supreme court of the United States telegraph dispatches were subject to interstate commerce law, and that states had no authority to interfere with them.

L. H. Campbell, of counsel for commissioner of patients has filed in the supreme court of the United States a motion to dismiss the appeal of the state of South Carolina from the judgment of the court of appeals for the District of Columbia in what is known as the Palmetto trademark case. The motion is based on the ground of a lack of jurisdiction. Governor Tillman appealed to the commissioner of patents for a registration of the trademark "Palmetto," to be applied to intoxicating liquors sold under the dispensary law of South Carolina. The application was refused by the commissioner of patents and his action sustained by the court of appeals.

Senator Walsh Sworn In.

Mr. Patrick Walsh, of Georgia, was made a United States senator before crowded galleries Monday morning. The new senator held an informal reception in the vice president's and the democratic cloak rooms, and every senator had shaken hands with him before the chaplain had finished his prayer. It was just five minutes past twelve when General Gordon sent the new senator's commission to the clerk to be read. When this was done the two Georgia senators walked arm in arm to the vice-president's desk and Mr. Stevenson administered the oath of office. Mr. Walsh wore a sprig of violets in his new black Prince Albert, and, with his iron-gray hair brushed tumblingly back from his massive brow, made a striking picture standing before the vice-president with right hand up swearing an allegiance to the constitution of his country. While the new senator was inscribing his name on the senate roll Mr. Hoar, of Massachusetts interposed an objection to the form of his credentials. They were not addressed to the senate. "The State authorities," he said, "should conform to the customs of the senate. These credentials are not properly made out. A while ago a form was prepared and sent to the various executives, and it does seem to me that they might take the trouble to address the new credentials to the senate in the proper and formal way. However, I make no formal objection. I only wish to call attention to the error." The first man to shake hands with the new senator was Dr. Milburn, the blind chaplain.

DA GAMA GETS AWAY.

Advices from Buenos Ayres state that the insurgent Admiral da Gama has made his escape from the Portuguese warship Mindello and has arrived at the Buenos Ayres quarantine station. The Portuguese sailors made no resistance to his leaving the warship.

Admiral da Gama, with a number of his officers, was confined on board the Mindello awaiting the arrival of the steamer Angois, which sailed from Lisbon April 4th, to convey him and his followers to Portugal, the remainder of his staff being similarly held on board of the Almeo de Albuquerque.

THE SQUIRE'S EXPERIENCE.

HOW SQUIRE WEBB, OF WEST VIRGINIA, CONQUERED AN ATTACK OF "NERVOUSNESS."

His Case Baffled Physicians—Almost a Physical Wreck—Cured at Last.

(Baptist Banner, Huntington, West Va.)

St. Albans is one of the busiest little towns along the line of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway in West Virginia. Its situation on the Kanawha and at the mouth of Coal River makes it a very desirable shipping point for timber.

Some days ago a representative of the Baptist Banner was compelled to spend a few hours here, between trains. After viewing the magnificent scenery of the Kanawha Valley he took occasion to have a chat with some of the prominent business men of the place.

The reporter called on magistrate S. L. Webb at his office, and heard him relate the following strange but interesting story in regard to himself. The Squire, by the way, is a handsome, intelligent man, about forty years of age, possessing a large amount of that fascinating "Old Virginia" culture, and withal a prominent and influential man in political and business circles along the Kanawha River.

"I was affected for ten or twelve years with a troublesome case of 'nervousness,' as I call it. (I don't know or care what the medical name is.) It was the result of indigestion and some kind of stomach trouble. I had also—since our troubles never come singly—a chronic bowel complaint, at the same time painful and unhandy. I had to give up my work almost entirely and was rapidly becoming a physical wreck, at the period when I should have been most strong and vigorous. I tried every kind of medicine that I could find without avail. A prominent doctor of Charleston, now deceased, spent a great deal of skill and time on my case without accomplishing any good results. Finally my mother induced me to try just one more treatment. She had used a medicine known as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills with great benefit, and she persuaded me to try a box. That was in January, 1893. I was down at Mr. C. E. Griffith's store that day, and he and I weighed ourselves on his scales. I weighed but 140 pounds. From that day I began to improve. The first thing I noticed was my appetite. I wanted to eat all the time. Then my clothes got too tight for me, and actually when I weighed the other day on the very same scale my weight was 167½ pounds. Now I am a new man, and just now came from a picnic, where I have been romping around and having a big time. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills did the work for me."

Squire Webb is such an enthusiast that he has his office ornamented with all the Dr. Williams advertisements that he can find and spends his extra time, between cases, in telling people about his remarkable cure and about the pills. He is an influential member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

The reporter next visited Mr. C. E. Griffith, at his store on Main street. He said: "Squire Webb is certainly a new man since he began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. He used to be thin and nervous, but now he is healthy and robust, and is in every way a noble specimen of manhood. I have been taking some of the pills for the after effects of the la grippe, and they have been of great benefit to me. Just the other day I sent for some more, and I am going to keep them on hand. All that Mr. Webb has told you about his condition and cure is true, to my personal knowledge."

Squire Webb said on parting with the scribe, that he had made a solemn vow with himself to do all in his power to get people to use the medicine that had cured him. The Baptist Banner is glad at any time to find such ready testimonials to the efficacy of that reliable medicine, so listened with a good deal of satisfaction to the story of Squire Webb.

An analysis of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills shows that they contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effects of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, and all forms of weakness either in male or female. Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price (50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50—they are never sold in bulk or by the 100) by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y., or Brockville, Ontario.

The World of Workers.

The single woman who chooses her occupation wisely, or who, compelled for a time to engage in something that is not congenial, gradually wins her way to one that suits her taste, has one of the best possible prospects of a happy life. She knows nothing about killing time. Every hour dies a natural death, and she hardly has leisure to remember that it existed. Her occupation becomes her inspiration. She loves it and delights in growing with it and making it and herself honored factors in the life of the city or town where she dwells. Success commands respect. Whether she be a wise physician, gifted writer or experienced dressmaker, she finds herself sought out and her friends increasing. The world of workers, if they be honest, whole souled faithful workers, is always a happy world.—Boston Herald.

Weather Bracelets.

The well known effect in lessening or in increasing the temperature of the body by cooling or warming the wrists has been applied by a Philadelphia woman in an ornamental way. In winter she wears an inch-wide strip of asbestos, a noted nonconductor of heat, folded in gold embossed velvet and buckled with a jeweled loop. For summer use her pulse coolers are spheroids of rose quartz about an inch in diameter, linked together with filigree silver, these possessing to a marked degree the quality of absorbing cold. The woman claims proof against suffering from weather variations while thus braceleted.

IF every man in the country would strictly prohibit himself from drinking there would be no need of a prohibition party.

Mary Magdalene's Grave.

Fifteen thousand pilgrims annually visit St. Baume, in Provence, not far from Marseilles, where Mary Magdalene is said to have spent the last thirty years of her life.

The legend, according to the Nouvelle Revue, runs that Mary Magdalene and from Judsea in a small boat with Lazarus, Martha, the two Marys and Salome, bringing with them the body of St. Anne, the head of St. James the Less and a few wee bones of the innocents massacred by King Herod. But from other ages this story has been disputed, and the Abbe Duchesne, one of the most erudite writers on the early Christian saints and martyrs, considers that the relics of Mary Magdalene were probably sent from Constantinople about the seventh century. A Greek breviary, however, speaks of the saint as having died at Ephesus.—New York Recorder.

It will, perhaps, require a little stretch of the imagination on the part of the reader to recognize the fact that the two portraits at the head of this article are of the same individual; and yet they are truthful sketches made from photographs, taken only a few months apart, of a very much esteemed citizen of Illinois—Mr. C. H. Harris, whose address is No. 1,622 Second Avenue, Rock Island, Ill. The following extract from a letter written by Mr. Harris explains the marvelous change in his personal appearance. He writes: "Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery saved my life and has made me a man. My home physician says I am good for forty years yet. You will remember that I was just between life and death, and all of my friends were sure it was a case of death, until I commenced taking a second bottle of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' when I became able to sit up and the cough was very much better, and the bleeding from my lungs stopped, and before I had taken six bottles of the 'Golden Medical Discovery' my cough ceased and I was a new man and ready for business.

I now feel that it is a duty that I owe to my fellow-men to recommend to them the 'Golden Medical Discovery' which saved my life when doctors and all other medicines failed to do me any good.

I send to you with this letter two of my photographs; one taken a few weeks before I was taken down sick in bed, and the other was taken after I was well." These two photographs are faithfully re-produced at the head of this article.

Mr. Harris's experience in the use of "Golden Medical Discovery" is not an exceptional one. Thousands of eminent people in all parts of the world testify, in just as emphatic language, to its marvelous curative powers over all chronic bronchial, throat and lung diseases, chronic nasal catarrh, asthma, and kindred diseases.

Eminent physicians prescribe "Golden Medical Discovery" when any of their dear ones' lives are imperilled by that dread disease, Consumption. Under such circumstances only the most reliable remedy would be depended upon. The following letter is to the point. It is from an eminent physician of Stamps, Lafayette Co., Ark. He says: "Consumption is hereditary in my wife's family; some have already died with the disease. My wife has a sister, Mrs. E. A. Cleary, that was taken with consumption. She used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and, to the surprise of her many friends, she got well. My wife has also had hemorrhages from the lungs, and her sister insisted on her using the 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I consented to her using it, and it cured her. She has had no symptoms of consumption for the past six years. Feeling that having this disease can take no better remedy."

Yours very truly,
W. C. Rogers, M. D.

From the Buckeye State comes the following: "I was pronounced to have consumption by two of our best doctors. I spent nearly $300, and was no better. I concluded to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I bought and used eight bottles and I can now say with truth that I feel just as well to-day as I did at twenty-five, and can do as good a day's work on the farm, although I had not done any work for several years."

Truly, your friend,
William Dulaney

Mr. Dulaney's address is Campbell, Ohio.

"I had catarrh in the head for years and trouble with my left lung at the same time. You put so much faith in your remedies that I concluded to try one bottle or two, and derived much benefit therefrom. I used three bottles of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy and five bottles of your "Golden Medical Discovery," and in four months I was myself again. I could not sleep on my left side, and now can sleep and eat heartily. So long as I have your medicines on hand I have no need of a doctor; I do not think my house in order without them. Yours truly,
A. H. Sears

If it would be any more convincing, I could easily fill the columns of this paper with letters testifying to the cure of the severest diseases of the throat, bronchia and lungs by the use of "Golden Medical Discovery." To build up solid flesh and strength after la grip, pneumonia, ("lung fever"), exhausting fevers, and other prostrating diseases, it has no equal. It does not make fat like cod liver oil and its nasty compounds, but solid, which is some flesh.

The Arval Dinner.

The arval dinner appears to be an ancient custom. This was properly a solemn festival on the day of interment and when the corpse was exposed to view. The relatives and friends were invited to attend, so that having inspected the body they might vouch that the death was a natural one, and thus exculpate the heir and all others entitled to the deceased's possessions from accusations of having used violence.—Westminster Gazette.

CRUDE MILITARY SCIENCE.

Cadet—"The savage nations have very crude ideas of military science."

His Girl—"Yes, indeed! Why, I noticed even so many of them at the ball, and they all danced so awkwardly."—Puck.

SOME TO BE ONE OR THE OTHER.

"How are things going with you, dear?"

"Pretty slowly," replied the young man. "I'm waiting to see which'll be broke, myself or my uncle's will."—Washington Star.

A PRACTICAL ASPECT.

Spencer—"I don't see how you can afford to marry with your expensive tastes. You only have five thousand a year."

Ferguson—"Well, my fiancee has the same amount. That will just double my income."—Puck.

GROUNDS FOR SUSPICION.

Myrtle—"How long after Nettie married him did she begin to suspect that he was not a real gentleman?"

Laurie—"It was when she noticed that although two weeks had elapsed he was still treating her with kindness and civility."—Chicago Record.

LOVE PATS.

Miss Philo (sweetly)—"I can remember when you made your debut, dear, years and years ago."

Miss Chestique (more sweetly)—"How thoughtful you are! Now, I couldn't begin to remember when you made yours."—Chicago Record.

A CLEAR LOSS.

Penfield—"The latest story of mine is the best thing I ever turned out. I read it over I'm surprised at its merit, and don't know how I ever did it."

Quizzer—"That's a pity. You'll be sure to write an article on how it was written."—Puck.

HIS BELIEF.

"Woman never gets over her fondness for embellishment," remarked the philosopher.

"I don't know about that," replied Miss Cayenne. "I have seen women who might very little of anything except sentimental matters."

"Perhaps. But even then their opinions were biased."—Washington Star.

LOSS HIS FOOT

Smith—Mr. Softleigh, I hear you say that my father was a robber."

Softleigh—He kicked me out the last time I called on you."

That doesn't justify you in calling him a robber."

I didn't call him a robber, I said he was a freebooter!"—Raymond's Monthly.

A DISINTERESTED BUSINESS TIP.

Mrs. Hyflye—"George, dear, while we are having money troubles I ought to tell you that I learned to-day why our rival Soakem's credit has suddenly become so good."

Mr. Hyflye—"Why?"

Mrs Hyflye—"I overheard some one remark that Soakem's finances must be all right because his wife was wearing such elegant new hats and dresses."—Chicago Record

TRYING TO ESCAPE.

"There!" said the young wife loudly, as she deposited the hot plate carefully on the table. "That's the best mince pie that I ever made without any help, all alone myself."

"So it is!" exclaimed her husband enthusiastically, looking it over critically meanwhile. "And as long as it is the very first, my dear, don't you think that, instead of cutting it, it would be nice to keep it for a souvenir? How would it do to have it framed?"—Somerville Journal.

WHY IT FAILED.

"My dear," said Mr. Finnicky, "I don't think those pills I have been taking have done me much good."

"Why, you haven't taken any for three weeks!"

"Yes, I have; I've swallowed one three times a day, as directed."

"You have? Then why is it that there are as many left as there were three weeks ago? What box have you been taking them from?"

"This one—marked for me."

"Dear me, John! That is my shoe-button box!"—Harper's Bazar.

AN HONEST DEALER.

A country gentleman was being pestered by an umbrella hawker, and in order to get rid of him he purchased one of his umbrellas for the sum of two marks. After paying the money he tapped the man on the shoulder and laughingly inquired:

"Now, tell me candidly, how long do you suppose the thing will really last?"

The hawker cast a wistful glance at the clear sky, and frankly replied:

"If this sort of weather continued, Herr Baron, I'll guarantee the umbrella to hold out at least six or eight weeks."—Localanzeiger.

THEN HE LEFT.

Several municipal councilors of a large Swabian town had been indulging their humorous faculties at the expense of an honest fellow burgess who was noted for his rough-and-ready manners, and it seemed as though they intended at all hazards to make him the butt of their wit and ridicule for the rest of the evening. This was more than our worthy citizen could stand. He, therefore, emptied his glass and took his departure, not, however, without giving the councilors a riddle to solve.

"Well, now, gentlemen, as you make yourselves out to be the cleverest people in the world, just tell me the difference between a horse and a donkey."

The city fathers thought the matter over at considerable length. One replied:

"A horse has short ears; a donkey long ones."

Other answers followed from the rest.

"All wrong, said the problem maker. When pressed for the correct answer, he replied:

"A horse has never found its way into the Council Chamber, but—good night, gentlemen!"

So saying he left the company of his abashed tormentors.

PARENTAL FEARS GROUNDLESS.

"Mabel, my child, come here."

There was a world of tenderness in the father's tone and manner as he caressed the dark brown wavy hair of the petted daughter who came in answer to his summons and sat on a low stool at his feet.

"You have always found me willing to make any reasonable sacrifice for your comfort and happiness, have you not, my daughter?"

"Yes, papa."

"Your home is not an unhappy one, is it?"

"Oh, no!"

"You would not turn your back upon it unless your calm and deliberate judgment seconded the impulse of your heart, would you, my child?"

"Why, papa, what is—"

"Pardon me, dear, but the time has come when I must speak of a matter that concerns me greatly because it concerns you. I have observed a growing inclination on the part of young Mr. Spoonamore to seek your society. Now, while Mr. Spoonamore is a harmless and well-meaning young man, against whom nothing can be said on the score of personal character, disposition or family connection, he is hardly the sort of man I should select as a fitting mate for you, Mabel. He is not your equal intellectually. You must have discovered that. To encourage him, my child, would be an act of coquetry to which I hope you could not bring yourself. I think it best to speak of this now because he may presume upon his acquaintance with you to hint at a nearer tie—"

"He—he has done so already, papa."

"Then my admonition has come too late?"

"Why—he asked me last night to marry him."

"And you, Mabel!" exclaimed the father, with an anxious tremor in his voice. "Can it be possible that you—"

"Don't be uneasy, papa," replied the girl. "I turned him down in great shape!"—Chicago Tribune.

Hours of Dining.

The hours of dining and the time of retiring at night have, it would appear, been undergoing a constant change in England as well as in other countries in the course of the last few hundred years. The fashionables of Edward IV.'s court rose with the lark, despatched their dinner at 11 o'clock, and shortly after 8 were wrapped in slumber. In the Northumberland House Book for 1512 it is set forth that the family rose at 6 in the morning, breakfasted at 7, dined at 10 and supped at 4 in the afternoon. The gates were all shut at 9, and no further ingress or egress permitted. In 1570, at the University of Oxford, it was usual to dine at 11 o'clock and sup at 5 in the afternoon. The dinner hour, which was once so early as 10 o'clock, has gradually got later and later, until now it would be though the excess of vulgarity in the fashionable world to sit down to table earlier than 6.30 o'clock, while others extend it to 9 or 10.—New York Sun.

Seattle, Washington, was so called after a powerful Indian chief of the neighborhood.

A brick, three-story building at Memphis collapsed and four persons were killed and five wounded. There are believed to be two others in the ruins. All the killed, injured and missing are negro laborers. The building was built in 1860 and was regarded as unsafe because of the inferior material used in its construction.

At all the mines in Jellico, Tenn., district notices have been posted to the effect that on May 1st wages will be reduced at least 20 per cent. In the fifteen or eighteen mines about 1,500 men will be involved and they will doubtless strike. Throughout the whole coal field a huge strike is expected on May 1st. It will involve in the East Tennessee valley at least 4,000 men.

A report comes from Murphy, N. C., of the finding of a gold nugget on Brasstown creek that measured 1x2 inches in size. The Tennessee democratic state executive committee met at Knoxville. The chairman was authorized to appoint a finance committee of five or more. John W. Childress, of Davidson, was elected treasurer. T. Houston. Rodgers was discharged. The other four waived examination and were placed under a bond of $1,000 each for their appearance at the next term of the circuit court at Columbia.

The arguments in the Packwood murder case were begun at Tavares, Fla., Tuesday. There is no time limit on the speeches and it will probably be two or three days before the jury retires to reach a verdict. It is rumored that John B. Verona and Mrs. Popleton, whom the state depended on to clinch the case against the accused men, have been paid to leave Florida. At any rate these two witnesses could not be found and the lawyers for the prosecution say their evidence was most important.

A special from Tampa, Fla., says: The United States government has begun war on the Honduras (the old Louisiana) lottery company in earnest. Since the establishment of the Graham printery, at Port Tampa City, and a steamer put on between that port and the Honduras end of the old Louisiana lottery business, the lottery company has kept aboard of this vessel a lot of printing presses and material. The object was to provide against any revolution that might arise in Honduras, or, possibly, any unfavorable turn as regards the legal status of their business in this country.

In the United States court at Savannah argument was heard on the intervention of the Western Union telegraph against the Central railroad. The master reported allowing the Western Union compensation for messages sent under the contract between July 31, 1889, and July 1, 1891, the time the Central was leased to the Georgia Pacific. The amount is about $3,000 for telegrams sent according to the contract with the Central during the time of the lease up to March 4, 1892. Judge Speer held that the contract was made between the Western Union and the Central was not affected by the lease to the Georgia Pacific.

ZEB VANCE DEAD.

NORTH CAROLINA'S JUNIOR SENATOR DIES UNEXPECTEDLY.

For Years He Was a Conspicuous Figure in Public Life.

Senator Zebulon B. Vance, of North Carolina, died at his residence in Washington Saturday night from an apoplectic stroke. The senator had not been in good health for the past year, and in the early part of the session of congress was compelled to abandon his senatorial duties and take a trip to Florida in the hope of recuperating. His trip proved beneficial and on his return to Washington he was able for a while to partially resume his official duties. His improvement, however, did not continue long and for the last few weeks he has been confined to his bed. He was practically an invalid, but lately has been able to receive a few intimate friends and superintend the looking after the interest of his constituents. During the past week he has been reported as doing well as could be expected and the serious change for the worse was wholly unexpected.

Shortly before 11 o'clock Saturday morning he had an attack of apoplexy and became unconscious; regaining consciousness only a few minutes before his death.

SKETCH OF HIS LIFE.

Zebulon B. Nance, of Charlotte, was born in Buncombe county, North Carolina, May 13, 1830; was educated at Washington college, Tennessee, and at the University of North Carolina, studied law, was admitted to the bar in January, 1852, and was elected county attorney for Buncombe county the same year; was a member of the state house of commons in 1854; was a representative from North Carolina in the thirty-fifth and thirty-sixth congresses; entered the confederate army as captain in May, 1861, and was made colonel in August, 1864; was elected governor of North Carolina in August, 1862, and re-elected in August, 1864; was elected to the United States senate in November, 1870, but was refused admission, and resigned in January, 1873; was the democratic nominee for the United States senate in 1872, but was defeated by a combination of bolting democrats and republicans; was elected governor of North Carolina for the third time in 1876; was elected to the United States senate as a democrat in place of A. S. Merrimon, democrat; took his seat March 18, 1879; and was re-elected in 1884 and 1890. His term expires March 3, 1897.

DAVID DUDLEY FIELD DEAD.

He Was a Distinguished Author and Jurist.

David Dudley Field died suddenly at his home in New York of pneumonia. He was born in Hadden, Conn., February 13, 1805, and was the eldest of four brothers—Henry M., Cyrus W. and Stephen being the other three—all of whom have achieved distinction. David was graduated from Williams college in 1825, and was admitted to the bar in New York city in 1828. He early became prominent, and, after eleven years' practice, wrote a letter on "The Reform of the Judiciary System," which he followed up later with a pamphlet on the same line. The result of this agitation was that the constitutional convention of 1846 recommended a general code and a reform of the practice on the line of his suggestions.

In 1866, Mr. Field undertook the prepation of an international code, which he presented to the social science congress after seven years' work. This work attracted the attention of the jurists of the world, and was translated into several tongues. Mr. Field was originally a democrat, until the nomination of Fremont in 1856, when he supported that ticket. During 1876 he served two months in congress, filling the unexpired term of Smith Ely. From that time on he acted with the democrats, and was on that side in the Hayes-Tilden contest. Mr. Field has published a number of works of high literary value besides his great lawbooks, on which however, his fame chiefly rests. He has lived for several years at 22 Gramercy park, enjoying remarkable health and vigor up to the time of his death.

Big Blaze at Buffalo.

The American glucose works, at Buffalo, N. Y., the largest of the kind in the country, have been destroyed by fire. Several firemen were injured and taken to the hospitals. It is rumored that some of the employes of the works were caught by the flames and burned to death. The total loss is about $1,200,000, on which there is an insurance of about $500,000.

"O. N. T." Clark Dead.

A cable dispatch has been received at New York announcing the death of John Clark, the senior member of the firm of Clark & Co., manufacturers of Clark's O. N. T. spool cotton, in his 67th year.

NATIONAL CAPITAL.

WHAT IS GOING ON AT UNCLE SAM'S HEADQUARTERS.

Comment Concerning Transactions in the Various Departments.

Senator Morrill, of Vermont, reached his 84th year Saturday and was congratulated by a number of senators from both sides of the chamber.

Among the actions of the court at Washington in the Central litigation not reported was an order passed at the request of the operation of the property monthly instead of quarterly, as they are required to do at present.

The hearing in chambers before Associate Justice White, of the supreme court, in the Georgia Central and Savannah and Western litigation proceedings was concluded at Washington Monday. Justice White reserved his decision.

The president Wednesday nominated to be postmasters: Georgia—Chas. R. Pendleton, Valdosta, Tennessee—Isaac B. Williams, Paris. Also, Commodore Joseph Skerrett to be rear admiral; Captain Joseph N. Miller to be commodore.

W. C. P. Breckenridge appeared on the floor of the house Monday morning. He was shunned by the great mass of members, though a few shook his hand as he passed among them. No demonstration of any kind was made. It is probable that he will go to Kentucky at once to begin his canvass for re-election.

The conferees of the two houses on the urgent deficiency bill met Wednesday morning and came to an agreement on practically all the items in the bill. The Senate added $700,000 to this bill, but as all the items are in the nature of court expenses and absolutely necessary, the house conferees will agree to them.

It is said among the North Carolina delegation at Washington that Governor Carr will appoint either Congressman Henderson or Alexander to succeed Senator Vance. Personally the governor will be inclined towards Mr. Alexander, who represents the Charlotte district. They are close, personal friends and Governor Carr succeeded Mr. Alexander as president of the North Carolina Farmers' Alliance several years ago.

Mr. Swanson, of Virginia, who has been making a poll of the democrats of the house relative to a bill repealing the 10 per cent bank tax, says that 121 democrats favored unconditional repeal, thirty-seven expressed themselves for repeal with safe restrictions, thirty-one are opposed to any measure, believing only in the extension of a national banking system, while of the remaining democrats, some have no opinion upon the subject and the rest are absent from the city.

The verdict of $15,000 damages against Breckinridge in the Pollard-Breckinridge case was a surprise to Washington. Almost every one expected the jury to fail to agree. Breckinridge may appeal. His friends say he will not resume his duties in the house of representatives at present. He fears that his colleagues will snub him or show their contempt for him in in some manner. It is said that he will go to Kentucky immediately and begin stumping his district for re-election.

Senator Walsh, of Georgia, offered his first bill in the senate Saturday. It was a bill to effect a minor reform in the judiciary. A resolution offered by Mr. Quay, to give a hearing in the senate chamber to a committee of the workingmen's associations of the United States in opposition to the tariff bill, was laid on the table by a vote of yeas, 34; nays, 9. At 1 p. m., the further urgent deficiency bill was passed, and the tariff bill taken up, when Mr. Quay addressed the senate in opposition.

Col. W. L. Nugent, of Meridian, Miss., attorney of the Gulf and Ship Island Railroad Company, made an argument before Secretary Smith of the interior department in support of the company's claim for 76,800 acres of land. If this claim is allowed the railroad company will then have 115,800 acres of pine timber land in Mississippi, as 40,000 have already been allowed. With this amount of land Captain W. H. Hardy, president of the company, says they will be able to resume work on the road and finish it to Hattiesburg. This land is the finest pine timber land in the state and is well worth half a million of dollars.

L. H. Campbell, of counsel for commissioner of patients has filed in the supreme court of the United States a motion to dismiss the appeal of the state of South Carolina from the judgment of the court of appeals for the District of Columbia in what is known as the Palmetto trademark case. The motion is based on the ground of a lack of jurisdiction. Governor Tillman appealed to the commissioner of patents for a registration of the trademark "Palmetto," to be applied to intoxicating liquors sold under the dispensary law of South Carolina. The application was refused by the commissioner of patents and his action sustained by the court of appeals.

CENTRAL ORDERED TO PAY

$181,000 to the Southwestern—Lawyers get their Share.

A Washington special says: Justices Jackson and White have ordered that the Central pay over to the Southwestern $181,000, the amount of its earnings for the last six months of last year. About $25,000 of this amount will go to the Southwestern's lawyers. This is, however, not fees in the case alone, but in the tripartite bond case and all the other matters.

INSPECTING GEORGIA MINES.

Northern Capitalists Greatly Pleased With the Prospect.

Mr. E. F. Oates, of Athens, Ga., has returned from a trip through Lumpkin, Hall and White counties, where he has been with Messrs. Reed and Baker, of Detroit, Mich., inspecting the mineral resources of that section of the state. The two gentlemen are capitalists and experienced in mining affairs. They visited the state as the representatives of a large western syndicate which will in all probability invest in the mines of Georgia.

LAID TO REST.

REMAINS OF SENATOR VANCE BURIED AT ASHEVILLE.

Thousands Pay Homage to the Dead Statesman.

At the hour of noon Wednesday the remains of the late Senator Zebulon B. Vance were deposited in their resting place at Asheville, N. C., overlooking the beautiful French Broad river—a fitting spot for the last repose of this great man. The funeral train arrived just after dawn, from Raleigh, with committees of both houses of congress, the governor and other officers of state, and three cars of distinguished friends of the dead senator.

Notwithstanding the late hour at which the train passed Hickory, Morganton and other stations, large crowds pressed into the funeral car and demanded to see the remains. The demonstration in Asheville was the greatest of the occasion. The body was placed in the First Presbyterian church at 8 o'clock, and from that hour until 11:30, thousands of people from his native county of Buncombe passed to take a last look.

An immense crowd of confederate veterans, followed by the different fraternal organizations, the Asheville Light Infantry and the Bingham school cadets, filed by. Mrs. Vance spent a half hour in private with her dead husband, and asked that she be the last one to see his face. The procession was then formed, reaching almost from the church to the cemetery, a distance of two miles. The crowd that marched out to the cemetery is estimated at 10,000.

ALABAMA MINERS

Order an Extensive Strike to Take Place April 23d.

A proclamation has been issued by the committee on resolutions appointed by the Alabama miners ordering a big strike on April 23d. The preamble recites that, "in view of the fact that the operators of Alabama having a contract with the miners until July 4, 1894, and in lieu of the said contract and the depressed financial condition of the country having closed down a number of their mines, thus leaving a number of miners at Blue Creek, Pratt mines, Coalburg, etc., out of employment, causing a surplus of idle men on the market to compete with those at work for a living, we deemed it advisable, in view of our surrounding circumstances and the low, unprecedented condition of the iron trade, voluntarily to offer said operators a reduction of 10 per cent on scale now in force on certain conditions, which proposition was rejected by said operators, and in return said operators made a counter-proposition of 22 per cent, which proposition was submitted to a popular vote of the miners and was rejected and our former proposition was modified, giving said operators a further concession to enable them to put in operation the mines and furnaces now idle; but our second proposition was not more successful than our first, and in view of our deplorable condition, we cannot grant any further concession for the best interest of ourselves, the operators and the community."

DEATH OF GENERAL SLOCUM.

Contracted Pneumonia and Was Ill Only a Few Days.

General Henry W. Slocum died Saturday morning at his home, in Brooklyn, of pneumonia. General Slocum had been ill only a few days, but his death was not unexpected.

SKETCH OF THE DEAD GENERAL.

Henry Warner Slocum was born in Onandaga county, New York, September 24th, 1827. He was graduated from West Point in 1852, appointed second lieutenant of artillery and ordered at once to Florida. In 1855 he was made first lieutenant, but in 1856 he resigned to practice law in Syracuse. He entered the war as colonel and after Bull Run was commissioned brigadier general, finally succeeding to the command of the division formally led by General W. B. Franklin.

He took command of the twentieth corps during Sherman's march to the sea; he commanded the left wing. Resigning from the army in 1865 General Slocum resumed his law practice in Syracuse. He was democratic candidate for secretary of state, and in 1868 was elected to congress, and re-elected in 1870. In 1884 he was again elected to congress. His name was brought forward at the national democratic conventions of 1888 and 1892.

No Dispensary Decision Yet.

A Columbia, S. C., dispatch says: Contrary to expectations the supreme court did not render a decision Saturday in the case to test the constitutionality of the dispensary law. The court met at 11 o'clock, and after some minor business was transacted the November term of court was adjourned. The law requires that the supreme court shall render its decision upon any matter heard before it within sixty days after adjournment of the term in which the case was heard.

THE RULE PASSED

AND MEMBERS PRESENT AND NOT VOTING TO BE COUNTED.

The Adoption of the New Plan by a Vote of 212 to 47.

The house, by a vote of 212 to 47, adopted the rule submitted by the committee for counting a quorum, at Tuesday's session. The forty-seven votes represent democrats who have not forgotten the scenes or their positions in the fifty-first congress, when Tom Reed held the reins. The scenes attendant upon the adoption of the rule were interesting and spirited. The republicans gave the committee on rules all the assistance possible. In the fifteen minutes allowed them for discussion, Mr. Reed only reserved three for himself and contented himself almost solely with the statement: "I congratulate the fifty-third congress for its vindication of the fifty-first." Mr. Reed also gave three minutes each to Buck Kilgore, Amos Cummings and Ben Russell, of Georgia. All three attacked the rule. Ben Russell attacked it as revolutionary and a return to czar rule. He also declared his belief that the rule was unconstitutional and that oftentimes it was the highest duty of a representative to decline to vote if he could thereby prevent vicious legislation being saddled on his constituents. He spoke with great earnestness, and added to his reputation as a forceful speaker. The democrats who spoke in favor of the rule were warmly applauded by the republicans. There were a number of votes cast for the rule under protest on the democratic side.

7,000 MINERS OUT.

The Strike in Alabama Growing Very Serious.

Monday's developments in the miners' strike in Alabama show that every mine in the Birmingham district except those at Warrior and in Tuscaloosa and Walker county, is shut down. Fully 7,000 men are out. No attempt has been made to put in negro labor at the Blue Creek mines, where trouble is threatened. Armed deputy sheriffs were on hand, but the negroes refused to work, fearing violence from the strikers. The strike is growing, and the situation is becoming more serious.

THE SITUATION IN TENNESSEE.

A Knoxville special says: James R. Wooldridge, of the Wooldridge Jellico Coal company. Speaking of the general strike of coal miners which has been ordered on the 21st by the United Mine Workers of America, says that all the miners of district No. 19, of which the Jellico district is a portion, have signaled their intention to strike.

Work has been very light in the district the past season, and the indications are that they will not be able to hold out long without assistance, but it is more than likely that the strike will remain on until August 1st. The Jellico district is now paying the highest prices in the United States, and any result will necessarily be beneficial to the operators.

A convention of the operators and miners of the district has been called to meet at Jellico on the 26th to consider a new contract. The supply of coal for the southern states will not be entirely cut off, as the Tennessee, Coal Iron and Railroad Company have about 2,000 convicts digging for them in Alabama and Tennessee. Unless the organized men use violent methods to close these mines, the strike will prove a bonanza to the lessees of convicts, as it will be the only company in the United States to operate its mines.

REORGANIZING THE MILITARY.

Governor Tillman Wants Men Who Will Obey Him.

A Columbia, S. C., special says: Governor Tillman has begun to dismiss from the military service of the state those companies which failed to respond to his call during the Darlington trouble. He has written a letter to the captain of one of the companies which failed to respond, telling him that he did not want such "recreant sons of South Carolina" in her military service. The reorganization of the militia of the state is going on speedily. Many new companies, who will in the future be loyal to the commander-in-chief, have been organized and asked to be mustered into service.

DIRECT TRADE.

The Movement is Now On Between Port Royal and Liverpool.

A representative delegation of merchants and manufactures from Atlanta and Augusta spent a day at Port Royal inspecting the wharves, warehouses and loading vessels. The direct trade movement between Port Royal and Liverpool may be said to be fairly and safely inaugurated. The Mexican, which will sail from Liverpool Monday is the twelfth ship, and the cargo for the next, which will sail ten days later, is already there. Eighty-one thousand bales of cotton, besides train loads of corn and flour, and thousands of tons of phosphate rock have been hauled.

Henry Ives Dead.

Henry S. Ives, of New York, the "Napoleon of finance," died at Asheville, N. C., Tuesday night. Mr. Ives reached Asheville about two months ago from Florida in an almost dying condition. He leased a splendid residence in the suburbs and lived quietly with his wife and a few servants. The cause of his death was consumption.

Col. Oates

The Democrats were fearful that our candidates would think Chilton too much given over to Republicanism to give any of their valuble time in our county, but we have been pleasantly disappointed. On Tuesday the 17th Col. Oates, was with us and addressed some 200 Citizens. For three hours they listened with unabated interest as he dealt in the things pertaining to our welfare—He defined closely what it means to be a Democrat. Not the mere following a party but the adherence to principles which seek to uplift and protect the whole people and not for the protection of favored classes. In reviewing the legislation of this County he showed how the Republican party had passed laws exclusively for classes and trades Millions of the peoples money had gone to pay bounties to make shipping profitable to those so engaged. Last year $10.000 000 of the peoples money were paid to sugar raisers the protected Classes of the East have been filling up money year by year. Laws for enriching the classes at the expense of the masses mark out plainly the paths traveled by the Republicans for years. Democracy favors equality among all classes. It allows and encourages each man to be the architect of his own fortune. Democracy is like a great rock in mid ocean over which the storms throw ther clouds of mist and fog, but so soon as the gale ie over the rock still firmly raises its head. He had been accused of being unfriendly to the alliance, many of its principles were good, designing office seekers had prostituted it to their base pusposes. He described the alliance lecturers as being men who were not able to keep a mortgage off their own homes and while they berated wall street they would not have known it had they met it. Clearly he described how the alliance were converted into a secret political party. A secret is the last place in the world for such an order. He has never been against the honest old farmers, but dead against their unscrupulous leaders. He urged his hearers to be honest and careful as to the step they took and assured them that Kolb was leading them into the Republican party through the Jeffersonian door. He assured all those who had gone off that the door of the Democratic party were wide open and he would welcome them, but he had no principle to sacrifice in order to get them to return. The Democratic party was blamed for the hard times. The unreasonableness of surposing that property would come in a day when for thirty years the Republican party had been building up institutions sapped the country of its wealth. Cleveland was blamed for not turning Republicans out before their terms of office expired, when he is simply carrying out the instructions of the platform on which he was elected and the laws he had sworn to obey. He differs with the President somewhat as to the silver question. He urged him to sign the seniorage bill, but when Cleveland decided on a course of action as being the correct one neither friend nor foe made him change therefrom. Free silver means to allow mine owners and holders of silver bullion to take that propeaty to the mints and have the government coin sixty cents worth of silver and stamp it as a dollar, thereby giving the said owner forty cents clear profit. Free silver will not help the cotton raisers. Cleveland believes the best way to secure Parity of two metals is by international agreement. The speaker sees but little hope for that so long as the Gladstone Policy shall continue in England. If it shall be insisted that we do not need England, let it be in our cototh market, as well as the purchaser of our wheat. The Democratic party was redeeming its promises to the people. The Federal election law was swept off the statutes The income tax would become a law and a tariff for revenue only would soon be a reality. He explain his position on the immigration question to the satisfaction of every one. Without bitterness yet with farmers showed how Kolb was pulling the people into the Republican party and he begged them to cut the rope and let him go. Getting rid of that disturber would insure a return to peaceful days. The cause of Democracy in Chilton county as well as confidence in the national administratson was heighted by that speech.

COMMENTS.

Of Those Who have been Cured or Greatly Benefitted by Using the Electropoise.

ALABAMIANS.

Capt. T. H. Hobart, conductor on the L. & N. railroad, Decatur, Ala., used it on his baby for nervousness and indigestion, the doctors having said the child could not live a week. From the first application of the Electropoise he began to improve, and now, after two weeks use of it he is entirely recovered.

B. F. Land, Dothan, used it for paralysis and have been wonderfully improved in every way, says: "I fully believe that the Electropoise is all in all to the sick, and will do all that is claimed for it."

George S. Vatrotu Mobile: "The Electropoise has been of great value to me, curing me of a distressing case of hay fever of ten years standing, and my entire household use it as a prompt cure for colds, fever, sore throat and violent pains."

Joseph Williams, Stevenson: "The Electropoise has entirely cured my rheumatism, and my general health is much improved."

Rev. J. S. Knowles, Headland: "The value of the Electropoise is inestimable."

A similar list could be given from other states. There are many others, but the testimony of such men ought to convince the most skeptical. Don't impose upon their time and patience. It our business.

Capt. Jos F. Johnston was with us Friday the 20th-He was introduced by Hon G A Northington of Verbena-For two hours he entertained and instructed the audience of about 200,

He was a candidate for Govenor not because he had been begged to become one but because he felt that it would be a great honor to serve his state in that capacity He came as a Democrat seeking the Democratic nomination He explained the diffrence between the principle under lying the Democratic and Republican parties-Different parties occasionly spring up but they all resolve themselves back into either one or the other of the above mentioned parties-He reserved to himself the right to differ from the President and throughout his speech he occasionly thrust his dagger into course pursued the President and Democratic congressmen-He gave a very extended discussion of the silver question-He told how England and Germany and Austria gold metal countries were cursed with poverty and discontent and how France with her silver and gold was spreading her self like a green bay tree-He could see no other reason for this except that she had plenty of silver and gold-He does not believe in fiat money there must be a solid basis at the bottom of all circulating medium-He believes that we must secure Party between the metals by legislation and not wait for international agreement. The party must keep its pledge with the people-He expects to stand with both feet on the platform and no body shall put him off-He has been making silver speeches for ten years and that even in Bankers convention-He believes that the tariff promises will be faithfuly carried out-He believes in the income tax.

The speakers treatment of state poltics was faithful and fearless. Since 1874 We have had only one Democratic office holder to go wrong and that was Vincent White men were all one until Kolb took it into his head to run as the Candidate of a class-The truth was he like all the rest of the candidates was trying to dodge all the honest labor he could-We are all one family and Kolb, the bad boy about when we are talking. Kolb sought to gain position by playing on the passion of the people such a man is a public enemy-Kolb failed to get the nomination for the same reason that I did. laked the necessary number of votes-Two years later Kolb knowing he did not have majority of the deligates seceded and held his meeting at the Opera House. Secession is not always a practical step to take-He advised the people to stay in the party and bring about reform within the party, Kolb constant lament about the wrong done him has become as much a nusance as sore toe of a school boy-The speaker believed that he is the most available candidate for Govenor because he gets nearest longest number of votes-He stands upon the Democratic platform and invites all who have wanderd from their fathers house to return-He will not get down upon his knees to beg them come in neither will he demand that they get on their knees and beg to be allowed to carve in-The speech did good in many respects and while we do not expect to have the opportunity of visiting for Capt Johnson for Govenor yet we shall always thank him for visting Clanton.

UP IN ELMORE

Lightwood Ala. April 16th 1894.

To The Advertiser:

I am in beat 14 Elmore County the uppermost beat next to Chilton County and not a negro voter in it. It was one of Reubin Kolb strongest beats two years ago but he cant get a vote in it at the next election. His speakers were up here two weeks ago and no one went to hear him. They will be back on the 24th but will meat with the same good luck. I know every voter in the beat and he cant get one vote here I think Kolb is merely running this time to draw what votes he can from our party and land them in the Republican ranks. H. Barkly,

DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

HALLS OF CONGRESS

DAILY PROCEEDINGS OF BOTH HOUSE AND SENATE.

The Discussion of Important Measures Briefly Epitomized.

The struggle over the adoption of the new rule to secure a voting quorum was resumed when the house met Friday. The republicans made a preliminary stand against the approval of the journal. As soon as it had been read, Mr. Bourtelle objected, and when Mr. Dockery moved its approval, the republicans were silent. Upon the announcement of the result of a rising vote of 105 to nothing, Mr Boutelle made the point of no quorum, and the roll was called. At 1 o'clock the house, unable to secure a voting quorum, adjourned.

In the house Saturday, as the clerk began reading the journal of Friday, Mr. Reed interrupted with a suggestion that the first business was the question of approving the journal of Thursday. The speaker thought not, and the reading of the journal was completed, whereupon Mr. Boutelle objected to its approval, and the yeas and nays were ordered. Being unable to obtain a quorum, on motion of Mr. Outhwaite the house adjourned at 12:35 until noon Monday.

After adopting resolutions expressing the regret of the house at the death of General Slocum, the house, Monday morning, took a recess of twenty minutes to await a message from the senate conveying the resolutions of that body over the death of Senator Vance. After the receipt of the message Mr. Henderson offered the usual resolutions which were agreed to, and the house took a recess until 3:40.

In the house, Tuesday, Mr. Catchings reported from the committee on rules, the new rule for counting a quorum. The rule provides that the speaker shall appoint two tellers, who shall stand by the clerk at each roll call and certify to the speaker the names of members present and not voting. If the numbers of such members added to those who respond to their names is sufficient to make a quorum, the question shall be considered as ordered. Before the journal was read, Mr. Burrows offered as a substitute, representing the views of the minority, the rule of the Fifty-first Congress on that subject. There was much opposition on the democratic side, and failing to gain unanimous consent to close the debate at 4 o'clock Mr. Catchings demanded the previous question on the rule reported and the substitute. On this the vote on division was: ayes, 122; noes, 98. The yeas and nays were demanded and the roll called. At 2 o'clock, Speaker Crisp announced that the resolution to count a quorum had been passed; yeas 212, nays 47. The announcement was greeted with applause by the republicans.

In the house, Wednesday, attention was called to the inaccuracies in the house journal of Tuesday, but action was postponed. Resolutions were agreed to providing for the printing of various reports and laws, and the house went into committee of the whole on the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill.

THE SENATE.

After some routine morning business Friday the senate resumed the consideration of the further urgent deficiency bill. Mr. Cockrell offered an amendment appropriating $46,000 to cover the deficiency in the wages of workmen and adjusters of the mint at Philadelphia, caused by the large coinage of gold to meet the demands of the treasury. The further urgent deficiency bill was debated up to 11 p. m., when it went over without action. The tariff bill was then taken up and Mr. Peffer began the fourth part of his speech on that subject.

Chaplain Milburn's prayer Monday morning at the opening of the senate was devoted entirely to the death of Senator Vance, whose funeral services engaged the attention of that body. Mr. Rawson then offered the usual resolutions, declaring the great sorrow with which the State has heard of the death of Mr. Vance; providing for a committee of nine senators to take an order for superintending the funeral; for the removal of the remains from Washington to North Carolina in charge of the sergeant-at-arms and attended by committee; that the proceedings be communicated to the house of representatives, and that that body be invited to attend the funeral and to appoint a committee to act with the senate committee. The resolutions were agreed to, and the vice-president announced the appointment of the senate committee as follows: Ransom, George, Gray, Blackburn, Coke, Chandler, Dubois, White of California and Manderson. A further resolution was offered by Mr. Ransom and agreed to, ordering invitations to be extended to the President of the United States and the members of his cabinet; the chief justice and associate justices of the supreme court of the United States; the major general commanding, the army and the senior admiral of the navy, to attend the funeral. Senators Merrill, Sherman, Harris and McPherson were appointed by the vice-president as pall bearers: and then a recess was taken till 3:30 p. m. When the senate reassembled at 3:30 o'clock the galleries were packed with eager spectators. At 5:50 o'clock the casket containing the remains of the dead senator was borne into the chamber by a squad of uniformed capitol police, and placed on a bier in the area. It was preceded by the committee of arrangements of the two houses, and accompanied by the honorary pallbearers. The top of the casket was covered with a profusion of roses and lilies. Then, immediately afterwards, the deputy sergeant-at-arms Mr. Layton, announced the arrival at the main entrance of the chamber of the speaker and members of the house of representatives. The vice-president and senators stood up and remained standing while the members of the house were seeking their seats. Next came and were received with the like honors the chief justice and associates, justices of the supreme court of the United States. President Cleveland then appeared and took his seat at the head of the line of chairs in the first row. Next to him sat Secretary Gresham, of the state department, and then came Secretaries Carlisle, Herbert, Smith, Morton, Postmaster General Bissell and Attorney General Olney. The religious observances were begun with prayer and the reading of scriptural selections by Rev. Dr. Moses D. Hoge, of Richmond, Va. The benediction was pronounced by Chaplain Milburn, and then the coffin, with the remains of the dead senator, was borne out by capitol police, attended by the honorary pallbearers and the committee of the two houses. The funeral procession was formed on the eastern plaza, from which the train was to start for Raleigh, N. C., at 10:43 o'clock. The senate, soon after the ceremonies, adjourned till Tuesday.

In the senate, Tuesday, discussion over the proposed extension of the present agreement of taking up the tariff bill at 1 o'clock and debating it until 5 uninterruptedly, be continued until Wednesday of next week, was carried on. The agreement was adopted with the understanding that Thursday next at 1 o'clock some senator on the democratic side should have the floor. Mr. Morgon obtained leave of absence until the 3d of May. The senate then, upon his motion, at 1:50, went into executive session.

In the senate, Wednesday, the tariff bill was taken up at 1 o'clock and Mr. Morrill addressed the body. At the close of his speech, Mr. Mills gave notice that he would address the senate on the tariff bill next Tuesday. Mr. Turpie then took the floor and spoke in favor of the bill.

This clause was regarded as the essence of the bill and its rejection is regarded as assuring the defeat of the measure.

The assignment of Samuel L. Clemens ("Mark Twain"), and his partner, Frederick J. Hall, who compose the firm of Charles L. Webster & Co., book publishers, at No. 67 Fifth avenue, was filed in the county clerk's office in New York City Wednesday just at the close of business. The assignee is Bainbridge Colby, of No. 40 Wall street, with Stern & Rushmore as attorneys. The assignment was without preference.

It is reported that a bill of injunction will be filed in a few days at Chattanooga to prevent the issuance of $150,000 in bonds by Hamilton county for building a bridge across the Tennessee river, west of the city. The bridge was to cost over half a million dollars, by the Chattanooga Western Railway Company, a syndicate handling large sums of British money. The county court voted bonds last October to assist in the enterprise.

The crisis has come in the Great Northern strike, and the company will from this hour play its hand with sternness. Judge Sanborn, of the United States court of appeals, at St. Paul, Minn., has granted an injunction against the strikers in both Minnesota and North Dakota, and cited them to appear in his court on April 27th to show cause why "each of them should not be enjoined and restrained from disabling or rendering in any wise unfit for convenient and immediate use any engines, cars or other property of the Great Northern Railroad Company.

The long fought police board contest at Denver, Col., has ended with the decision of the supreme court which upholds Governor Waite's claims that he had the legal right to remove Martin and Orr. A writ of ouster was ordered and the defiant members given twenty-four hours to give possession to Mullins and Barnes. The costs of the proceedings were taxed against the retiring members.

A Wilmington, Del., dispatch states that the few peach buds that lived through the severe freeze of the last week of March have been finished by the present severe storm of snow and sleet. The storm extended all over the peninsula, and trees were covered with ice. Reports from all sections are uniform in expressing the opinion that all crop prospects have been completely ruined by the storm.

CHARGES OF DISLOYALTY.

A Sensational Address Issued by Minnesota Democrats.

Probably the most remarkable political address of the year has been issued by the democratic leaders of Minnesota through the Democratic Association of Minnesota. The address begins as follows:

"It is useless to disguise the fact that our party is confronted with serious peril. It is time for plain words; silence now is disloyalty to our party and its cause.

"In less than two years after winning the most complete victory that any party ever won, while in full possession of the powers then given us, we present the appearance of a defeated party while our opponents, routed in the battle, wear all the airs of victory. What has brought this astounding change? Whence comes this peril? Not from our opponents; not from the brawling hordes of protectionists whom we met and overthrew in 1892, but from malignant and treacherous influences, allied with weakness or cowardice, within our own ranks."

Growing Nut Trees.

Almost any kind of nut trees can readily be grown from seed if proper care is taken in planting and giving good cultivation until the trees are reasonably well established.

All things considered, the better plan is to plant in shallow drills, three feet apart and then transplant when one year old. The objection to allowing them to grow too long is that the majority of nut trees have long top roots that make them more difficult to transplant. Plant reasonably thick in the drill rows, putting them two or three inches apart. It is of course necessary to have the soil prepared in a good tilth before planting. A live, loamy soil is preferable, as a clayey soil may form so hard a crust after a hard, beating rain that the plants cannot force their way through, and in consequence more or less of them die. The advantage in spring planting is that the danger of mice and other vermin destroying the roots is greatly reduced. Give good cultivation in order to secure a good vigorous growth the first season, and then transplant to where they are to grow the next spring.

How to Pack Eggs.

It may be put down as a fact which can not be questioned that no packed egg can be as good as a fresh one, but as a great many people insist upon packing some every year, in order to provide against a scarcity, it may be just as well to know how to do it in the best way. In an experiment in keeping eggs they were taken in the spring when fresh and wiped with a cloth saturated with cotton seed oil, to which had been added boracic acid. Those then packed in salt kept from four to five months, with a loss of about one-third, but this was much better than those packed in bran, which were all spoiled in four months. Eggs packed in salt, after wiping with vaseline, to which salicylic acid has been added, kept four and five months without loss, and with fair quality.—Western Plowman.

Value of Good Cooking.

We masculines have yet to learn that the kitchen is the most important end of the household. If that goes wrong, the whole establishment is wrong. It decides the health of the household and health decides almost everything. Heavy bread, too great frequency of plum pudding, mingling of lemonade and custards, unmasticable beef, have decided the fate of sermons, legislative bills, and the destiny of empires. The kitchen knife has often cut off the brightest prospects. The kitchen gridiron has often consumed a commercial enterprise. The kitchen kettle has kept many a good man in hot water. It will never be fully known how much the history of the world was affected by good or bad cookery.—Nashville Advocate.

Profit in Potatoes.

Farmers in Lincolnshire, England, have recently turned largely from wheat growing to potato growing, and have profited by the change. Sales of potatoes are reported at from $100 to $125 an acre in the ground. Sold in this way, the cost of the crops is not much greater than wheat, as the cost of harvesting is eliminated, and a blind man can see which gives the better profit. We think there are many American farmers who could make the same change in their methods with profit. One thing is certain—a good crop of potatoes always pays a profit. A good crop of wheat does not always do it.—Western Plowman.

A New Cake Recipe.

A delightful sponge cake is made by beating the yolks of six eggs and two cups of sugar together and adding the beaten white. Add to this mixture one cup of flour and ten tablespoonfuls of boiling water. Then a second cupful of flour and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Essence to taste; bake in a moderately hot oven.

An exchange remarks: One of the greatest mistakes of farmers is in sending their home paper a message something like this: "Please stop my paper. The times are so hard I cannot afford to continue it." The message ought to be to this effect: "Please continue my paper. The times are so hard I need all the help I can get to enable me to get along."

Breathing Poison.

You can't draw a breath without inhaling poison, if you sojourn in a malarious locality during the unhealthy season. The denizens of malaria stricken regions testify that the only certain safeguard against the poisonous vapor and its products, chills and fever, remittent fever, ague cake and dumb ague, is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which remedies, also, constipation, biliousness, dyspepsia and rheumatism.

A FEW NEW NEVERS.

Never fail to keep an appointment.

Never call on people just at bed time, or during dinner, or before they are downstairs in the morning.

Never stop people who are hurrying along the street and detain them for 10 or twenty minutes.

Never, when you see two people engaged in earnest talk, step in and enter upon a miscellaneous conversation.

Never begin to talk about "this, that and everything" to one who is trying to read the morning papers, or a book, or anything else.

Never tell long stories of which you yourself are the hero.

Never delay in answering letters or returning books.

Never speak disrespectfully of your parents, nor of your sisters. People may laugh at you for your wit, but they will despise you for it.

The subject of the above portrait is a prominent and much respected citizen, Mr. Robert Manson, of West Rye, N. H. Where Mr. Manson is known "his word is as good as his bond." In a recent letter to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Chief Consulting Physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., Mr. Manson says:

"Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are the best pills I ever took for the liver. All my friends say they do them the most good."

This opinion is shared by every one who once tries these tiny, little, sugar-coated pills, which are to be found in all medicine stores. The U. S. Inspector of Immigration at Buffalo, N. Y., writes of them as follows:

"From early childhood I have suffered from a sluggish liver, with all the disorders accompanying such a condition. Doctors' prescriptions and patent medicines I have used in abundance; they only afforded temporary relief. I was recommended to try Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. I did so, taking two at night and one after dinner every day for two weeks. I have reduced the dose to one 'Pellet' every day for two months. I have in six months increased in solid flesh twenty-two pounds. I am in better health than I have been since childhood. Drowsiness and unpleasant feelings after meals have completely disappeared."

John A. D. Berry

Assist nature a little now and then with a gentle laxative, or, if need be, with a more searching and cleansing cathartic, thereby removing offending matter from the stomach and bowels, and toning up and invigorating the liver and quickening its tardy action, and you thereby remove the cause of a multitude of distressing diseases, such as headaches, indigestion, biliousness, skin diseases, boils, carbuncles, piles, fevers and malidies too numerous to mention.

If people would pay more attention to properly regulating the action of their bowels, they would have less frequent occasion to call for their doctors' services to subdue attacks of dangerous diseases.

Tansy Kills Moths.

"There is one sure preventive of moths. It is tansy," says a correspondent. "Sprinkle the leaves freely among your woolens and furs and the moths will never get into them. When I was a child my grandmother used to send me to the tansy patch on the hill with a large basket in which to bring home plenty of tansy leaves. In the garret were five hair-covered trunks, studded with brass nails, filled with her linen, blankets, flannel sheets, etc. I do not know how grandmother took care of her extra supply out of those trunks in the garret once a year, hung the articles on a clothesline down in the orchard, beat them and put away again to lie amid the tansy leaves until other year. The fourth generation of her posterity are sleeping under the same blankets and coverlets—a fact which proves the efficacy of that remedy of the olden time."—Philadelphia Evening Star.

That, of all known agents to accomplish this purpose, Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are unequaled, is proven by the fact that, when used, they are always in favor. Their secondary effect is to keep the bowels open and regular, not to further constipate, as is the case with other pills. Hence, their great popularity with sufferers from habitual constipation, piles, and indigestion.

The "Pleasant Pellets" are far more effective in arousing the liver to action than "blue pills," calomel, or other mercurial preparations, and have the further merit of being purely vegetable and perfectly harmless in any condition of the system; no particular care is required while using them.

Composed of the choicest, concentrated vegetable extracts, their cost is much less than is that of other pills found in the market, yet from forty to forty-four "Pellets" are put up in each sealed glass vial, and are sold through druggists, and can be had at the prices of the more ordinary and cheaper made pills.

Dr. Pierce prides himself on having been the first to introduce a Little Liver Pill to the American people. Many have imitated them, but none have approached his "Pleasant Pellets" in excellence.

For all laxative and cathartic purposes the "Pleasant Pellets" are infinitely superior to all "mineral waters," sedlitz powders, "salts," castor oil, fruit syrups (so-called), laxative "teas," and the many cheap purgative compounds sold in various forms.

Put up in glass vials, sealed, therefore always fresh and reliable. One little "Pellet" is laxative, two gently cathartic.

As a "dinner pill," to promote digestion, take one each day after dinner. To relieve distress from over-eating, nothing equals them. They are tiny, sugar-coated, anti-bilious granules, scarcely larger than mustard seeds. Every child wants them.

Then, after they are taken, instead of disturbing and shocking the system, they act in a mild, and natural way. There is no reaction afterward. Their help lasts.

Accept no substitute recommended to be "just as good." They may be better for the dealer, because of paying him a better profit, but he is not the one who needs help.

Jenkins is a disgrace to the bench upon which he sits, and to the people who elevated him to the position."

Attorney General Moloney, in an opinion rendered at Chicago decided that the gas companies of that city are maintaining a trust in violation of law and he will institute proceedings at once to have their charters annulled. The attorney general made the sensational statement in connection with the decision that he had positive knowledge that at the time he was speaking, the trust was so altering their books and records as to make a favorable showing at the trial of the case.

NO AUDIENCE FOR COXEY.

The Senate Refuses to Grant Him a Special Hearing.

A Washington dispatch says: By a vote on the Peffer resolution, the senate Monday showed that it had no sympathy with the Coxey movement. The resolution was put upon its passage and was voted down by 26 to 17. All the democrats except one voted in the negative. The resolution was to appoint a committee to receive the representatives of the army and hear them. The senators are perfectly willing to receive any petitions from the army and have them referred to the proper committees, but to appoint a committee to hear from them specially is more than the senate has ever done for any body of men, and naturally they refused to do it for Coxey and his army.

HALLS OF CONGRESS

DAILY PROCEEDINGS OF BOTH HOUSE AND SENATE.

The Discussion of Important Measures Briefly Epitomized.

Immediately after the house was called to order Monday morning, Mr. Hepburn raised the point of "no quorum," on the approval of the journal, and the roll call was ordered. The journal was approved; ayes, 213; nays, none. The house then proceeded to the consideration of measures relating to the District of Columbia.

The O'Neill-Joy election case, from the eleventh district of Missouri, came up in the house again Tuesday through an effort by Mr. Bartholdt, of Missouri, to have read a series of resolutions adopted by a mass meeting of citizens of the district, denouncing the unseating of Joy. He was unsuccessful, however, the speaker ruling that the resolutions presented no question of privilege. The house then went into committee of the whole and took up the postoffice appropriation bill for the year ending June 30, 1895.

The house, at 12:40 Wednesday, resolved itself into committee of the whole for consideration of the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill.

At 1:45 Thursday the house went into committee of the whole and resumed the consideration of the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill.

THE SENATE.

In the senate, Monday, the credentials of Thomas Jordan Jarvis as senator from North Carolina to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. Vance, were presented by the vice president and placed on file. An effort was made by Mr. Peffer to get before the senate again his resolution for a select committee to give hearings to Coxey's army. He made a motion to take it up, but on the yeas and nays only 17 senators voted for it, including Mr. Hawley, who probably desired to give Allen an opportunity to reply to his remarks, and 26 against it. At 1 p. m. the tariff bill was taken up and Mr. Quay, who was entitled to the floor, yielded it to Mr. Washburn, who proceeded to address the senate in opposition to the bill.

Immediately after reading the journal Tuesday, the senate went into executive session. The object of the session was to dispose of the Florida nominations; among them that of Geo W. Wilson, to be collector of internal revenue for the Florida district, and in which no decision was reached. After a half hour spent in executive session, and another half hour given to morning business of no importance, the tariff bill was taken up at 1 o'clock. Mr. Mills addressed the senate in support of the bill, closing what is designated as "general debate."

In the senate Wednesday, after the introduction of a bill and resolution on the subject of the expected arrival in Washington of Coxey and his followers, the tariff bill was, at 1 p. m., laid before the senate, and Mr. Harris asked unanimous consent to have the bill taken up each day at 1 o'clock, p. m., and consideration continued till 6 p. m. Objection was made by Mr. Aldrich, acting for the republicans, to continuing daily sessions later than 5 o'clock. Mr. Harris then put his request in the shape of a motion, and on objection, it went over. Mr. Harris gave notice that he would submit this motion every day until some result is reached. Consideration of the bill was then begun, paragraph by paragraph, and Mr. Vest took the floor.

In the senate, Thursday, the Hon. Thomas Jordan Jarvis, the new senator from North Carolina, was sworn in. The Coxey movement was brought prominently to the front when Senator Allen's resolution of Wednesday was considered. Mr. Vest opened in a strong speech in which he denounced in unmeasured terms the lawlessness of the men in the west who are seizing trains and committing other rash acts. He said if these men intended to be peaceful and come here and looked over the capitol and buildings as other citizens, did, there was no objection, but any resolution tendering welcome to those who were breaking the laws of the United States were out of place. It was the duty of the senate to set the seal of its disapprobation upon these acts of lawlessness. Other speeches were made on the same line and after a long discussion Mr. Allen's resolution went over without action. The senate, by a vote of 5 to 6, agreed to take up the order for the daily meeting of the senate at 11 a. m. The order was then agreed to, Mr. Aldrich stating that there was general assent to it on the republican side. The tariff bill was taken up and Mr. Higgins made a speech in opposition to it.

A PRIEST'S CRIME.

In a Fit of Insane Jealousy He Murders a Young Girl.

A Cincinnati special says: Mary Gilmartin, a pretty clerk, employed by the Pulvermacher Galvanic Belt company, was shot and instantly killed while on her way to work. The man who committed the murder was arrested and gave the name of George Reed, aged 30, but letters in his pocket identify him as a Catholic priest, named Father Dominick O'Grady. Insane jealousy of the girl, and her desire to get rid of his unwelcome attentions, caused the tragedy.

To Issue Licenses.

The liquor question has been brought to an issue in Greenville, S. C. At a meeting of the city council, called to take action as to the right of the city to issue licenses, the discussion was long and at times animated. A test vote was taken, which resulted in a vote of 6 to 4 in favor of issuing liquor licenses.

WHAT IS GOING ON AT UNCLE SAM'S HEADQUARTERS.

Comment Concerning Transactions in the Various Departments.

The senate has confirmed the nomination of A. M. Avery, to be receiver of public moneys at Huntsville, Ala.

Consideration of the Bland bill, providing for re-enacting the free coinage law of 1837, has been postponed till the 3d of May.

The house elections committee was in session several hours Tuesday hearing arguments in the Goode-Eppes contested election case, from the fourth district of Virginia.

The comptroller of the currency has declared a first dividend of 30 per cent. in favor of creditors of the First National bank of Cedartown, Georgia, on claims proved amounting to $16,099.

Official figures received at the treasury show that of the gold shipped abroad Saturday the treasury lost $3,260,000, thus reducing its gold to $100,500,000, or $500,000 above the reserve notch.

The motion of Senator Harris for the senate to meet hereafter at 11 and devote at least one more hour to work on the tariff bill, making from five to six each day, passed the senate Thursday morning practically unopposed.

The house committee on coinage, weights and measures at Wednesday's session postponed consideration of the Meyer seigniorage bill until next session, and decided to report a bill for the free and unlimited coinage of silver. The Meyer bill was submitted to Carlisle and molded into shape by him before it was presented to the house. It provided for the coinage of the silver seigniorage in the treasury and authorized the secretary of the treasury to issue bonds at 3 per cent.

The silver republicans, under the lead of Teller and Dubois, have served notice on the eastern republicans that they be treated to the same medicine administered to the silver republicans during the fight against the repeal of the Sherman act. At that time, the silver republicans were kept in the chamber day and night, the eastern republicans joining with the democrats to make a quorum. Now the tables are to be turned. They take the ground that the people elected the democratic congress, and that the republicans are not responsible for the kind of bill they pass. So far as able, the silver republicans will afford the democrats every opportunity to pass the bill, but will vote against it on the final roll call.

Guarding the Treasury.

The treasury officials, while disclaiming any fears of trouble on account of the presence of the crowds incident to the coming of Coxey's army, have taken the precaution of adding fifty-five carbines and twenty revolvers to the treasury's supply of arms. The normal strength of the watch force of the treasury is seventy men, divided into two reliefs, and in addition to two or three dozen revolvers, there have always been thirty-five revolvers in the racks in the office of the captain of the watch, sufficient to supply one to each watchman on duty. It has been thought best, however, to increase the supply in view of the crowds of hangers-on of Coxey's army that are expected to arrive in the city.

THE EDITOR JAILED.

He is Made Responsible for What the Reporters Wrote.

Editor Rosewater, of the Omaha, Neb., Bee, was tried before Judge Scott, of the district court, on a charge of contempt and sentenced to thirty days in jail and a fine of $500 and costs. The case grew out of local articles published in The Bee, attacking Judge Scott's rectitude. Rosewater sought to show that he did not know of the articles before they were published, but the court found that he had shown animosity and must suffer for what his reporters wrote.

Oldest Living Officer.

Lieutenant Michael Moore, retired, has the distinction of being the oldest living officer of the United States army, and there probably is not an older military veteran in the world than he, for he is almost 100. He entered the army in 1812, as a musician in the Thirteenth Infantry, and his service has been almost continuous. He was retired in 1870—twenty-four years ago—and if he lives eight years longer he will have served his country for the extraordinary term of ninety years, for it is considered that a retired army officer is still in service so long as his name remains on the army list. Lieutenant Moore lives in Brooklyn and is likely to pass his 100th year. He was appointed a second lieutenant by General Grant in March, 1869, during the first month that the general was in the white house.—[New Orleans Picayune.

THE old geographical division of Tennessee into east, west and middle still holds, but the mountainous east Tennessee is growing in relative wealth and population. The counties that properly constitute west Tennessee now have a population of about 500,000; those of middle Tennessee have 800,000, and those of east Tennessee have 500,000. Civilization first broke into Tennessee from the east, when Daniel Boone passed through the mountain wall on the eastern boundary. The rugged character of the country delayed its development, but its mineral wealth has of late years brought population and many material improvements.

The civil and military authorities have been advised to take proper measures to prevent violence to property.

Governor Flower, of New York, has vetoed the annual appropriation bill because the republican legislature refused to amend the bill by striking out the section to allow the attorney general to designate all counsel employed by state commissioners. This action of the governor will probably delay the adjournment.

The debenture holders of the Central railroad held a meeting at Savannah Wednesday, but came no nearer a determination of the matters before them than at the former meeting. The agreement which has been drawn had received only $610,000 worth of signatures and it has to have $1,000,000 before it can become operative. The amount was increased to about $700,000 at the meeting and the committee will canvass for further signatures before another meeting is called.

McGARRAHAN DEAD.

A Conspicuous Figure About Washington for Thirty Years.

William McGarrahan, one of the most conspicuous figures about Washington for the last thirty years, and better known by everybody in Washington as "Billy McGarrahan," died at the Providence hospital in that city Tuesday morning. He was about seventy years of age. The story of this old man, who had come to be known the country over as "The Claimant," is a sad one and full of romance. The claim for which he fought for thirty-six years and which made him a national figure, was to a rich tract of mineral land in California, known as the Panoche Grande Ranche.

During all his weary years of litigation and petitioning McGarrahan was nominally arraigned against the United States government. That is to say, if the title to the Panoche Grande did not vest in him, as he claimed, it did vest in the United States. Hence all his actions were brought against the United States and his petitions were made to congress.

Yet it was not the United States that really opposed him. The United States courts three times affirmed his title to the land; congressional investigating committees declared emphatically in his favor, and various officials of high degree who passed upon his claim expressed themselves as perfectly satisfied with the clearness of his title.

FOUGHT BY A CORPORATION.

His real opponent was a private corporation known as the New Idria Mining Company, which squatted upon his land shortly after he purchased it, and has ever since been making enormous profits out of the rich deposits of quicksilver found beneath its rocky surface.

At every turn the well paid lawyers and agents of the "New Idria" appeared to combat him, and though he repeatedly won and re-won his title, a war of technicality was waged upon him, and legal difficulties turned up at every step, cunningly devised, so as to block him and send him again and again to the courts and to congress for help.

A Popular Hotel Burned.

The Saranac Lake House, at Saranac Lake, N. Y., has been completely destroyed by fire, entailing a loss of $125,000. The fire was of incendiary origin, but the fiend is not known. There was $40,000 insurance. The bookings were larger for the coming season than ever before, and principally of guests from the south and southwest, to whom this was a favorite resort.

Lost His Case.

Watlington, the man who sued the Raleigh and Augusta railway for $5,000 damages on account of being struck by a cow which had been hurled from the track by an engine, lost his case in court at Raleigh. The verdict was in favor of the railway company.

Ogden Elected.

H. N. Ogden, democratic candidate for congress from the Shreveport, La., district has been elected to fill the unexpired term of M. C. Blanchard. His majority is about 5,000.

HER HAND.

Her hand,
A dainty hand,
No jewels flash
Their artificial art to aid
The beauty, of
The soft white hand
Of this fair maid.

Her hand,
A tender hand,
Its softening touch
Thrills through and through
My heart, and makes
Sensations, that till then
It never knew.

Her hand,
A soothing hand,
Were it but mine
To gently in her woman's way
Smooth troubles from
My worried brow,
'Twould make life but one happy day.

Her hand,
An angel's hand,
I ask to have,
And vastly to my own surprise
She answers yes;
And then her hand,
It trembles as in mine it lies.

Hot in Australia.

The weather in Australia during the present antipodean summer has been unusually hot and oppressive. In Adelaide, during December, the thermometer several times registered over 100 degrees in the shade and one day it climbed to 107 in the shade and 163 in the sun. In Melbourne the hundred notch has been reached more than once, and the scorching north winds have made the atmosphere exceedingly oppressive. The foregoing figures are from weather observatory readings, and probably do not represent by several degrees the temperature of the city streets.—Detroit Free Press.

Curious Story of a Spur.

The death of W. Oswald Charlton in England recalls the curious story of the Charlton spur—an interesting relic exhibited not long ago before the Newcastle Society of Antiquaries. From time immemorial the Charltons had possession of this spur, which, according to a border custom, was served up at dinner. The dish in which it was placed was covered; and, on the lid being lifted and the spur seen, the retainers knew that the larder was empty and that they were expected to fill it.—Chicago Herald.

A Washington special of Monday states that Representative Jerry Simpson is rapidly sinking and hope of his recovery abandoned.

A Washington special says: Representative Jerry Simpson's illness took an unfavorable turn Sunday evening, his condition being complicated by the return of an old kidney trouble.

One hundred and four fresh cases of cholerine, or cholera, is reported at Lisbon, Portugal. The disease is rapidly spreading to the towns and villages in the interior. The Spanish authorities have adopted rigorous precautionary measures against the disease all along the frontier.

The American miners of Para, Ill., have decided not to join the strikers, and only a little more than half of the foreigners voted to go out. Six hundred Americans will resume work as usual, but the strikers threaten to stop them, and there is danger of a serious conflict of citizens with Americans.

Late reports from Summerville, Mo., the scene of the recent cyclone, say the town is not much injured, but in the country the damage is great. Mrs. Van Keel, three children, a hired girl and hired man were killed. Five dwellings and many other buildings were blown away, and a large number of people injured.

In the Clearfield and Beech Creek coal regions of Pennsylvania there are upwards of one hundred mines and out of this number there is not one in operation. The suspension is complete through both regions. There is not the least excitement, but the miners are very impatiently awaiting news from the regions in Maryland and Virginia.

The mortgage bond suit of the Central Trust Company of New York vs. the Richmond and Danville railroad, in Washington, decree of foreclosure and sale, which was issued by the United States circuit court for the eastern district of Virginia on the 13th of this month, has been signed by Judge Hagner, of the district supreme court.

The Mobile and Ohio railroad tax case, appealed from the supreme court of Tennessee, was reargued before the United States supreme court Tuesday. The question at issue was as to the force of a statute of the legislature of Tennessee, under which the officers of the state claim the right to subject the property of the corporation to taxation. The company officials claim that, under its charter, the corporation is exempt from taxation.

The Marion circuit court at Indianapolis has declared the apportionment act of 1893 constitutional. The action to test the validity of the act was brought at the instigation of the state republican committee, which took the ground that the democratic legislature of 1893 had foisted a gerrymander upon the people and so divided the legislative districts of the state as to give them the worst of the deal politically. An appeal will be taken to the supreme court.

A sensational feature of President Debs' address to the American Railway Union meeting at Minneapolis was his attack upon Judge Jenkins, in which he said: "Jenkins is the most corrupt scoundrel that was ever outside of prison walls. He is a man whose whole life, both public and private, is rotten to the very core, and I stand prepared to prove it, too. Jenkins is a disgrace to the bench upon which he sits, and to the people who elevated him to the position."

Attorney General Moloney, in an opinion rendered at Chicago decided that the gas companies of that city are maintaining a trust in violation of law and he will institute proceedings at once to have their charters annulled. The attorney general made the sensational statement in connection with the decision that he had positive knowledge that at the time he was speaking, the trust was so altering their books and records as to make a favorable showing at the trial of the case.

NO AUDIENCE FOR COXEY.

The Senate Refuses to Grant Him a Special Hearing.

A Washington dispatch says: By a vote on the Peffer resolution, the senate Monday showed that it had no sympathy with the Coxey movement. The resolution was put upon its passage and was voted down by 26 to 17. All the democrats except one voted in the negative. The resolution was to appoint a committee to receive the representatives of the army and hear them. The senators are perfectly willing to receive any petitions from the army and have them referred to the proper committees, but to appoint a committee to hear from them specially is more than the senate has ever done for any body of men, and naturally they refused to do it for Coxey and his army.

Flour For Glasgow.

The Noel Mill Company at Estell Springs, Tenn., have finished loading the second train of flour for export to Liverpool and Glasglow. It will be dilivered to the Johnston line of steamers at Port Royal for transportion to Liverpool.

HALLS OF CONGRESS

DAILY PROCEEDINGS OF BOTH HOUSE AND SENATE.

The Discussion of Important Measures Briefly Epitomized.

Immediately after the house was called to order Monday morning, Mr. Hepburn raised the point of "no quorum," on the approval of the journal, and the roll call was ordered. The journal was approved; ayes, 213; nays, none. The house then proceeded to the consideration of measures relating to the District of Columbia.

The O'Neill-Joy election case, from the eleventh district of Missouri, came up in the house again Tuesday through an effort by Mr. Bartholdt, of Missouri, to have read a series of resolutions adopted by a mass meeting of citizens of the district, denouncing the unseating of Joy. He was unsuccessful, however, the speaker ruling that the resolutions presented no question of privilege. The house then went into committee of the whole and took up the postoffice appropriation bill for the year ending June 30, 1895.

The house, at 12:40 Wednesday, resolved itself into committee of the whole for consideration of the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill.

At 1:45 Thursday the house went into committee of the whole and resumed the consideration of the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill.

THE SENATE.

In the senate, Monday, the credentials of Thomas Jordan Jarvis as senator from North Carolina to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. Vance, were presented by the vice president and placed on file. An effort was made py Mr. Peffer to get before the senate again his resolution for a select committee to give hearings to Coxey's army. He made a motion to take it up, but on the yeas and nays only 17 senators voted for it, including Mr. Hawley, who probably desired to give Allen an opportunity to reply to his remarks, and 26 against it. At 1 p. m. the tariff bill was taken up and Mr. Quay, who was entitled to the floor, yielded it to Mr. Washburn, who proceeded to address the senate in opposition to the bill.

Immediately after reading the journal Tuesday, the senate went into executive session. The object of the session was to dispose of the Florida nominations; among them that of Geo W. Wilson, to be collector of internal revenue for the Florida district, and in which no decision was reached. After a half hour spent in executive session, and another half hour given to morning business of no importance, the tariff bill was taken up at 1 o'clock. Mr. Mills addressed the senate in support of the bill, closing what is designated as "general debate."

In the senate Wednesday, after the introduction of a bill and resolution on the subject of the expected arrival in Washington of Coxey and his followers, the tariff bill was, at 1 p. m., laid before the senate, and Mr. Harris asked unanimous consent to have the bill taken up each day at 1 o'clock, p. m., and consideration continued till 6 p. m. Objection was made by Mr. Aldrich, acting for the republicans, to continuing daily sessions later than 5 o'clock. Mr. Harris then put his request in the shape of a motion, and on objection, it went over. Mr. Harris gave notice that he would submit this motion every day until some result is reached. Consideration of the bill was then begun, paragraph by paragraph, and Mr. Vest took the floor.

In the senate, Thursday, the Hon. Thomas Jordan Jarvis, the new senator from North Carolina, was sworn in. The Coxey movement was brought prominently to the front when Senator Allen's resolution of Wednesday was considered. Mr. Vest opened in a strong speech in which he denounced in unmeasured terms the lawlessness of the men in the west who are seizing trains and committing other rash acts. He said if these men intended to be peaceful and come here and looked over the capitol and buildings as other citizens, did, there was no objection, but any resolution tendering welcome to those who were breaking the laws of the United States were out of place. It was the duty of the senate to set the seal of its disapprobation upon these acts of lawlessness. Other speeches were made on the same line and after a long discussion Mr. Allen's resolution went over without action. The senate, by a vote of 5 to 6, agreed to take up the order for the daily meeting of the senate at 11 a. m. The order was then agreed to, Mr. Aldrich stating that there was general assent to it on the republican side. The tariff bill was taken up and Mr. Higgins made a speech in opposition to it.

A PRIEST'S CRIME.

In a Fit of Insane Jealousy He Murders a Young Girl.

A Cincinnati special says: Mary Gilmartin, a pretty clerk, employed by the Pulvermacher Galvanic Belt company, was shot and instantly killed while on her way to work. The man who committed the murder was arrested and gave the name of George Reed, aged 30, but letters in his pocket identify him as a Catholic priest, named Father Dominick O'Grady. Insane jealousy of the girl, and her desire to get rid of his unwelcome attentions, caused the tragedy.

To Issue Licenses.

The liquor question has been brought to an issue in Greenville, S. C. At a meeting of the city council, called to take action as to the right of the city to issue licenses, the discussion was long and at times animated. A test vote was taken, which resulted in a vote of 6 to 4 in favor of issuing liquor licenses.

NATIONAL CAPITAL.

WHAT IS GOING ON AT UNCLE SAM'S HEADQUARTERS.

Comment Concerning Transactions in the Various Departments.

The senate has confirmed the nomination of A. M. Avery, to be receiver of public moneys at Huntsville, Ala.

Consideration of the Bland bill, providing for re-enacting the free coinage law of 1837, has been postponed till the 3d of May.

The house elections committee was in session several hours Tuesday hearing arguments in the Goode-Eppes contested election case, from the fourth district of Virginia.

The comptroller of the currency has declared a first dividend of 30 per cent. in favor of creditors of the First National bank of Cedartown, Georgia, on claims proved amounting to $16,099.

Official figures received at the treasury show that of the gold shipped abroad Saturday the treasury lost $3,260,000, thus reducing its gold to $100,500,000, or $500,000 above the reserve notch.

The motion of Senator Harris for the senate to meet hereafter at 11 and devote at least one more hour to work on the tariff bill, making from five to six each day, passed the senate Thursday morning practically unopposed.

The house committee on coinage, weights and measures at Wednesday's session postponed consideration of the Meyer seigniorage bill until next session, and decided to report a bill for the free and unlimited coinage of silver. The Meyer bill was submitted to Carlisle and molded into shape by him before it was presented to the house. It provided for the coinage of the silver seigniorage in the treasury and authorized the secretary of the treasury to issue bonds at 3 per cent.

The silver republicans, under the lead of Teller and Dubois, have served notice on the eastern republicans that they be treated to the same medicine administered to the silver republicans during the fight against the repeal of the Sherman act. At that time, the silver republicans were kept in the chamber day and night, the eastern republicans joining with the democrats to make a quorum. Now the tables are to be turned. They take the ground that the people elected the democratic congress, and that the republicans are not responsible for the kind of bill they pass. So far as able, the silver republicans will afford the democrats every opportunity to pass the bill, but will vote against it on the final roll call.

Guarding the Treasury.

The treasury officials, while disclaiming any fears of trouble on account of the presence of the crowds incident to the coming of Coxey's army, have taken the precaution of adding fifty-five carbines and twenty revolvers to the treasury's supply of arms. The normal strength of the watch force of the treasury is seventy men, divided into two reliefs, and in addition to two or three dozen revolvers, there have always been thirty-five revolvers in the racks in the office of the captain of the watch, sufficient to supply one to each watchman on duty. It has been thought best, however, to increase the supply in view of the crowds of hangers-on of Coxey's army that are expected to arriae in the city.

THE EDITOR JAILED.

He is Made Responsible for What the Reporters Wrote.

Editor Rosewater, of the Omaha, Neb., Bee, was tried before Judge Scott, of the district court, on a charge of contempt and sentenced to thirty days in jail and a fine of $500 and costs. The case grew out of local articles published in The Bee, attacking Judge Scott's rectitude. Rosewater sought to show that he did not know of the articles before they were published, but the court found that he had shown animosity and must suffer for what his reporters wrote.

Oldest Living Officer.

Lieutenant Michael Moore, retired, has the distinction of being the oldest living officer of the United States army, and there probably is not an older military veteran in the world than he, for he is almost 100. He entered the army in 1812, as a musician in the Thirteenth Infantry, and his service has been almost continuous. He was retired in 1870—twenty-four years ago—and if he lives eight years longer he will have served his country for the extraordinary term of ninety years, for it is considered that a retired army officer is still in service so long as his name remains on the army list. Lieutenant Moore lives in Brooklyn and is likely to pass his 100th year. He was appointed a second lieutenant by General Grant in March, 1869, during the first month that the general was in the white house.—[New Orleans Picayune.

THE old geographical division of Tennessee into east, west and middle still holds, but the mountainous east Tennessee is growing in relative wealth and population. The counties that properly constitute west Tennessee now have a population of about 500,000; those of middle Tennessee have 800,000, and those of east Tennessee have 500,000. Civilization first broke into Tennessee from the east, when Daniel Boone passed through the mountain wall on the eastern boundary. The rugged character of the country delayed its development, but its mineral wealth has of late years brought population and many material improvements.

The National line steamer Helvetia, Captain Froliche, has been abandoned in a sinking condition off Cape Finistcere, Spain, and her crew and passengers landed at Gibraltar.

A telegram received at the miners' headquarters at Columbus, from Thomas Farry, dated Fire Creek, West Virginia, says that twenty-one mines in that state are closed. They employ 3,500 miners.

The Indiana Republican State Convention adjourned at Indianapolis, at 4 o'clock Thursday morning, after having been in continuous session for eighteen hours. A full state ticket was completed and agreed upon.

Attorner-General Olney was informed Thursday that the miners of the Couer D'Alene mines, in northern Idaho, had assembled to the number of 600 men, and threatened to capture a train and move east. The civil and military authorities have been advised to take proper measures to prevent violence to property.

Governor Flower, of New York, has vetoed the annual appropriation bill because the republican legislature refused to amend the bill by striking out the section to allow the attorney general to designate all counsel employed by state commissioners. This action of the governor will probably delay the adjournment.

The debenture holders of the Central railroad held a meeting at Savannah Wednesday, but came no nearer a determination of the matters before them than at the former meeting. The agreement which has been drawn had received only $610,000 worth of signatures and it has to have $1,000,000 before it can become operative. The amount was increased to about $700,000 at the meeting and the committee will canvass for further signatures before another meeting is called.

McGARRAHAN DEAD.

A Conspicuous Figure About Washington for Thirty Years.

William McGarrahan, one of the most conspicuous figures about Washington for the last thirty years, and better known by everybody in Washington as "Billy McGarrahan," died at the Providence hospital in that city Tuesday morning. He was about seventy years of age. The story of this old man, who had come to be known the country over as "The Claimant," is a sad one and full of romance. The claim for which he fought for thirty-six years and which made him a national figure, was to a rich tract of mineral land in California, known as the Panoche Grande Ranche.

During all his weary years of litigation and petitioning McGarrahan was nominally arraigned against the United States government. That is to say, if the title to the Panoche Grande did not vest in him, as he claimed, it did vest in the United States. Hence all his actions were brought against the United States and his petitions were made to congress.

Yet it was not the United States that really opposed him. The United States courts three times affirmed his title to the land; congressional investigating committees declared emphatically in his favor, and various officials of high degree who passed upon his claim expressed themselves as perfectly satisfied with the clearness of his title.

FOUGHT BY A CORPORATION.

His real opponent was a private corporation known as the New Idria Mining Company, which squatted upon his land shortly after he purchased it, and has ever since been making enormous profits out of the rich deposits of quicksilver found beneath its rocky surface.

At every turn the well paid lawyers and agents of the "New Idria" appeared to combat him, and though he repeatedly won and re-won his title, a war of technicality was waged upon him, and legal difficulties turned up at every step, cunningly devised, so as to block him and send him again and again to the courts and to congress for help.

A Popular Hotel Burned.

The Saranac Lake House, at Saranac Lake, N. Y., has been completely destroyed by fire, entailing a loss of $125,000. The fire was of incendiary origin, but the fiend is not known. There was $40,000 insurance. The bookings were larger for the coming season than ever before, and principally of guests from the south and southwest, to whom this was a favorite resort.

Lost His Case.

Watlington, the man who sued the Raleigh and Augusta railway for $5,000 damages on account of being struck by a cow which had been hurled from the track by an engine, lost his case in court at Raleigh. The verdict was in favor of the railway company.

Ogden Elected.

H. N. Ogden, democratic candidate for congress from the Shreveport, La., district has been elected to fill the unexpired term of M. C. Blanchard. His majority is about 5,000.

HER HAND.

Her hand,
A dainty hand,
No jewels flash
Their artificial art to aid
The beauty, of
The soft white hand
Of this fair maid.

Her hand,
A tender hand,
Its softening touch
Thrills through and through
My heart, and makes
Sensations, that till then
It never knew.

Her hand,
A soothing hand,
Were it but mine
To gently in her woman's way
Smooth troubles from
My worried brow,
'Twould make life but one happy day.

Her hand,
An angel's hand,
I ask to have,
And vastly to my own surprise
She answers yes;
And then her hand,
It trembles as in mine it lies.

Hot in Australia.

The weather in Australia during the present antipodean summer has been unusually hot and oppressive. In Adelaide, during December, the thermometer several times registered over 100 degrees in the shade and one day it climbed to 107 in the shade and 163 in the sun. In Melbourne the hundred notch has been reached more than once, and the scorching north winds have made the atmosphere exceedingly oppressive. The foregoing figures are from weather observatory readings, and probably do not represent by several degrees the temperature of the city streets.—Detroit Free Press.

Curious Story of a Spur.

The death of W. Oswald Charlton in England recalls the curious story of the Charlton spur—an interesting relic exhibited not long ago before the Newcastle Society of Antiquaries. From time immemorial the Charltons had possession of this spur, which, according to a border custom, was served up at dinner. The dish in which it was placed was covered; and, on the lid being lifted and the spur seen, the retainers knew that the larder was empty and that they were expected to fill it.—Chicago Herald.

United Confederate Veterans.

The fourth annual reunion of the Confederate Veterans was held in the Winnie Davis Wigwam at Birmingham April the 25th and 26th. Cheap railroad rates carried to that city thousands and thousands of people from every part of the southland and many from other sections of the Union. There were many affecting scenes as the old soldiers would greet each other.

Gen. Jno. B. Gordon presided over the meeting and proved as usual a master of assemblies. A number of stirring speeches were made by men who were in the thickest of the fight. Tableaux in which beautiful young women engaged gave in brief the history of secession The arrangements for the accommodation of the visitors were good and every body felt "great is Birmingham." The young men of the south in great numbers were present and that occasion we believe will stimulate them to a fresh reading of the deeds of their fathers, deeds which will never cease to be told in song and in story the world around. We regret that we cannot give the gist of all the speeches, a few words from Gen. Stephen D. Lee.

My fellow countrymen, young gentlemen, young ladies, listen to me. You have lived since the war, and have only heard of it from others. Learn now what this moment, the corner stone of which is now to be laid, is intended to commemorate. Look at these gray-haired veterans. Who are they? I will tell you. They are some of the survivors of an army of 600,000 men, who fought and kept back from our Southern soil an invading army of 2,864,272 men, (not including three and six months volunteers), or with the odds of 2 264,272 men more than they had to confront them. To this great odds must be added 300 vessels of war blockading our coasts and occupying our rivers manned by 35,000 sailors, preventing our getting supplies of arms, provisions, clothing, medicines and necessaries of all kinds. In this unequal contest, the Confederate army did not lay down its arms until it was completely overpowered, and it had only 100,000 effective fighting men for duty in the field left of that army of 600,000 men, while the federals had over 1,000,000 men for duty, or ten men for ever Confederate soldier, and all our arsenals, munitions of war and supplies were exhausted or captured. Before the end of the conflict, the Confederate army had lost over one half of the 600,000 men, or 325,000 men on the death roll. It had fought over our beloved Southland almost foot by foot on nearly 2,000 battle fields. It had inflicted a death roll on the enemy of 359,528 men. 275,000 of whom lie buried beneath our Southern soil. Comrades of the gray, we made a record unsurpassed in the annals of war or history.

Let us go a little more into details. In the bloodiest of European wars, statistics show that the number killed or mortally wounded on the battle field, has not exceeded three per cent of the soldiers actually engaged, while in the great American war the Federals lost five per cent, and the Confederates ten per cent. We see that the American soldier stands ahead of the European soldier, and that to heroic aspect, so long as the Confederate banner floated to the breeze, the confederate soldier stands at the head in the history of the world. The more the facts connected with the war are brought out, the more honor is reflected on the valor, endurance of hardship, and the fortitude of the soldiers of the Confederacy.

Tell me why not believe our cause was a just one! No people could have made such a fight, could have stood up so long against such odds, had they not been actuated by a firm and unwavering adherence to the principles of self-government, and a determinaton to maintain inalienable rights which they had inherited from their forefathers.

This is said in no boastful spirit, but to show what a gallant resistance was made by the south; actuated by a lofty patriotism, before her flag was furled for ever. We who participated can hardly believe the incredible figures. Our own children, when they comprehend them, will stare in wonder and say, Impossible! If on every monument we have erected in the South, only these figures are put the numbers composing the Federal army, and the few confederates who opposed them it would need nothing else, but every Confederate accepted the result of the war as final, and in good faith, and we rejoice that the men who fought so well on both sides, believing they right, are again united under the flag of their fore-fathers, which covers our common country.

My comrades: When we see desolation everywhere when we feel dismayed at our broken fortunes and disappoite hopes; when we know life means for us only toil, poverty, and priyations until the end, go and read that record. When we feel that we have made poor crops, and mortgages and debts have pressed upon us, when we feel utterly discouraged and cast down, go and read our record. You will rejoice that there is a country where honor is first and not wealth, wher patriotic endeavor and duty are everything, riches only a secondary consideration. Thank God! there are such men; those who have been and those who are now. I uncover my head with reverence in honor of our comrades' living and dead, who bore the proud title, a "Confederate soldier." I rejoice that we raise this monument to the memory of such heroes. It is an irresistible impulse of homage to their voluntary immolation on the altar of their country. It is to perpetuate their stainless name and untarnished honor. It is that our children may thrill with the thought that they are descended from such a race.

Col. M. D Moore who read the historical sketch before the United Confederate Veterans gave much valuable history which should be known by every southern citizen, old and young. We heard from the lips of individuals of the splendid service done by the hand-ful of confederate soldiers, but in figures we read of men with the poorest equipments holding at bay for four years, not only the north, but 500,000 foreign soldiers, 550,000 white men from the south and 200,000 southern negroes a grand total with what the north raised of 3,000,000 The total number of confederate soldiers reached only to 625,000 men At the close of the war there were about 300,000 confederate soldiers surviving, but less than 100,000 effective as a fighting force. The federal forces lost 359,529 men in battle and by disease.

At the close of the war there were in the field 1,000 516 federal soldiers, of these 797,807 were reported as effectives, able for duty. So it is seen that the north had seven fighting soldiers where the south had one. Besides the number of soldiers killed, wounded and captured, it cost the north about one million dollars a day to carry on the war. History shows that the federal troops won no victory in the war when their forces were less than the confederates. On an average the federal forces were six times as great as the confederates in every battle. Viewing these facts gathered from reliable sources, surely, as the historian remarks, there is little ground for our northern brethren to boast of how they whipped us. While the northern army contained many men who honestly fought for the preservation of the Union yet thousands were hirelings who cared only to draw their pay and rations.

The men of the south fought for a principle. They believed they were right and were willing to die for the cause, hence it mattered little whether their pay came in confederate or gold money. They fought for home and native land. These are the things which enabled this small band to fight so well and so long.

The defeat of the south was due not so much to northern skill, forces and money, as to a divided south Large numbers of southern men lacked that love of section which would lead them to scorn the gold of the north, they were cowards who failed to stand by their brethren in time of danger. These were the men who as spies informed the enemy of our movements and helped to over-run their own native land.

And now as we look about over this beautiful, hopeful, glorious old south land, which has grown rich and great, despite the devastations of war and reconstructionism, it is instructive to inquire what part these traitors to the southern cause have played in this latter warfare. They joined arms against us in war and when peace was declared they linked hands with the radicals and the the carpet baggers to rob and further crush a conquered but noble people. And they were routed by the same spirit that sustained southern Patriots during the four long and bloody years. The heel of the despot was hurled from our necks and for twenty years this section has made progress that astonished the world. But ever and anon this rame old element which is in the south, yet not of the south, seeks alliance with our enemies hopeful that she may yet see this solid south split in twain and her sons and daughters reduced to serfdom. Even now New England gold and silver are in the hands of southern men for the purpose of purchasing southern newspapers and southern men to the suport of a cause whose success would put back the hands of our prosperity and happiness for twenty years. No wonder that the heart of every true southern man is loathing the men who are leading in such a scheme. So long as the white men of the south are united so long are they invincible, and we beg each one who reads these lines to do his duty in the present hour so that these traitors may be buried so deep beneath the indignation of Patriots that they will neve again trouble our fair land with their treachery.

Reply to Rev. E. S Starr.

On monday April 2nd 1894 while going from Stanton to Selma by train Rev. E. S. Starr came to me on train and spoke of the piece that was printed in the Chilton View in regard to his telling me that a prominent Presbyterian Preacher baptised a dead child in Selma about one year ago. He said he did not remember saying any thing on that subject but said he did not doubt that such a conversation did occur as about that time a preacher in Georgia did baptise a dead baby and it went the rounds through the papers and he supposed he got the place confused with Selma as I understood it to be Selma I told him if he could make it appear that this thing ocured in Georgia instead of Alabama it was alright with me and it should never come up again, but from his statement in the Chilton View I see that he dodges the question by saying that I am mistaken. if I know my right hand from my left I am not mistaken, I remember on the 3rd sabbath in May 1893 Rev. E. S. Starr going with me to Fellowship Church. The first thing he spoke of was a sermon got ten up on the subject of circumcision by a prominent presbyterian Preacher and the sermon was published in the Selma paper. The next week says he the Baptist preacher of Selma gets up a sermon on some subject and it was published in the Selma paper; The next thing he spoke of was a thing occuring that caused great criticism, he said a lady lived near to the Presbyterian Preacher, in Selma that had a little child to die. The mother of this dead childie went to this Presbyterian Preacher and said to him while my child lived I did not discharg my duty towards it, now its dead and I request you to baptise it. He said that the preacher said to the mother of the dead child the child is dead and I cannot do it any good but I will baptise it to gratify you. Rev E. S, Starr said to me what would you have done under the circumstances. I said Bro Starr, with due regard to your fellings and opinion I would have suffered myrterdom before I would have established such a precedent. The next thing Rev. E. S, Starr spoke of was being in montgomery on the jury. While there he heard Rev. Mr Pierson a Cumberland Presbyterian preach from text found in Math 27.40, If thou be the son of God come down from the cross. The next Subject was telling me about Hon Diggs of Selma, dying in Montgomery of heart failure-When I rehearsed to Rev. E. S. Starr the different topics of the day as we went to Fellowship Church he remembered each one except the baptising of the dead baby. Now I have told you the truth about this matter, told it knowing that ere long Bro Starr and myself must appear before the bar of God and give an account of all that we have ever said and done what I have said shall until I appear before that one that is all truth and justice. If there be any change in statements someone else must make them.

Yours Sincerely.

J. W. Dunaway.

The Banner of last weeks issue sought to vindicate itself in the premises which the View called the attention of the Democratic tax payers to relative to County printing. The View abstains from any criticisms on the diction or rhetorical flourishes indulged in by this subtile Editor of the Banner, but will relinquish all such to the intelligent people of Chilton County. Why is it that the official "Pap" as the Banner truly expresses it, no longer contributes to the sustenance of the View? Is it because said "Pap" loves justice, fairness and right? Is it becuse said "Pap" desires that the tax payers (Democratic as well as Populite) of Chilton County, should place the County patronage where least public expense is incurred? Ah no! But on the other hand said "Pap" was moved to pity on account of the whimperings of this Monument of orthogophical purity, who in infantile distress whined, "I ain't go in to bid on County Printin' at all if the View has to bid!" Thereupon the said "Pap" wiped away the tears of this petted child and declared that "it would be unfair to allow the View to bid on the County Printing." In instance refered to by the Banner relating to the County Paupers, it is quite easy to understand that the Banner would charge less for such advertisement than the View, the two papers being in open competiton, But as to relative difference of rates, charg edby the two papers that is not the question in the matteri at isne It is the that, it would not be right to allow the View to bid against the Banner" what a stupendous structure of executive stupidity and narrow minded selfishbness! If the commissioners court had openly said to the View "We do not intend extending to you any of the county patronage for the reason that the Banner is a Populite sheet in the interest of Kolb, the Republican Party, ignorant and vicious rule to the end that virtue, intelligence and white supremacy shall be eliminated from this Southland and we Populites in aiding and abetting in our fullest sympathy this mode of reform cannot patronize you, a lover and espouser of a cause opposed to ours" this would have been manly and consistent, to say the least of it. Consistency is a jewel wherever found, be it in a noble cause or a perverse one.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
DR—G. C. OSGOOD,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE,
Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

Who Set the Fashions?

As respects the launching of fashions for ladies, it is not improbable that well-known names, whether they be aristocratic, operatic or dramatic, render very signal service in enabling successive types of the good ship, "Fashionable Frivolity," to walk the waters like so many things of life; but before it is constructed it must be devised, and, if not absolutely invented, it must be skillfully adapted from some bygone mode, just as at the present our customieres are reviving the leg-of-mutton sleeves, the long mantles, the feather boas, the high muffs, and the voluminous hats of 1830. Yet another factor is required in the introduction of a new or resuscitated fashion. There must be individuality, and that of the strongest kind, in the dress-maker or the bonnet-builder, be these artists male or female. The purveyor of toilets must be a personage; there must be a great Worth or a Felix, who for a while is Pontifex Maximus of the mode, and before whom the entire "smart" world bows down and accepts implicity his imperative and sometimes slightly capricious decrees.—New York Sun.

VETERANS' REUNION

A MIGHTY HOST GATHERED AT BIRMINGHAM.

Fourth Annual Reunion of the Confederate Veterans.

The fourth annual reunion of confederate veterans was formally opened at Birmingham, Wednesday morning, by General Fred S. Ferguson, of the First Alabama brigade, in Winnie Davis wigwam, at 9 o'clock. There were fully 10,000 persons in the building and many could not gain access to the immense hall.

The stage was thronged with generals and colonels, most of whom wore gray uniforms. The opening prayer was made by Dr. J. William Jones, vice-chaplain general. The audience stood, and at the conclusion of the eloquent invocation, the old soldiers responded with cheers and amens.

Major-General Ferguson, of Alabama, called the convention to order and introduced Governor Jones, who made a brief but eloquent welcoming address in behalf of the state and was followed by Hon. David J. Fox, mayor, on behalf of Birmingham.

GORDON AND PANDEMONIUM.

Then came Gordon and pandemonium. Before Ferguson's introduction, there were wild yells of "Gordon!" "Dixie!" and simultaneously, as the Georgia soldier-senator faced the vast throng, handkerchiefs and hats waved in the air, the band played "Dixie" and it was many minutes before the yelling ceased. As it did, the delegates from the Lee camp, of Virginia, marched in, headed by a drum corps of boys and enthusiastic cheering broke out afresh. At the conclusion of General Gordon's address he was loudly cheered. The band played "The Bonnie Blue Flag," and the veterans went wild with enthusiasm. On behalf of the Texans, General Watts presented Gordon with a beautiful gavel, which was accepted in an appropriate reply. The business of the convention was then begun, and the enrollment of delegates taken up.

There were over 500 camps represented at roll call. A subscription toward the Chicago confederate monument was then taken up and $1,500 was handed in in a very few minutes. Routine business then followed.

The local military gave an exhibition battalion drill in the afternoon, witnessed by thousands.

At night a tableau of the states, in which the prettiest young married women from each southern state participated was represented at the wigwam.

RESOLUTION OF THANKS.

The following resolution was unanimously adopted at Wednesday's session. "Resolved, That the thanks of the confederate veterans are hereby tendered to the congress of the United States for establishing the Chickamauga and Chattanooga national military park, where the history of the heroic fighting on both sides is being impartially preserved, and that the governors and legislatures of the southern states, and especially our senators and representatives in congress, are requested to actively co-operate with the secretary of war and the national commission, acting under him, in furthering the work of establishing the national park."

FOR A SOUTHERN HISTORY.

The report of the historic committee, of which General Stephen D. Lee, of Mississippi, is chairman, was read. The report says that while the south has had much to do with making the history of the nation, it has done little toward writing it. The histories that have been written by northern historians have naturally been biased. It is recommended that data be gathered for a correct southern history and that the legislatures of the southern states and the authorities of the schools be urged to adopt the book for use in the schools.

The Second Day.

When the veterans' convention opened Thursday morning the secretary read in thundering tones a list of prominent officers, requested to come up on the platform.

The report of the Jefferson Davis monument committee, made by General Cabell, showed that over twelve thousand dollars are in the hands of the treasurer. The fund is for the purpose of erecting a hundred thousand dollar monument and an assessment of twenty-five cents a year was called for from every veteran until the fund is raised.

General Miller, deputy commander for Alabama of the Grand Army of the Republic, presented General Gordon with a handsome cane cut from Barlow's Hill, on Gettysburg battlefield. In an eloquent tribute he told how Gordon saved the life of his general, Francis Barlow, on that battlefield. The presentation occasioned another wild outburst of cheering.

FIGHT ON THE CONSTITUTION.

A warm fight arose over the adoption of the report on constitution and by-laws, made by General Underwood. The convention divided into factions, one favoring adoption, the other favoring postpouement. The report was adopted. It provides for a revenue of about four thousand dollars a year.

The report of the committee on pension for Mrs. Jefferson Davis, reported that the legislatures of Georgia, Alabama, North Carolina, Tennessee, Kentucky and Texas, had been asked to appropriate $500 each for such a pension, but that not one had done so. One reason was, that she was not a resident of these states, and had become a resident of New York.

ATLANTA'S INVITATION ENDORSED.

A hot discussion arose over a resolution endorsing Atlanta's invitation to the Grand Army of the Republic. Dr. J. William Jones spoke against it. He said that the Grand Army of the Republic was composed largely of men "invisible in war and invincible in peace." He protested in furious tones. F. H. Busbee, of North Carolina, eloquently sustained the resolution. He said that Atlanta was a great, growing and patriotic American city. Her hospitable invitation should be re-echoed by every southern soldier and every brave southern man. Major E. J. Gordon, of Alabama, a brother of General John B. Gordon, spoke in refutation of Dr. Jones' charge. The G. A. R. men were the soldiers who fought. He said that the organization was made up of brave men and he urged the endorsement of the Atlanta invitation. Several others spoke. The report was adopted by an overwhelming majority.

GENERAL GORDON RE-ELECTED.

The election of officers resulted in the unanimous election of General John B. Gordon as commander-in-chief. General W. H. Jackson second general in command; department commander of the army of Northern Virginia, Fitzhugh Lee; department commander of the army of Tennessee, General S. D. Lee; department commander of trans-Mississippi department, General W. L. Cabell; chief clerk, Miss Amanda Childress.

TO HOUSTON NEXT YEAR.

The matter of the next meeting place was taken up. The invitation of Houston, Texas, was presented in several speeches. Atlanta's invitation, accompanied by the mayor and council's greeting, the Press Club's invitation, that of Fulton County Confederate Veterans' Association and the Sons of Confederate Veterans of Fulton county was presented. Mayor Ellison presented the invitation of Richmond. The vote was taken by states, resulting in the choice of Houston, Tex., which was made unanimous. This closed the work of the greatest gathering of confederate veterans ever held.

THE CLOSING CEREMONIES.

Thursday afternoon the ceremonies attendant upon the laying of the corner-stone of the confederate monument in Capitol park, occurred. The following program was carried out:

In the early afternoon General Gordon, commander-in-chief, reviewed the legion of veterans. The escort of honor, made up of armed and uniformed militiamen and cadets, headed the procession. The veterans formed into two great corps, the first under command of Lieutenant General Cabell, and the second under that of Lieutenant General S. D. Lee. The Sons of Veterans of Alabama brought up the rear of the great line. At the park General Gordon made a few remarks on the laying of the corner stone, and General Stephen D. Lee, of Mississippi, delivered the oration of the day. In the evening there was a reception at the Southern Club to the fair representatives from the several states.

THE FIRST CLASH.

DEPUTY MARSHALS AND COMMONWEALERS IN BATTLE.

Industrialists Capture a Train and are Arrested by Troops.

A Washington special says: In addition to the request of the judge of the United States court, the United States district attorney and the United States marshal for the district of Montana for federal aid in arresting the Hogan contingent of the army of the unemployed for seizing a train at Butte, Montana, against the mandate of the United States court. President Cleveland has received the following from the governor of Montana, which was given to the press:

"HELENA, MONTANA.—To the president of the United States—Information reaches me by wire that the Coxeyites, fleeing the state with a stolen train, were overtaken at Billings by the United States deputy marshals who were trying to serve a writ emanating from the United States court. A fight ensued. One deputy marshal was wounded and the leader of the Coxeyites was wounded. The deputy marshals were overpowered and driven off with revolvers and other weapons. The mob then surrounded the deputies and now hold them prisoners. The train of the Coxeyites is within a few hours' run of Fort Keogh. It is impossible for the state militia to overtake them.

"As governor of Montana I hereby request you to have the federal troops at Fort Keogh intercept, take into custody, arrest and hold these Coxeyites, subject to the orders of the United States court issuing the writ referred to. If the Coxeyites pass Fort Keogh before orders can emanate from you for their apprehension, I request that federal troops be ordered to overtake them. Promptness is required.

"G. E. RICKARTS,
"Governor of Montana."

TROOPS TO ARREST THEM.

When these facts were reported to the department of justice they were brought to the attention of the president with the recommendation of the attorney general that the federal authority be supported by troops, that being the sole alternative left to the government. The president at once called the general commanding the army into the consultation, and after considering the matter, General Schofield was directed to call upon the commander of the department of Dakota, in which military department the affair took place, to send a sufficient force of troops to arrest all persons engaged in the unlawful seizure of the Northern Pacific train at Butte, Mon., and to hold the train and persons until they could be delivered to the United States marshal for Montana subject to the order of the United States district court.

THE SOLDIERS HAVE THEM.

Later advices from St. Paul, Minn., are to the effect that the Coxeyites were arrested by Col. Page's troops at Forsythe, Mon., forty-six miles west of Fort Keogh.

ANOTHER AT TERRE HAUTE.

A dispatch from Terre Haute, Ind., says: That contingent of Coxey's army under command of Gen. Louis C. Frye forcibly took possession of an eastbound freight train, leaving the city at 3 o'clock. The officers of the army claim to have paid the railroad company for transportation as far as Brazil, twenty miles east of Terre Haute.

The Strike Spreading.

The miners' strike has spread to the mines operated by the Pennsylvania railroad, and it is expected that the big system will be tied up within a few days. Three thousand miners employed by the Pennsylvania railroad in mines along the Kiskimenetos river have stopped work.

ON TO WASHINGTON.

ARMIES OF INDUSTRIALS MARCHING UPON THE CAPITAL.

The Crusade of the Commonwealers Spreading all Over the West.

From all over the west comes the news that the crusade of industrials is spreading. Over a dozen armies are now in the field. In all the large towns, companies are rapidly being formed. The armies, detachments and divisions now in the field in the west are: General Kelly, 1,000 men, Neola, Iowa; General Fry, 1,000 men, Terre Haute, Indiana; General Fry's second division, 900 men, McLeansboro, Illinois; General Grayson, 100 men, Plattville, Colorado; General Galven, 200 men, Loveland, Ohio; Sergeant Randall, 500 men, Chicago; 100 men at Little Falls, Minnesota; 500 men at Butte, Montana; 100 men at Monmouth, Illinois; 200 men at Ottumwa, Ia., Captain Sullivan, 1,000 men, Chicago; 150 men at Anderson, Indiana; and General Aubrey, 700 men at Indianapolis, Indiana. Besides these armies, large numbers of recruits are pushing forward to the various lines of march with the intention of joining the large bodies.

COXEY'S MAIN ARMY.

After three days' stay in Hagerstown, Md., the Army of the Commonweal broke camp Monday morning and made for Turner's Gap. Just after the departure of the Commonweal army, considerable speculation was aroused by a dispatch from Washington, stating that a troop of cavalry had started from Fort Myer, bound for Fredericks. There is a rumor that the Commonwealers had been making overtures to the strikers in the coal region, and there was the possibility of a deluge of miners seizing trains to rush down and striking the line of march somewhere in Fredericks or Montgomery.

FIFTH REGIMENT IN OREGON.

A special from Portland, Oregon, says: The fifth regiment of the Industrial Army, six hundred strong, expects to leave for Washington at once. The officers hope to secure railroad transportation, but it is hardly probable that the railroads will accede to their demands.

PREPARING FOR HIM AT WASHINGTON.

The Commissioners of the District of Columbia will issue a proclamation or statement concerning the coming of Coxey and his army. It is understood that this action will be taken at the suggestion of President Cleveland. Fears that the arrival of Coxey will mark the concentration in Washington of elements bent on disturbing law and order, have been impressed on the commissioners by many prominent men, and the president has also been told by some of his advisers that it would be well to take measures to show the intending evil-doers that the authorities will brook no interference with the maintenance of law and order in the district.

The president was loath to take action in the matter in the name of the Federal government, but believing that some positive steps were necessary, he suggested that the district commissioners, as the representatives of the local authority, issue some sort of statement to offset the rumored intentions of the extremists to mark the arrival of Coxey the opportunity for a demonstration that might develop into a serious riot.

MOULDERS TO GO TO WASHINGTON.

At a meeting of five hundred union moulders, at Chicago, it was announced that the three unions of Chicago would send five hundred men to Washington to present their grievances to congress. They will move on trains. Delegations from a dozen towns in Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin are expected to join them.

GROWTH OF THE SOUTH.

The Industrial Situation as Reported For the Past Week.

A review of the industrial situation in the south for the past week shows that the strike among the coal miners in the Birmingham and Jellico districts of Alabama and Tennessee has unsettled business for the time being. It has not proved to be as general as was predicted, but several thousand men have gone out of the mines. Impartial observers believe that the strike will be a short one, partly because the demands of the strikers are considered to be extreme, and also because there is a lack of funds with which to support them while out of work.

In addition to the reduction in freight rates on iron pipe to northern points recently announced a reduction of a similar kind has been made to southern and southwestern points, to take effect May 1. It is unfortunate that these reductions are counter-balanced by labor troubles. As it is claimed that fuel supplies are sufficient for a month to come, it is hoped that an adjustment will be made before that time expires. In other industrial lines reports are encouraging. The effects of the cold wave have not proved as disastrous as was anticipated.

Forty-six new industries were established or incorporated during the week, among which are the Lee Coupling and Manufacturing Co., of San Antonio, Texas, capital $500,000, a gold mining company at Charleston, W. Va., with the same capital, and a $200,000 compress at Galveston, Texas. Housekeepers Should Remember.

The Government Chemists, after having analyzed all the principal brands of baking powder in the market, in their reports placed the "Royal" at the head of the list for strength, purity and wholesomeness; and thousands of tests all over the country have further demonstrated the fact that its qualities are, in every respect, unrivaled.

Avoid all baking powders sold with a gift or prize, or at a lower price than the Royal, as they invariably contain alum, lime or sulphuric acid, and render the food unwholesome.

BACTERIA is likely to be blamed for the ills that flesh is heir to. Professor Schenck now maintains that what we call a "cold" is really due to these invisible pests. When one enters a cold room, after being heated, says the Chicago Herald, the bacteria flock to the warm body, and enter by the open pores of the skin. Whatever may be said of this hypothesis he seems to prove by experiment, that bacteria in the neighborhood of a warm body move toward it.

If your nearest, best and most esteemed neighbors had written the following letters they could be no more worthy of your confidence than they now are, coming, as they do, from well known, intelligent and trustworthy citizens who, in their several neighborhoods, enjoy the fullest confidence and respect of all.

Mrs. F. L. Inman, of Manton, Wexford Co., Mich., whose portrait heads this article, writes as follows: "I began taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription about a year ago. For years I have suffered with falling and ulceration of the womb, but to-day, I am enjoying perfect health.

I took four bottles of the 'Prescription' and two of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Every lady suffering from female weakness should try the 'Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery.'"

Miss Mary J. Tanner, North Lawrence, St. Lawrence Co., N. Y., writes: "I was sick for four years. For two years I could do no work. I had five different physicians, who pronounced my case a poor or impoverished condition of the blood, and uterine trouble. I suffered a great deal with pain in both sides, and much tenderness on pressing over the womb. I bloated at times in my bowels and limbs; was troubled with leucorrhea. I could not sleep, and was troubled with palpitation of the heart. Suffered a great deal of pain in my head, temples, forehead and eyes. I had a troublesome cough, raised a great deal and at times experienced a good deal of pain in my chest and lungs. My voice at times was very weak. I suffered excruciating monthly, periodical pains. Since taking seven bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription some time ago, I have enjoyed better health than I have for more than four years previously; in fact, for several months past I have been able to work at sewing. I have gained in weight thirty-nine pounds since taking your medicines; the soreness and pain have disappeared." Yours truly,

Mary J. Tanner

"Favorite Prescription" is a positive cure for the most complicated and obstinate cases of leucorrhœa, excessive flowing, painful menstruation, unnatural suppressions, and irregularities, prolapsus, or falling of the womb, weak back, "female weakness," anteversion, retroversion, bearing-down sensations, chronic congestion, inflammation and ulceration of the womb, inflammation, pain and tenderness in ovaries, accompanied with "internal heat."

Address World's Dispensary Medical Association, Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y.

Mrs. Alex. Robertson, of Half Rock, Mercer Co., Mo., writes: "For twenty years I suffered with womb disease and most of the time I was in constant pain which rendered life a great burden. I cannot express what I suffered. I had eight doctors and all the medicine I had from them failed—the one after the other.

I was nervous, cold hands and feet, palpitation, headache, backache, constipation, leucorrhea and no appetite, with bearing-down pains. I got so weak I could not walk around. I had to keep my bed, thinking I would never get any better.

One day my husband got one of your little books and read it to me. He said there was nothing doing me any good. I said I would try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I did try it. After the first few weeks my appetite was better, I was able to sit up in bed. I wrote to the World's Dispensary Medical Association, at Buffalo, N. Y., and described my case; they sent me a book on woman's diseases. I read carefully and followed the directions as near as I could and took the medicine for two years. With the blessing of God and your medicines, I am entirely cured. That was three years ago."

Yours truly,

Mrs. Alex Robertson

The claims amounts to about $6,000,000, and if it ever goes through, Mr. Barnes will get a good round fee. It may, however, take many years to induce congress to pay such a big claim.

During the executive session Monday Senator Jones presented the amendments to the tariff bill which have been considered and agreed to by the democratic senators, known as the compromise committee. There are over 400 of them and it makes a new bill, or a measure greatly differing from the Wilson bill and from the senate bill in any form in which it has been presented. The amendments heretofore presented by Senator Vest and reported from the finance committee are endorsed by the committee on compromise. There is a general increase in the bill, and in some schedules the increases are very marked. Many of the changes are unimportant and consist of a restoration of the house duties, which the senate had decreased. A number of articles have been taken from the free list, chief among these being agricultural products.

Coxey Before the Committee.

Coxey appeared before the House Committee on Labor on Wednesday, and presented a petition from the Commonweal Army that he and Carl Browne be permitted to address the committee in behalf of the Coxey bills for the construction of good roads, and for the issue of non-interest bearing bonds. Coxey supplemented the reading of the petition with a brief statement, and then answered the questions put to him by members of the committee. He asserted that the Commonwealers had tramped to Washington, and now they wanted a committee appointed to hear them on the goood roads bill and the non-interest bearing bonds bill. There are billions of dollars' worth of improvements throughout the country, to be made, he said, and there are millions of men to make them. There is but one thing standing in the way, and that is money. Ninety-nine per cent of the people, he asserted, ought to have the same privileges that have

THE SENATE.

In the senate, Friday, Mr. Vest, member of the finance committee, presented the amendments to the tariff bill agreed upon in the democratic conference. These amendments relate to the income tax to be collected from corporations providing for a tax of 2 per cent on the net profits or income (above the ordinary expense) of all banks, trusts, railroad insurance and other companies—not to apply, however, to the building and loan associations that make loans to their shareholders. The amendments were laid on the table and ordered printed. Another armistice was agreed upon in the tariff debate. At 2 o'clock, Mr. Harris, in charge of the bill, moved an executive session.

The routine morning business Saturday was very brief, occupying less than ten minutes. Then the calendar was taken up under rule 8 for bills unobjected to.

The senate, at 11:30, Monday, went into executive session, the Chinese treaty being the matter immediately before it.

In the senate Tuesday, the credentials of John F. Gear as senator from Iowa were presented and laid on the table. The tariff bill was taken up and Mr. Hoar addressed the senate in opposition to it.

In the senate, Wednesday, Allen's resolution for the appointment of a select committee to investigate the police assault upon and the arrest of Coxey, Browne and Jones in the capitol grounds on May 1st, was laid before the senate and Allen argued in its support. After he had spoken for upwards of an hour, Sherman arose and replied briefly. The resolution went over and the tariff bill was taken up. Aldrich addressed the senate on the pending amendment.

TOTAL PROHIBITION

THE SUPREME COURT OF SOUTH CAROLINA HEARD FROM.

No One Has the Authority to Issue Liquor Licenses.

A Columbia, S. C., special says: The supreme court of the state Tuesday rendered a decision which would seem to indicate that South Carolina has total prohibition. The court's decision is, however, not entirely satisfactory. The court decides that, under the law as it now stands, there is no authority invested with the power to grant licenses for the sale of spirituous liquors within the limits of this state, and hence the action of the city council of Florence in granting the injunction as asked for by the petitioners, in the case first named, must be granted.

In the second place the petitioner moves for his discharge from custody on the ground that there is now no law forbidding the sale of spirituous liquors within the limits of the state. The court decides that this is a mistaken view of the law. On the contrary it holds that the act of 1892, commonly called the "dispensary act," having been declared unconstitutional in all its provisions excepting that forbidding the granting of licenses to sell spirituous liquors after the day therein named, the repealing clause of that act failed, and must be regarded as if never enacted, and hence the previous law forbidding the sale of spirituous liquors without a license remains of force, under which the petitioner may be lawfully indicted. In addition to this, he may also be proceeded against for a violation of the ordinances of the city of Florence mentioned in the warrant, under which he has been arrested and is now held in custody.

Governor Tillman says that he has no money with which to enforce prohibition, and that without money prohibition cannot be enforced.

The Road to be Extended.

The bondholders' committee of the Savannah, Americus and Montgomery Railroad Company decided to reorganize and take the property out of the receiver's hands. It was also decided to extend the road seventy-four miles into Savannah. One million dollars has been pledged by a syndicate composed of New York, Baltimore and Richmond bankers for these purposes.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF.

MADE UP OF ITEMS FROM ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD

The steamer Australia arrived at San Francisco Saturday morning from Honolulu, bringing advices to the 28th ultimo. All was quiet. Admiral Irwin, who was relieved by Admiral Walker and Paul Neurman were passengers on the Australia.

What appears to be a revival of the anarchist agitation was inaugurated in New York Sunday. Over one thousand persons, the majority of whom were of respectable appearance, assembled at the Thalia theater and liberally applauded the fiery speeches that were delivered.

A sensation has been caused at St. Louis, Mo., by the announcement that Bishop D. S. Tuttle, of the Missouri diocese of the Protestant Episcopal church, has joined the Salvation army. The announcement of this fact was made from the platform of the Midland congress of the army by Mrs. Ballington Booth.

A London cable dispatch says: The reduction of the government's majority in the house of commons on nearly every important division must be accepted from all but the most extreme partisan point of view as an omen of an early dissolution, and few persons are to be found who regard the situation in any other light.

A cable dispatch from Rotterdam, Holland, says: A fire was discovered in the hold of the steamship Edam, which required most strenuous efforts of the ship's crew to subdue. The flames were finally extinguished and an investigation showed that the cargo is considerably damaged. The ship is only slightly injured.

Drexel, Morgan & Co., of New York, through their agents, John W. & D. S. Green, in Louisville, Ky., have purchased the bonds of those holders of the Louisville Southern opposed to the Richmond Terminal reorganization plan. This settles the matter and the Louisville Southern now passes into the reorganized Richmond Terminal system.

Mr. Kohlsaat has sold his half interest in the Chicago Inter Ocean to his partner, William Penn Nixon. It is understood that Mr. Nixon pays $400,000 for the stock. The paper is a fine paying property. Mr. Kohlsaat is very wealthy. He used to work on the streets of Chicago. He had an ambition to own a great newspaper, and the aim of his life was to that end.

A special from Connelsville, Pa., says: The strikers have gained their point of a complete shut-down in the coke region. Rainey's men have nearly all gone out, leaving only a few at work at Paul and Moyer. Fort Hill, Rainey, Elm Grove and Mt. Braddock are shut down tight. When the other operatives learned that Rainey had been closed down, they concluded to remain idle.

Heavy consumers of coal in St. Louis, Mo., who had feared serious results from a prospective famine in that much-needed article, are considerably relieved by a telegram received by Assistant General Manager Simpson, of the Consolidated Coal Company, stating that both mines Nos. 6 and 7, in Staunton, Ill., were in full operation again and that the coal strike in that section of Illinois is drawing to a close.

The severest storm known for years swept over Iowa City, Saturday afternoon. In fifteen minutes more than $200,000 damage was done to buildings and contents. The damage in the country is very great. The storm came from the west, preceded by dark clouds with vivid streaks of lightning and mutterings of thunder. Hailstones fell thick and fast, crushing through plate glass windows, peppering roofs and flooding stores and dwellings.

COXEY ORDERED TO MOVE.

The Sanitary Authorities Condemn His Camping Ground.

A Washington dispatch says: The district commissioners spent several hours Wednesday considering the report of the health department which pronounced the Coxey camp a menace to the health of the city, and recommended, in the strongest language, that it be vacated. Dr. Hammett, health officer, declared that it was utterly impossible to make the camp habitable. It is very likely that a warrant will be sworn out charging Coxey with maintaining a nuisance. Coxey is getting ready to meet such a proceeding. He had a number of men at work improving the ground during the morning, but illness in the army is steadily increasing. Coxey was served with a notice to comply with the health regulations in regard to this camp within forty-eight hours, otherwise he will be prosecuted under a statute which imposes a fine of from $5 to $25 for each offense.

TOURISTS RESCUED.

They Were Imprisoned in a Cavern for Nine Days.

A cable dispatch from Gratz, Austria, says: A diver succeeded in reaching the party of tourists who have been imprisoned in the stalactite cavern at Sourisah for nine days past, owing to a sudden rise in the water and the fact that the passage into the cave became blocked with timber and bowlders. The diver found all seven of the tourists alive.

TRADE NOTES.

Business Review of the Past Week by Dun & Co.

R. G. Dun & Co's Weekly Review of Trade says: "It is now, as it has been for nearly a year, the amazement of intelligent observers that the United States suffers so little from reverses which other lands share, but which fall more heavily here than anywhere else. The past week has seen events which would suffice to call or to explain much disaster. Strikes of nearly all bituminous coal miners and coke workers, with numerous riots, strikes of many thousand men in other employments, stoppage of many manufacturing works in consequence, arrest of traffic on several great railroads by lawless proceedings and the tramping of discontented men, in all numbering several thousand, towards the national capital in the hope of controlling legislation; the lowest price ever known for wheat and almost the lowest prices ever known for commodities as a whole, exports of $5,400,000 gold, instead of abnormally cheapened products and the fall of the treasury gold reserve below the $100,000,000 limit, are significant of widespread difficulty. Yet the volume of business is but 13.3 per cent. less than a year ago. In some directions signs of improvement appear even now and the sublime faith of the people in their future is shown in the general belief that strikes and disorders will quickly disappear.

"It is also important that prices of iron and steel products promptly advanced in answer to the stoppage of some works through strikes, indicating that the recent improvement on the apparent demand was of a substantial character. At Pittsburg and Chicago, Philadelphia and New York, prices have generally advanced, though irregularly, and in bar iron quotations appear a shade weaker. Bessemer pig has advanced 75 cents to $1, steel billets $1 to $1.50, and plates and structural iron and steel and wire rods are stronger. Many reason that the advance may be maintained, at least for a time, because cost will rise if the strikes succeed, and if they fail, because of the demonstrated existence of a demand substantially equal to the full product of works thus far started.

"The money markets have not been disturbed by the large outgo of gold, which was taken mainly from the treasury through redemption of notes. The continued flow of unemployed money hither is not a sign of health nor the outgo of gold instead of wheat at 61 cents, or cotton at 7.31 cents. The demand for commercial loans of the better class does not increase, but there are more numerous applications for loans on questionable paper from the interior. Custom receipts were only $10,176,691 in April, against $15,418,638 last year, and are not likely to increase while tariff changes are pending. Exports of products are declining, though in April 9.2 per cent larger than last year, and the decrease in imports is about 33 per cent.

"The most encouraging sign is the marked decrease in liabilities of firms failing, which were only $1,443,144 for the last week of April, and for four weeks $8,366,587, of which $3,722,220 were of manufacturing and $4,644,367 of trading concerns. The amount of liabilities at the south was $2,919,419, against $3,111,032 in eastern and $2,692,257 in western states.

"Failures this week have been 233 in the United States against 216 last year and 355 in Canada against twenty-seven last year."

Delivering the Goods.

A Nashville dispatch says: The state funding board and the secretary of state, Morgan, left for New York Tuesday night with $1,000,000 of redemption bonds that have been sold to Blair & Co. at 98 cents, which is the same price paid for the $600,000 of penitentiary bonds. The bonds bear 4½ per cent interest. The proceeds will be utilized in redeeming $500,000 of 6s and $500,000 of 5s and the difference will save the state $10,000 per annum.

GROWTH OF THE SOUTH.

The Industrial Situation as Reported for the Past Week.

The review of the industrial situation in the south for the past week develops the fact that the strike among the coal miners is causing a decrease in the output of iron in the Birmingham district, where two furnaces have blown out for the want of fuel. The coal supply is growing less and the number of strikers is increasing. As the miners in many places in the southern field struck from sympathy and as their means of support are almost exhausted, it is believed that they will soon make a proposition to return to labor. The iron market is stronger as the supply diminishes. In some sections of the south business is growing lighter in consequence of labor troubles. Favorable weather has greatly improved crop conditions, and prospects are good excepting for peaches, which have been destroyed for this year.

Thirty-seven new industries were established or incorporated during the week, among which are the Texarkana Furniture Co. of Texarkana, Texas, capital $100,000; the Southern Rock Island Plow Co. of Dallas, Texas, with the same capital; the Contract Lumber Co., of Parsons, W. Va., capital $100,000, and a cotton mill with the same capital at Douglasville, Ga.; a cotton mill at Hall's Mills, N. C., brickworks at Aetnaville, Ky., and Elkins, W. Va., a brewery at Mobile, Ala., and a canning factory at Bessemer, Va. Electrical plants are reported at Batesville, Ark., Glasgow, Ky., and Raleigh, N. C.; flour and grist mills at Shellman, Ga., London, Ky., Leatherwoods; La., Tyro Shops, N. C., and Bell's Depot, Tenn., and iron bridge works at Chattanooga, Tenn. An iron mining company has been organized at Knoxville, Tenn., a paper mill is to be built at Little Rock, Ark., and woodworking plants are to be established at Fayetteville, Ark., Ehren and Carrabelle, Fla., Shellman and Waycross, Ga., Lexington, Ky., Baton Rouge, La., Glen Alpine, N. C., Jackson, Tenn., and Emporia and Marshall, Tex.

Waterworks are to be built at Morganfield, Ky. The enlargements for the week include cotton mills at Columbus and Griffin, Ga., and Enterprise, Miss.; an oil mill at Kyle, Texas, and saw and planing mills at Baton Rouge and Robertsville, La.

The new buildings of the week, as reported, include business houses at Jacksonville and Tampa, Fla., Knoxville, Tenn., and Richmond, Va.; a church at Corinth, Miss., and a hotel at Fort Worth, Texas.—Tradesman (Chattanooga, Tenn.)

COXEY CONVICTED

OF TRAMPLING THE GRASS IN THE CAPITOL GROUNDS.

Browne and Jones Will Also Share in the Penalty.

A Washington special says: The three leaders of the commonweal—General Jacob Siecher Coxey, Marshal Carl Browne and Christopher Columbus Jones—have been found guilty of violating the laws by a jury of their peers, and will have to submit to a sentence hereafter to be imposed by the court for their recent demonstration on the capitol grounds.

All three of the accused were convicted on the first count of the indictment, which charged them with displaying on the capitol grounds the banner of the Coxey Good Roads Association. Jones, of Philadelphia, was acquitted of the second count, which accused him of treading on the grass, but Coxey and Browne were convicted.

The jury retired at five minutes before 1 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, after hearing a long charge from Judge Miller, which left them little alternative but to convict if they followed his leadings. About half past 3 o'clock the jurors sent for the instructions given for the defense, but the government objected, and they filed into the courtroom, while the judge read the instructions.

Young Attorney Hyman endeavored, excitedly, to have the fact that the objection came from the prosecution laid before the jury, but he was suppressed. Judge Miller stated that he would not have handed over the written instructions under any circumstances, as that would have been irregular.

Only five minutes after this episode the jury returned with the verdict. General Coxey had been visiting with his wife and his daughter—the goddess of peace of the May-day procession—but took his seat within the bar, and all of the party received the result smilingly, except Mr. Hyman, who was on his feet with objection to the form in which the verdict was presented, but who was sat upon by his colleagues.

Motion for a New Trial.

Attorney Lipscomb immediately entered a motion for a new trial and another in arrest of judgment. Judge Miller gave him four days to file the formal paper. Then the judge made inquiries about bail, and Frank Hume, a well-known wholesale grocer, who several times has been a candidate for the democratic nomination to congress from the Virginia district across the Potomac river, signed a bond in $500 for each of the three convicted commonwealers.

THE STRIKE IN ALABAMA.

Apprehension that the Struggle Will Be a Long One.

The coal miner's strike in Birmingham Ala., district seems no nearer its close than when it began three weeks ago. Both strikers and operators remain firm. The continuation of the strike much longer threatens to cause the closing down of a number of industries, on account of the shortage in the coal supply. Already a number of coke ovens have banked, and two furnaces are preparing to blow out. It looks as if the struggle will be a long one, and while all is quiet, apprehension is felt, because every day marks a reduction in the food supply of the strikers.

AGREED TO A CUT.

Wages of Mobile and Ohio Men Reduced Eight Per Cent.

The Mobile and Ohio engineers have accepted a cut of 8 per cent. in wages. They agree that this 8 per cent. reduction shall go into effect May 8th and remain in force until December, then wages are to be restored for the four following months. If at the end of these four months the business does not justify full wages, the 8 per cent. cut will be made again. Committees representing three divisions of the road were present at a meeting in Mobile and signed the agreement.

Food for Coxey's Army.

There was a monster Coxey demonstration at Springfield, Mo., Saturday night. Colonel John O'Day, who is in deep sympathy with the movement, contributed 5,000 pounds of flour to the carload of provisions which will be shipped to Washington at once Four others each gave 1,000 pounds. The Republic Canning Company contributed a large amount of canned tomatoes.

Earthquakes in Venezuela.

The text of a cable message in regard to an earthquake in Venezuela received at Washington from Mr. Dartleman, the charge d'affairs of the United States legation at Caracas, is as follows: "Earthquake on the 24th of April destroyed the cities of Egido and Merida and several villages. The loss of life is said to be very heavy. Assistance would be appreciated."

A SPRING SONG.

O dear and gentle spring,
I sing
With gladsome, mirthful glee
To see
You on the wing.
My mind
Hath pined
For your return—
A yearn
Full 18 karats strong—
Proportionally long.
Not that I love the lassitude,
With which my spirit is imbued
When you come on the scene,
With grasses green;
Not that I love your most unpleasant way
Of sprinkling hot and cold throughout the day;
Your beastly plan
Of aggravating man
By sending blizzard's when he's dressed for heat,
And making things red-hot when he fears sleet;
Not that I love one of your fads untold;
But I rejoice because you bring me gold.
For I'm a druggist keen, and o'er the counter take
A dollar for a pill it costs a cent to make,
Which tired-feeling people buy when you appear,
Which neither harms nor cures, but much allays their fear.
And so, O spring,
I sing
With gladsome glee
To see
You on the wing.

In the Toils of Love.

I saw him enter the restaurant in an uneasy, flurried way. He was dressed in his best—his high, stiff collar and exquisite coat sat uncomfortably upon his excited neck and shoulders. With a nervous hand he began his dinner, while a hand still more nervous held a small sheet of violet notepaper midway between his face and soup. He swallowed little, gave a number of contradictory orders, tipped over his tumbler and made a great fuss.

As we were waiting at the coat room he again drew from his pocket the sheet of violet notepaper, and I saw him smile feverishly as he perused it.

Later on, in the street, I saw him close under an electric light, where his eyes furtively jumped from the sheet of violet-colored notepaper in his hand to the electrics that lumbered by. The same feverish smile was on his countenance.

A certain car passed and he entered it. And as he comfortably seated himself in a corner, he once more drew the violet-hued note from his pocket and read with the same child-like interest, and the smile on his face was still feverish.—Boston Courier.

The French Navy.

The French Navy, while it does not embrace as many vessels as the navy of Great Britain, is stronger in men. The British Navy includes eighty-two armored ships, as against fifty-eight for France, and 187 unarmored ships, as against sixty-five for France. It is also stronger in gunboats, but the French Navy has more torpedo boats. The total active list in officers and men is: Great Britain, 63,452; France, 76,220. Additional to this are the Naval Reserves, aggregating 76,700 for Great Britain, as against 94,176 for France.—New York Sun.

Who Set the Fashions?

As respects the launching of fashions for ladies, it is not improbable that well-known names, whether they be aristocratic, operatic or dramatic, render very signal service in enabling successive types of the good ship, "Fashionable Frivolity," to walk the waters like so many things of life; but before it is constructed it must be devised, and, if not absolutely invented, it must be skillfully adapted from some bygone mode, just as at the present our costumieres are reviving the leg-of-mutton sleeves, the long mantles, the feather boas, the high muffs, and the voluminous hats of 1830. Yet another factor is required in the introduction of a new or resuscitated fashion. There must be individuality, and that of the strongest kind, in the dress-maker or the bonnet-builder, be these artists male or female. The purveyor of toilets must be a personage; there must be a great Worth or a Felix, who for a while is Pontifex Maximus of the mode, and before whom the entire "smart" world bows down and accepts implicity his imperative and sometimes slightly capricious decrees.—New York Sun.

VETERANS' REUNION

A MIGHTY HOST GATHERED AT BIRMINGHAM.

Fourth Annual Reunion of the Confederate Veterans.

The fourth annual reunion of confederate veterans was formally opened at Birmingham, Wednesday morning, by General Fred S. Ferguson, of the First Alabama brigade in Winnie Davis wigwam, at 9 o'clock. There were fully 10,000 persons in the building and many could not gain access to the immense hall.

The stage was thronged with generals and colonels, most of whom wore gray uniforms. The opening prayer was made by Dr. J. William Jones, vice-chaplain general. The audience stood, and at the conclusion of the eloquent invocation, the old soldiers responded with cheers and amens.

Major-General Ferguson, of Alabama, called the convention to order and introduced Governor Jones, who made a brief but eloquent welcoming address in behalf of the state and was followed by Hon. David J. Fox, mayor, on behalf of Birmingham.

GORDON AND PANDEMONIUM.

Then came Gordon and pandemonium. Before Ferguson's introduction, there were wild yells of "Gordon!" "Dixie!" and simultaneously, as the Georgia soldier-senator faced the vast throng, handkerchiefs and hats waved in the air, the band played "Dixie" and it was many minutes before the yelling ceased. As it did, the delegates from the Lee camp, of Virginia, marched in, headed by a drum corps of boys and enthusiastic cheering broke out afresh. At the conclusion of General Gordon's address he was loudly cheered. The band played "The Bonnie Blue Flag," and the veterans went wild with enthusiasm. On behalf of the Texans, General Watts presented Gordon with a beautiful gavel, which was accepted in an appropriate reply. The business of the convention was then begun, and the enrollment of delegates taken up.

There were over 500 camps represented at roll call. A subscription toward the Chicago confederate monument was then taken up and $1,500 was handed in in a very few minutes. Routine business then followed.

The local military gave an exhibition battalion drill in the afternoon, witnessed by thousands.

At night a tableau of the states, in which the prettiest young married women from each southern state participated was represented at the wigwam.

RESOLUTION OF THANKS.

The following resolution was unanimously adopted at Wednesday's session. "Resolved, That the thanks of the confederate veterans are hereby tendered to the congress of the United States for establishing the Chickamauga and Chattanooga national military park, where the history of the heroic fighting on both sides is being impartially preserved, and that the governors and legislatures of the southern states, and especially our senators and representatives in congress, are requested to actively co-operate with the secretary of war and the national commission, acting under him, in furthering the work of establishing the national park."

FOR A SOUTHERN HISTORY.

The report of the historic committee, of which General Stephen D. Lee, of Mississippi, is chairman, was read. The report says that while the south has had much to do with making the history of the nation, it has done little toward writing it. The histories that have been written by northern historians have naturally been biased. It is recommended that data be gathered for a correct southern history and that the legislatures of the southern states and the authorities of the schools be urged to adopt the book for use in the schools.

The Second Day.

When the veterans' convention opened Thursday morning the secretary read in thundering tones a list of prominent officers, requested to come up on the platform.

The report of the Jefferson Davis monument committee, made by General Cabell, showed that over twelve thousand dollars are in the hands of the treasurer. The fund is for the purpose of erecting a hundred thousand dollar monument and an assessment of twenty-five cents a year was called for from every veteran until the fund is raised.

General Miller, deputy commander for Alabama of the Grand Army of the Republic, presented General Gordon with a handsome cane cut from Barlow's Hill, on Gettysburg battlefield. In an eloquent tribute he told how Gordon saved the life of his general, Francis Barlow, on that battlefield. The presentation occasioned another wild outburst of cheering.

FIGHT ON THE CONSTITUTION.

A warm fight arose over the adoption of the report on constitution and by-laws, made by General Underwood. The convention divided into factions, one favoring adoption, the other favoring postponement. The report was adopted. It provides for a revenue of about four thousand dollars a year.

The report of the committee on pension for Mrs. Jefferson Davis, reported that the legislatures of Georgia, Alabama, North Carolina, Tennessee, Kentucky and Texas, had been asked to appropriate $500 each for such a pension, but that not one had done so. One reason was, that she was not a resident of these states, and had become a resident of New York.

ATLANTA'S INVITATION ENDORSED.

A hot discussion arose over a resolution endorsing Atlanta's invitation to the Grand Army of the Republic. Dr. J. William Jones spoke against it. He said that the Grand Army of the Republic was composed largely of men "invisible in war and invincible in peace." He protested in furious tones. F. H. Busbee, of North Carolina, eloquently sustained the resolution. He said that Atlanta was a great, growing and patriotic American city. Her hospitable invitation should be re-echoed by every southern soldier and every brave southern man. Major E. J. Gordon, of Alabama, a brother of General John B. Gordon, spoke in refutation of Dr. Jones' charge. The G. A. R. men were the soldiers who fought. He said that the organization was made up of brave men and he urged the endorsement of the Atlanta invitation. Several others spoke. The report was adopted by an overwhelming majority.

GENERAL GORDON RE-ELECTED.

The election of officers resulted in the unanimous election of General John B. Gordon as commander-in-chief. General W. H. Jackson second general in command; department commander of the army of Northern Virginia, Fitzhugh Lee; department commander of the army of Tennessee, General S. D. Lee; department commander of trans-Mississippi department, General W. L. Cabell; chief clerk, Miss Amanda Childress.

TO HOUSTON NEXT YEAR.

The matter of the next meeting place was taken up. The invitation of Houston, Texas, was presented in several speeches. Atlanta's invitation, accompanied by the mayor and council's greeting, the Press Club's invitation, that of Fulton County Confederate Veterans' Association and the Sons of Confederate Veterans of Fulton county was presented. Mayor Ellison presented the invitation of Richmond. The vote was taken by states, resulting in the choice of Houston, Tex., which was made unanimous. This closed the work of the greatest gathering of confederate veterans ever held.

THE CLOSING CEREMONIES.

Thursday afternoon the ceremonies attendant upon the laying of the corner-stone of the confederate monument in Capitol park, occurred. The following program was carried out:

In the early afternoon General Gordon, commander-in-chief, reviewed the legion of veterans. The escort of honor, made up of armed and uniformed militiamen and cadets, headed the procession. The veterans formed into two great corps, the first under command of Lieutenant General Cabell, and the second under that of Lieutenant General S. D. Lee. The Sons of Veterans of Alabama brought up the rear of the great line. At the park General Gordon made a few remarks on the laying of the corner stone, and General Stephen D. Lee, of Mississippi, delivered the oration of the day. In the evening there was a reception at the Southern Club to the fair representatives from the several states.

THE FIRST CLASH.

DEPUTY MARSHALS AND COMMONWEALERS IN BATTLE.

Industrialists Capture a Train and are Arrested by Troops.

A Washington special says: In addition to the request of the judge of the United States court, the United States district attorney and the United States marshal for the district of Montana for federal aid in arresting the Hogan contingent of the army of the unemployed for seizing a train at Butte, Montana, against the mandate of the United States court. President Cleveland has received the following from the governor of Montana, which was given to the press:

"HELENA, MONTANA.—To the president of the United States—Information reaches me by wire that the Coxeyites, fleeing the state with a stolen train, were overtaken at Billings by the United States deputy marshals who were trying to serve a writ emanating from the United States court. A fight ensued. One deputy marshal was wounded and the leader of the Coxeyites was wounded. The deputy marshals were overpowered and driven off with revolvers and other weapons. The mob then surrounded the deputies and now hold them prisoners. The train of the Coxeyites is within a few hours' run of Fort Keogh. It is impossible for the state militia to overtake them.

"As governor of Montana I hereby request you to have the federal troops at Fort Keogh intercept, take into custody, arrest and hold these Coxeyites, subject to the orders of the United States court issuing the writ referred to. If the Coxeyites pass Fort Keogh before orders can emanate from you for their apprehension, I request that federal troops be ordered to overtake them. Promptness is required.

"G. E. RICKARTS,
"Governor of Montana."

TROOPS TO ARREST THEM.

When these facts were reported to the department of justice they were brought to the attention of the president with the recommendation of the attorney general that the federal authority be supported by troops, that being the solo alternative left to the government. The president at once called the general commanding the army into the consultation, and after considering the matter, General Schofield was directed to call upon the commander of the department of Dakota, in which military department the affair took place, to send a sufficient force of troops to arrest all persons engaged in the unlawful seizure of the Northern Pacific train at Butte, Mon., and to hold the train and persons until they could be delivered to the United States marshal for Montana subject to the order of the United States district court.

THE SOLDIERS HAVE THEM.

Later advices from St. Paul, Minn., are to the effect that the Coxeyites were arrested by Col, Page's troops at Forsythe, Mon., forty-six miles west of Fort Keogh.

ANOTHER AT TERRE HAUTE.

A dispatch from Terre Haute, Ind., says: That contingent of Coxey's army under command of Gen. Louis C. Frye forcibly took possession of an eastbound freight train, leaving the city at 3 o'clock. The officers of the army claim to have paid the railroad company for transportation as far as Brazil, twenty miles east of Terre Haute.

The Strike Spreading.

The miners' strike has spread to the mines operated by the Pennsylvania railroad, and it is expected that the big system will be tied up within a few days. Three thousand miners employed by the Pennsylvania railroad in mines along the Kiskimenetos river have stopped work.

ON TO WASHINGTON.

ARMIES OF INDUSTRIALS MARCHING UPON THE CAPITAL.

The Crusade of the Commonwealers Spreading all Over the West.

From all over the west comes the news that the crusade of industrials is spreading. Over a dozen armies are now in the field. In all the large towns, companies are rapidly being formed. The armies, detachments and divisions now in the field in the west are: General Kelly, 1,000 men, Neola, Iowa; General Fry, 1,000 men, Terre Haute, Indiana; General Fry's second division, 900 men, McLeansboro, Illinois; General Grayson, 100 men, Plattville, Colorado; General Galven, 200 men, Loveland, Ohio; Sergeant Randall, 500 men, Chicago; 100 men at Little Falls, Minnesota; 500 men at Butte, Montana; 100 men at Monmouth, Illinois; 200 men at Ottumwa, Ia., Captain Sullivan, 1,000 men, Chicago; 150 men at Anderson, Indiana; and General Aubrey, 700 men at Indianapolis, Indiana. Besides these armies, large numbers of recruits are pushing forward to the various lines of march with the intention of joining the large bodies.

COXEY'S MAIN ARMY.

After three days' stay in Hagerstown, Md., the Army of the Commonweal broke camp Monday morning and made for Turner's Gap. Just after the departure of the Commonweal army, considerable speculation was aroused by a dispatch from Washington, stating that a troop of cavalry had started from Fort Myer, bound for Fredericks. There is a rumor that the Commonwealers had been making overtures to the strikers in the coal region, and there was the possibility of a deluge of miners seizing trains to rush down and striking the line of march somewhere in Fredericks or Montgomery.

FIFTH REGIMENT IN OREGON.

A special from Portland, Oregon, says: The fifth regiment of the Industrial Army, six hundred strong, expects to leave for Washington at once. The officers hope to secure railroad transportation, but it is hardly probable that the railroads will accede to their demands.

PREPARING FOR HIM AT WASHINGTON.

The Commissioners of the District of Columbia will issue a proclamation or statement concerning the coming of Coxey and his army. It is understood that this action will be taken at the suggestion of President Cleveland. Fears that the arrival of Coxey will mark the concentration in Washington of elements bent on disturbing law and order, have been impressed on the commissioners by many prominent men, and the president has also been told by some of his advisers that it would be well to take measures to show the intending evil-doers that the authorities will brook no interference with the maintenance of law and order in the district.

The president was loath to take action in the matter in the name of the Federal government, but believing that some positive steps were necessary, he suggested that the district commissioners, as the representatives of the local authority, issue some sort of statement to offset the rumored intentions of the extremists to mark the arrival of Coxey the opportunity for a demonstration that might develop into a serious riot.

MOULDERS TO GO TO WASHINGTON.

At a meeting of five hundred union moulders, at Chicago, it was announced that the three unions of Chicago would send five hundred men to Washington to present their grievances to congress. They will move on trains. Delegations from a dozen towns in Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin are expected to join them.

GROWTH OF THE SOUTH.

The Industrial Situation as Reported For the Past Week.

A review of the industrial situation in the south for the past week shows that the strike among the coal miners in the Birmingham and Jellico districts of Alabama and Tennessee has unsettled business for the time being. It has not proved to be as general as was predicted, but several thousand men have gone out of the mines. Impartial observers believe that the strike will be a short one, partly because the demands of the strikers are considered to be extreme, and also because there is a lack of funds with which to support them while out of work.

In addition to the reduction in freight rates on iron pipe to northern points recently announced a reduction of a similar kind has been made to southern and southwestern points, to take effect May 1. It is unfortunate that these reductions are counter-balanced by labor troubles. As it is claimed that fuel supplies are sufficient for a month to come, it is hoped that an adjustment will be made before that time expires. In other industrial lines reports are encouraging. The effects of the cold wave have not proved as disastrous as was anticipated.

Forty-six new industries were established or incorporated during the week, among which are the Lee Coupling and Manufacturing Co., of San Antonio, Texas, capital $500,000, a gold mining company at Charleston, W. Va., with the same capital, and a $200,000 compress at Galveston, Texas. A $75,000 barrel factory is to be built in Memphis, Tenn., a $50,000 lumber plant at Western, Ark., an electrical company $50,000 capital has been chartered at Hillsboro, Texas, a manufacturing company with the same capital at Austin, Texas, and a $25,000 fertilizer company at Dothen, Ala.

A canning factory is reported at Natchez, Miss., car works at Gainesville, Fla., a cotton compress at Waco, Texas, and electric light companies at Palatka, Fla., and West Point, Miss. Knitting mills are reported at Valdese, N. C., and Winchester, Va., iron works at Birmingham and Oneonta, Ala., Lynchburg and Suffolk, Va., and mining companies at Adamsville, Ky., Blue Springs and Helenwood, Tenn. Oil mills are to be built at Opelika, Ala., and Lakeland, La., a pottery established at Meridian, Miss., a shoe factory at Augusta, Ga., a sugar refinery at Glencoe, La., and a tobacco factory at Winston, N. C. Woodworking plants are to be established at Booxw, Ark., Inverness and Jacksonville, Fla., Worth. Ga., Lancaster, Ky., Jackson, Tenn., Sheva, Va., and Huntington, W. Va.

There is also reported ten enlargements of manufactories, three new waterworks and twenty important new buildings, among which are, a bank at New Martinsville, W. Va., a $150,000 office building at Nashville, Tenn., business houses at Harmony Grove, Ga., Greenville, Tenn., and Houston, Texas, a court house at Dublin, Ga., hotels at Fairfield and Jacksonville, Fla., and Knoxville, Tenn., school buildings at Ozark, Ala., and Marietta, Ga., and a $100,000 university building at Gallatin, Tenn.—Tradesman (Chattanooga, Tenn.)

Railroads Change Hands.

It is reliably stated at Middlesboro, Ky., that the bonds of the Knoxville, Cumberland Gap and Louisville railroad have been transferred to the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia, through Drexel, Morgan & Co., and that the system will take possession of the road within thirty days.

Housekeepers Should Remember.

The Government Chemists, after having analyzed all the principal brands of baking powder in the market, in their reports placed the "Royal" at the head of the list for strength, purity and wholesomeness; and thousands of tests all over the country have further demonstrated the fact that its qualities are, in every respect, unrivaled.

Avoid all baking powders sold with a gift or prize, or at a lower price than the Royal, as they invariably contain alum, lime or sulphuric acid, and render the food unwholesome.

"Eat slowly and you will never overeat," is the advice of a hale and hearty old man of seventy-five.

Never enter a sick room in a state of perspiration, as the moment you become cool your pores absorb.

Do not approach contagious diseases with an empty stomach nor sit between the sick and the fire, because the heat attracts the vapor.

If the shelves and floors of closets are wiped with water hot with cayenne pepper and afterward sprinkled with borax and alum, roaches and other vermin are kept at bay.

BACTERIA is likely to be blamed for the ills that flesh is heir to. Professor Schenck now maintains that what we call a "cold" is really due to these invisible pests. When one enters a cold room, after being heated, says the Chicago Herald, the bacteria flock to the warm body, and enter by the open pores of the skin. Whatever may be said of this hypothesis he seems to prove by experiment, that bacteria in the neighborhood of a warm body move toward it.

If your nearest, best and most esteemed neighbors had written the following letters they could be no more worthy of your confidence than they now are, coming, as they do, from well known, intelligent and trustworthy citizens who, in their several neighborhoods, enjoy the fullest confidence and respect of all.

Mrs. F. L. Inman, of Manton, Wexford Co., Mich., whose portrait heads this article, writes as follows: "I began taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription about a year ago. For years I have suffered with falling and ulceration of the womb, but to-day, I am enjoying perfect health.

I took four bottles of the 'Prescription' and two of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Every lady suffering from female weakness should try the 'Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery.'"

Miss Mary J. Tanner, North Lawrence, St. Lawrence Co., N. Y., writes: "I was sick for four years. For two years I could do no work. I had five different physicians, who pronounced my case a poor or impoverished condition of the blood, and uterine trouble. I suffered a great deal with pain in both sides, and much tenderness on pressing over the womb. I bloated at times in my bowels and limbs; was troubled with leucorrhea. I could not sleep, and was troubled with palpitation of the heart. Suffered a great deal of pain in my head, temples, forehead and eyes. I had a troublesome cough, raised a great deal and at times experienced a good deal of pain in my chest and lungs. My voice at times was very weak. I suffered excruciating monthly, periodical pains. Since taking seven bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription some time ago, I have enjoyed better health than I have for more than four years previously; in fact, for several months past I have been able to work at sewing. I have gained in weight thirty-nine pounds since taking your medicines; the soreness and pain have disappeared." Yours truly,

Mary J. Tanner

Mrs. Alex. Robertson, of Half Rock, Mercer Co., Mo., writes: "For twenty years I suffered with womb disease and most of the time I was in constant pain which rendered life a great burden. I cannot express what I suffered. I had eight doctors and all the medicine I had from them failed—the one after the other.

I was nervous, cold hands and feet, palpitation, headache, backache, constipation, leucorrhea and no appetite, with bearing-down pains. I got so weak I could not walk around. I had to keep my bed, thinking I would never get any better.

One day my husband got one of your little books and read it to me. He said there was nothing doing me any good. I said I would try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I did try it. After the first few weeks my appetite was better. I was able to sit up in bed. I wrote to the World's Dispensary Medical Association, at Buffalo, N. Y., and described my case; they sent me a book on women's diseases. I read carefully and followed the directions as near as I could and took the medicine for two years. With the blessing of God and your medicines, I am entirely cured. That was three years ago."

Yours truly,

Mrs Alex Robertson

TO COUNTY OFFICIALS.

For the next eight months the View offers to publish all the advertising coming from the office of the Sheriff, Tax Collector, Tax Assessor, Treasurer, Probate Judge, Circuit Clerk and County Commissioners at the uniform rate of sixty per cent less than the legal rates.

The View thus publicly makes its bid so that if the officers are disposed to do any thing in the line of saving the people's money the View will help them to that end.

The friends of Senator Morgan profoundly sympathize with him in the loss of his wife. For some time she has been an invalid, but her death on April the 25th was sudden.

Reports from every county show that the followers of Kolb are leaving him. They are tired of wranglings and bitterness. Scores who are saying nothing about it are dropping Kolb.

A few weeks ago every body felt sure that Johnston would carry Selma, his old home, but the first trial developed the fact that Oates had a large following in Dallas County, and day by day adds to the number. There can be no doubt but that Oates will be nominated, but his friends should seek to make it unanimous to begin on. Lets give that sterling Democrat a solid delegation from Chilton County. We should not think for a moment of throwing our votes away by giving it to Johnston.

A fellow with any stains on his record had better handle the Montgomery Advertiser lightly. Horace Hood of the Montgomer Journal wrote rather disparagingly to the Washington Post of Grandma, and the old lady took the boy across her lap and paddld him with the Court records of Monroe County. The state dockets for 1879 and 1881 show that Mr. Hood plead guilty and was convicted several times for gambling. The Advertiser also notes the fact that a more offensive saloon was never kept than the one run by Mr. Hood.

Some of the counties in Alabama are paying dearly for elevating Populites to office. Whenever Prejudice runs riot ignorance is more apt to be put in the lead, hence ignorant self-seeking men are filling the offices, and their ignorance is causing many costly mistakes to be made. The tax payers, regardless of political faith, are watching as never before to see how the money is being spent and who gets the Jobs. The reformers(?) may flourish for a while, but their own following will after a time repudiate them. The citizens of Dale County are turning the light on their county officials and spots of darkness are appearing.

It is painful to see how our great United States Senator, Jno. T. Morgan will continue to charge his own party with the nomination of President Cleveland because Wall street paid the price for their votes. The very men that Wall street would be expected to buy would be politicians, yet the people prevailed over the politicians and sent Cleveland delegates to Chicago and they there with unequaled devotion made him their nominee. the charge is unproven and is hurtful alike to the Senator and to his party.

The entire Democracy of Chilton County should follow the example of their brethren in the Mulberry beat, form local clubs for the purpose of discussing questions of the hour. This will arouse the true man-hood of this county, and cause a geneal talking up of the party affairs which can only result in good.

Daylight Democracy is going to win in this fight, as Uncle Rufus would say, and the sooner we impress the people that we so believe the greater will be our victory Democracy has nothing to fear if her sons prove true. Prune out the mere hangers on, men who are Democrats only so long as they hope to receive office, leave such men off of the lists of county or state delegations. Nominate only true men, men with whom principle is dearer than life.

The registration of voters began last Monday and will continue until Friday March 25th. Our readers must recollect that if they intend to vote they must register now Every voter white and black should be urged to register. The following tells when and where you can register.

Program of Teachers Institute.

Several of our teachers attended the closing exercises and examination of the Jemison High School last Friday May 4th, and then and there witnessed the out come of great labor, energy and enthusiasm on part of the Principal Prof. J. L. Ruffin as well as the same untiring faithfulness from each pupil showing thereby the co-operation of teacher, pupil and parent. The examination showed that a model school had been taught in which the pupils and teacher deserve credit. All were delighted in the afternoon with a Physiology drill given by the little folks under charge of the assistant Miss Mattie Ruffin. At 7:30 p m Prof. Slaton followed by Prof. Ruffin entertained a large audience at the Presbyterian church, by explaining briefly the benefits to be derived from the amendment to the constitution allowing local taxation for school purposes. The address by the young doctor was also quite a treat. At 9:30 a m Saturday the Institute met and was called to order by Supt. Moore, and after some excellent music and prayer by Rev M S Stephens the institute went into regular business. 1st Spirit of the Teacher, This subject being discussed by several of the teachers Prof. Moore read an excellent paper on the personel habits of teachers. Discussion by Prof. Slaton Ruffin and Dewberry:

11 a m Mental operations in learning. Paper by Prof. G L Spear advancing some good ideas on the subject followed in discussion by Prof. Dewberry. Adjourned until 2 p m at which time Prof. Slaton interestingly entertained the meeting on the subject of "The teacher against the teacher".

The duty of state to educate her subjects was well explained bo Prof Dewberry. After discussions were over the following resolutions were unanamously adobted. Whereas a number of chilton county teachers willfully neglected to attend the county Teachers Institute and thereby failed to comply with the requirments of the SIhool Law.

Be it resolved: that the County School Board be restricted to require an excuse from each teacher who is absent from every meeting of any year, and compell them to attend by a penalty of refusing or revoking their License unless excused.

Mass Meeting of Democrats of Beat 3.

In response to a call, at 20'clock P. M. on the 25th inst, a large number of the most intelligent and influential citizens of the community met at the new academy and the following business transacted:- The object of meeting being stated by B. F. Hammond, W. J. Flemming was called to the chair Pro. Tem. G. L. Speer Sec. The cardinal principles of the Democratic Party were read and commented upon by B F Hammond. These were endorsed by the house and their allegiance to the Democracy reaffirmed. A motion to organize a Democratic Club carried.

B F Hammond then addressed the body in a brief and instructive remarks upon the expense of the Alliance and its evil influence as a political machine, leading the people away from Democracy and engendering hatred and strife among neighbors.

On a call for enrollment of members, all but a few of those present gave their names to the secretary;- The following names were enrolled: B W Garner, James Rasberry, Seaborn Jones, Wm Walker, Dr J S Johnson, A S Jones, B H Jones, W M Oden, J W Kincaid, G R Houston, J D Woolley, B T Rasberry, Wiley, Parnsey, G W Fox Jr. Dr J P Hayes, R C Blalack, J L Williams, S K Rasberay, J H Gibbons, G W Jones, E C Jones, F D Jones, J L Palmer, E W Blalack, J F Palmer, B E Jones, Robert Jones, E J Hayes, W J Flemming, H A Williams, Felix Scales, B F Hammond, G L Speer.

On permanent organization, B W Garner, was elected President, B F Hammond and W J Flemming, Vice president. E J Hayes Secretary, and J L Palmer Treasurer.

Executive Committee:- G L Speer, Dr J S Johnson, A S Jones, S K Rasberry, B H Jones, W M Oden, Wm Walker, Dr J P Hayes, J W Kincaid Wiley Ramsy. After a resolution that a copy of these proceedings be sent to the View for publication, the meeting adjourned until two o'clock May 7th.

B W Garner Pres.
E J Hayes Sec.

The Democrats of Beat 3 have thus reaffirmed their allegiance to their party, and have set themselves in line to exercise their franchise and political influence for the principles of the "old Democracy" and against the many subtle schemes of designing demagogues, who are endeavoring to rule into office upon the prejudices of the people.

There was nothing said about WAR or BLOOD, as is often heard from the political maniacs of the country, but a spirit of tolerance such as should pervade the breast of every intelligent American citizen was maintained and commended to the meeting. Thus the dauntless Democracy of Beat 3 instead of "The Agonized" as Bro. White would have it, have set an example worthy to be followed by other communities.

COMMENTS.

Of Those Who have been Cured or Greatly Benefitted by Using the Electropoise.

ALABAMIANS.

Capt. T. H. Hobart, conductor on the L. & N. railroad, Decatur, Ala., used it on his baby for nervousness and indigestion, the doctors having said the child could not live a week. From the first application of the Electropoise he began to improve, and now, after two weeks use of it he is entirely recovered.

B. F. Land, Dothan, used it for paralysis and have been wonderfully improved in every way, says: "I fully believe that the Electropoise is all in all to the sick, and will do all that is claimed for it."

George S. aV rotu Mobile: "The Electropoise has been of great value to me, curing me of a distressing case of hay fever of ten years standing, and my entire household use it as a prompt cure for colds, fever, sore throat and violent pains."

Joseph Williams, Stevenson: "The Electropoise has entirely cured my rheumatism, and my general health is much improved."

Rev. J. S. Knowles, Headland: "The value of the Electropoise is inestimable."

A similar list could be given from other states. There are many others, but the testimony of such men ought to convince the most skeptical. Don't impose upon their time and patience. It our business.

Mr. Farley's champions present him as the representative of the wealth, the intelligence and courage of the Reformers, while the admirers of Mr. Mastin think Mr. Farley too young in the cause to be entrusted with so responsible a place until he has been tried. but they feel that their candidate has proven faithful in the past and will not flicker in the future fight, moreover some of them think Mr. Mastin is a poor man and needs the place. But no matter which one is nominated it ought to be an easy task for a Democrat to defeat him.

What is
CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
DR. G. C. OSGOOD,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE,
Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

Those who believe thirteen is an unlucky number should fight shy of quarters. The coin has thirteen stars, thirteen letters in the scroll held on the eagle's beak, thirteen marginal feathers on each wing, thirteen tail feathers, thirteen parallel lines on the shield, thirteen horizontal bars and thirteen arrow heads.

"Shall I Ever be Strong Again?"

Many persons suffering from chronic lack of vigor ask themselves this question in vain. They have neglected the one sure means of conferring what they lack and long for. In a very brief time, if they would but use Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, they would find their appetite and sleep renewed and strength revived. The Bitters will also surely remedy dyspepsia, malaria and liver complaint.

You impair your best capital when you make money at the expense of character.

COXEY'S FAILURE.

THE CAPITAL POLICE INTERFERE WITH THE PROGRAM.

Coxey Not Allowed to Speak and is Forced from the Capitol Steps.

A perfect day with a brightly shining sun was the portion of the army of commonweal for its demonstration in Washington in favor of Coxey and good roads bill. The army broke camp George Washington, seven miles from the city, in the early morning. By 9 o'clock there was no vestige of the camp remaining except a few piles of straw and a general litter which told of the presence of men and horses. Shortly before 10 o'clock Marshal Browne formed the men in a hollow square, and standing in the center, called for three cheers for peace. Three cheers were given and the Commonwealers waved their flags of peace and began the march.

The route of the procession was down Fourteenth street road to Mount Pleasant, thence along Fourteenth street proper to Pennsylvania avenue to Peace monument, and around the capitol grounds. The Fourteenth street road was very dusty, and the marchers were plentifully besprinkled as they marched along. The commonweal had moved at a funeral pace, and it was three-quarters of an hour in reaching the Mount Pleasant suburb of the city. At the head of the dusty soldiers were three mounted policemen. Then came Mrs. Annie L. Digges, of Kansas, in an open barouche, with her husband and her two daughters; and then appeared Miss Mamie Coxey, typifying "peace," mounted on a white palfry. She is a blonde girl of sixteen. She wore a suit of cream-colored cloth, relieved by a big red bow at the throat, and wore a little blue liberty cap. She seemed perfectly at home on the palfry, but appeared somewhat embarrassed at attracting so much attention. She nodded smilingly at the people who saluted her. Two old soldiers, one a confederate and the other a federal, both members of the Commonweal, formed her guard of honor, marching on foot. Colonel Browne followed on a large white stallion. Then came seven foot-sore musicians. Coxey, Mrs. Coxey and little "Legal Tender Coxey" came next in a phaeton. Jesse Coxey followed on a spirited horse. The rank and file followed. When the army reached the peace monument at the foot of the capitol it found a crowd of between four and five thousand awaiting it. The procession then wended its way toward the east front of the capitol.

BLUECOATS ON HAND.

The Metropolitan police surrounded the capitol and patroled its corridors. Blue coats were seen everywhere, and visitors were requested by them to move on and not block the passages and doorways. The main body of the guardians of peace were stationed at the east front, where General Coxey was expected to attempt to speak. By 11 o'clock, an hour before the Commonweal army was due at the capitol, thousands of curious men, women and children had gathered around the building to gain places of vantage to witness the much talked of and long expected appeal to congress by Coxey and his followers.

The parade moved without incident until the head of it reached Second and B streets, southeast, the end of the capitol grounds. Coxey had dropped out of line at the New Jersey avenue (south) entrance to the capitol grounds, where he left his buggy and proceeded on foot to the main steps of the capitol. Half a dozen steps had been mounted, when he was confronted by the captain of the police and two lieutenants. Coxey removed his hat, shook hands with the officers, and started to the head of the stairs.

HUSTLED OFF THE STEPS.

Before he had time to turn round to face the crowd, in fact, before he could reach the top of the steps, Captain Kelley, the police officer informed him that he could make no speech there. Coxy entered a protest but was unceremoniously hustled of the steps out into the middle of the broad plaza in front of the capitol. He made no physical resistance, but protested all the while and the crowd gathered around him and obstructed the way somewhat.

The whole affair did not last over ten minutes. Coxey was taken by the police to the edge of the crowd without any difficulty and entered his carriage. Captain Kelley said: "Where do you go now, Mr. Coxey?" "To our new grounds in southeast Washington," Coxey replied. He then gave the army the order to march, and the disappointed army again started on a tramp for a new resting place.

Chief Marshal Carl Brown was arrested and locked up on the charge of disorderly conduct but was released on a $500 bond by Mrs. Elizabeth A. Haines, a dry goods dealer in southeast Washington. The arrest of Brown happened on the edge of the grass lawn adjoining the house side of the asphalt plaza, and within sight of the crowds on the capitol steps. Christopher Columbus Jones, leader of the Philadelphia contingent, attempted to rescue Brown from the officers, and he, too, was placed in custody.

When Coxey, under police escort, passed out of the capitol grounds to rejoin his army, the party was followed by at least 10,000 people, and the officers found the passage a difficult one. Finally, the police and their charge reached the head of the procession on B street, directly in front of the residence of Congressman Springer, of Illinois. Somebody set up a cheer and thousands joined in as the leader of the army of the commonweal pushed his way to his carriage.

The mob became so dense and noisy that the police had hard work to keep them from running over the commonwealers. A rush was made by the mass of people and many ran pell mell to the plaza, over the lawns, trampling down the shrubbery and vines. The white palfry on which Miss Coxey was mounted became frightened and attempted to run away, but was held back by a young man who clung to the horse's bridle.

Coxey finally managed to gain the carriage with his wife, and the crowd cheered him again and again.

"Speech! speech!" came from hundreds of throats, and, rising in his phaeton, Coxey started to speak. But his voice could be heard by a few only, so he waved his hand for the procession to go ahead. The commonwealers, who had tramped more than five miles to the capitol to find their plans frustrated, were conducted quietly to their new camp on M street, between First and Second, southeast. The camp is situated about a mile from the capitol.

Take Possession of Cleveland, Ohio, and Attempt to Destroy the Town.

All the reserve force of police, including mounted men, were ordered out. Many arrests have been made and intense excitement prevails.

A SURFEIT OF SOLDIERS.

Governor Ben Tillman Will Have More Than He Needs.

Governor Tillman states that he has received applications from over 100 new military organizations asking admission into the state militia. He expects to admit them all, but most of them can only be mustered into the reserve force, as the law only provides for the uniforming and equipment of 100 companies. He says about twenty companies, including the three in Columbia, will be deprived of their arms on account of insubordination in the recent riots, and their arms will be given to new companies. He says that while the law prohibits armed bodies of men from moving from place to place, yet if these disbanded companies desire to maintain their organizations and purchase their own equipments, he does not suppose that they would be interfered with.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

While sixteen miners were descending the shaft of a coal mine at Boise de Luc, near Mons, Germany, the cable broke and the cage containing the men was precipitated to the bottom of the shaft. Thirteen were killed, and three fatally wounded.

George Abell, proprietor of the Baltimore Sun, died Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Abell's death was entirely unexpected, and was a great shock not only to the community in general, who were unaware of his illness, but to the immediate family and relatives.

Thirty thousand masons and bricklayers are on a strike in Vienna, Austria, and they have been joined by the carpenters. The police have thus far succeeded in preventing disorder. A large number of socialists who were connected with the riots at Hold Mezo Vasarhely, have been arrested and will be prosecuted.

The coal miners of St. Clairsville Junction, O., organized a branch of Coxey's army of ninety-four men, including a brass band, with General Edward Whittington in command. They expect to have three hundred men in line, and will march to Washington with banners labeled: "Idle Coal miners of Eastern Ohio."

The total earnings of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company for the third week of April, 1894, were $320,665, as compared with $392,430 for the same week in 1893, a decrease of $71,765. A special from Paris says: In the chamber of deputies M. Jaures made a violent attack upon the government, which he accused of negligence in not taking measures to prevent the clergy and capitalists from fomenting anarchy. He also accused the government of having granted a subvention in order to check the spread of socialistic ideas.

Men in all the mines have decided to go out at Centralia, O. Trouble is looked for. The fruit-growers in that section also fear that there will not be sufficient fuel to run fruit trains. Operators of the Big Four mines have issued a circular, notifying the employes if any men march out there, then the mines will be closed until quiet is restored.

All the baggage men, gate tenders and others in the Union depot at Minneapolis were called out on a strike Tuesday morning. Brown, publishers of the Oklahoma Times-Journal, to the county jail for ten days and to pay a fine of $200 each for contempt in commenting upon his judicial character. A great sensation was created. The judge refused to allow an appeal and both newspaper men are in jail.

Forty thousand workingmen assembled in the May Day parade at Vienna, Austria, for the purpose of holding a mass meeting, but just as the speaking commenced it began to rain heavily and the meeting dispersed. The crowds returned home and jeered and hooted at the police stationed along the routes of march. The police, in accordance with instructions, paid no attention to the insults, although on all previous occasions of the kind, they have retaliated with saber charges.

A sensational feature of President Debs' address to the American Railway Union meeting at Minneapolis was his attack upon Judge Jenkins, in which he said: "Jenkins is the most corrupt scoundrel that was ever outside of prison walls. He is a man whose whole life, both public and private, is rotten to the very core, and I stand prepared to prove it, too. Jenkins is a disgrace to the bench upon which he sits, and to the people who elevated him to the position."

The National Rapid Transit Company, whose scheme was advocated before the house judiciary committee by Mr. Hemphill, ex-chairman of the District of Columbia committee of the house of representatives, ask a charter authorizing the construction of an elevated electric railroad between New York and Washington. The road is to carry passengers, mails and freight cars on each train, and is to cover the distance in about two hours, and the passenger rate is not to exceed two cents per mile.

Woman's Influence is at Home.

Under no imaginable circumstances could I go to the polls or exercise the right of voting. American women enjoy without restraint every civil, social, ethical, and intellectual right compatible with feminine delicacy and refined Christian womanhood and to invite them into the arena of politics would prove subversive of all domestic quietude, loosen the ties that link them to their kingdom, the home hearth, and proves as disastrous to harmonious social order as did the "Wooden Horse" to the households of Troy. "Woman's right to vote" would involve the forfeiture of woman's privilege of commanding the reverence and deferential homage of mankind. Feminine opinion is a powerful political factor when expressed gently in the sacred precincts of home, by dropping ballots of noble aims and exalted principles and sentiments into the open hearts and minds of brothers, husbands and sons, but wrangling and wrestling at "election polls" would inevitably resolve the whole question of woman's political influence into one or mere numerical valuation.—Augusta Evans Wilson.

The Dallas Convention.

Public acknowledgment of the zeal and energy with which the representatives of the Roads composing the line via Montgomery, New Orleans and Marshall have labored to provide safe, expeditious and comfortable transportation to Dallas upon this occasion, is due them; and the successful fruition of their labors is occasion for felicitation. They were the first in the field to offer special train service through to Dallas without change: and while other lines subsequently yielded to the force of competition and have advertised through sleeping cars to Dallas, yet the Atlanta and New Orleans Short Line is the only line which has provided a special train with day coaches attached, through to Dallas without change.

The day coaches in this train will be equipped with wash-stands, soap, towels and everything, short of sleeping accommodations, necessary to the comfort of passengers. The seats are of the latest and most comfortable design. This accommodation—by means of which a chance of cars may be avoided without necessitating the expense of sleeping car accommodations, should be most highly appreciated by those who do not wish to incur that expense.

It is a particularly fortunate circumstance (and one which those who attended the Fort Worth Convention some years since and were delayed by high water along other routes will appreciate) that this special train service is arranged for over the A. & W. P., W. Ry. of A., L. & N. and T. & P. Roads, for the reason that these lines are located above the highest high water mark and are not subject to inundation at any season of the year.

Such public spirit and interest in the comfort and welfare of the Delegates should be recognized, and rewarded with their patronage.

A Great Railway.

The proposed railway from the United States through Mexico, Central America and South America, will perhaps be something more than a probability. Mr. Shunk, the chief engineer, in his report to the commission, says the survey has been made all the way to Buenos Ayres and found to be feasible. Much of the tropical region in South America will be traversed at great altitudes for railway travel, the survey including sections that rise to heights of 7,000 to 12,000 feet above the sea level. The survey makes the length of the proposed line 4,300 miles from the Mexican starting place to Buenos Ayres, and the cost of the completed road is put at $50,000 per mile, including some formidable grading and bridging, or about $200,000,000 in all, for which the funds are to be paid proportionately by the countries interested. The beginning of the line will be a point in Mexico, which will make the new line continuous with the existing system in that country and the United States. Thus the completion of the road will enable a passenger to go by rail all the way from Canada almost to the very borders of the vast and bare South American region known as Patagonia.—Ex.

If the following letters had been written by your best known and most esteemed neighbors they could be no more worthy of your confidence than they now are, coming, as they do, from well known, intelligent, and trustworthy citizens, who, in their several neighborhoods, enjoy the fullest confidence and respect of all who know them. The subject of the above portrait is a well known and much respected lady, Mrs. John G. Foster, residing at No. 38 Chapin Street, Canandaigua, N. Y. She writes to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Chief Consulting Physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute at Buffalo, N. Y., as follows: "I was troubled with eczema, or salt-rheum, seven years. I doctored with a number of our home physicians and received no benefit whatever. I also took treatment from physicians in Rochester, New York, Philadelphia, Jersey City, Binghamton, and received no benefit from them. In fact I have paid out hundreds of dollars to the doctors without benefit. My brother came to visit us from the West and he told me to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. He had taken it and it had cured him. I have taken ten bottles of the 'Discovery,' and am entirely cured, and if there should be any one wishing any information I would gladly correspond with them, if they enclose return stamped envelope."

Not less remarkable is the following from Mr. J. A. Buxton, a prominent merchant of Jackson, N. C., who says: "I had been troubled with skin disease all my life. As I grew older the disease seemed to be taking a stronger hold upon me. I tried many advertised remedies with no benefit, until I was led to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. When I began taking it my health was very poor: in fact, several persons have since told me that they thought I had the consumption. I weighed only about 125 pounds. The eruption on my skin was accompanied by severe itching. It was first confined to my face, but afterwards spread over the neck and head, and the itching became simply unbearable. This was my condition when I began taking the 'Discovery.' When I would rub the parts affected a kind of branny scale would fall off.

For a while I saw no change or benefit from taking the 'Discovery,' but I persisted in its use, keeping my bowels open by taking Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, and taking as much outdoor exercise as was possible, until I began to gain in flesh, and gradually the disease released its hold. I took during the year somewhere from fifteen to eighteen bottles of the 'Discovery.' It has now been four years since I first used it, and though not using scarcely any since the first year, my health continues good. My average weight being 155 to 160 pounds, instead of 125, as it was when I began the use of the 'Discovery.' Many persons have reminded me of my improved appearance. Some say I look younger than I did six years ago when I was married. I am now forty-eight years old, and stronger, and enjoy better health than I have ever done before in my life." Yours truly,

J. A. Buxton.

Thousands bear testimony, in equally strong terms, to the efficacy of this wonderful remedy in curing the most obstinate diseases. It rouses every organ into healthy action, purifies, vitalizes and enriches the blood, and, through it, cleanses and renews the whole system. All blood, skin, and scalp diseases, from a common blotch, or eruption, to the worst scrofula are cured by it. For tetter, salt-rheum, eczema, erysipelas, boils, carbuncles, goitre, or thick neck, and enlarged glands and swellings, it is an unequaled remedy. Virulent, contagious, blood-poison is robbed of its terrors by the "Discovery" and by its persevering use the most tainted system renovated and built up anew.

"If there are fewer fortunes made in farming than in any other business," observes the New York World, "there are also fewer failures."

The English people are staggering along under the most tremendous depression of modern times, the San Francisco Chronicle maintains.

The Kansas City Star is authority for the statement that Missouri had more regiments of cavalry in the Union Army in the Civil War than any other State.

French postal orders are in future to be cashed at the residences of persons to whom they are made payable. Hence the postmen to be intrusted with this service will at times have considerable sums of money in their possession, and the postoffice authorities are considering the advisability of arming them.

President Patten, of Princeton College, says that he realizes the fact that all the youths who attend college do not want to become finished scholars, and that he is heartly in favor of athletic sports. The New Orleans Picayune thinks this ought to make Princeton a prime favorite with the young men who do not go to college to become scholars.

The Boston Cultivator thus philosophizes: Gardening is conducive to contentment of mind, and therefore to longevity. There are suggestions in the cultivation of growing plants which keep the mind in a state of healthful activity. It gives plenty of outdoor exercise and pure air. Plants need the sunshine, and whoever cares for them must be much in it. The first man was put in a garden, and had he never been obliged to leave it would have lived in innocence forever. That there is much hard and some disagreeable work in gardening does not prevent it from being one of the most desirable occupations that any one can wish. In what occupation can hard work of one kind or another be avoided?

Cattle ranching in the Northwest Territories of Canada will soon be a thing of the past, declares the New York Times. The Government refuses to renew their leases, as the lands are in demand for new wheat farms. And, beside this, the business has been found unprofitable chiefly on account of the enormous increase in the number of wolves, which have of late become exceedingly destructive. Another difficulty experienced is the greater cost of winter feeding, as the grass meadows have been largely taken up by settlers, who cut the natural hay and demand excessive prices for it from the cattlemen. This will doubtless be a great advantage to the Canadian farmers in the removal of an irksome competition in feeding beeves.

The Minneapolis Tribune discussing immigration statistics has the following to say of the South: "England has a population of 27,500,000 on 50,823 square miles of area. Either Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Missouri, or North Carolina has a larger area than England. The country south of the Mason and Dixon line would comfortably accommodate the entire population of England, and would be an immense gainer by the transfer. Texas has a larger area than the German Empire with England added, and could accommodate the 30,000,000 of Prussia with great ease and profit. Saxony has 3,500,000 population on only 5789 miles of area. Arizona, with its 113,000 of area, could accommodate the 3,500,000 Saxons and the 1,600,000 of Alsace-Lorraine thrown in, and it would be the making of Arizona."

Says the New York Post: Maryland is in particular need of the services of a forestry commissioner, and the State Academy of Sciences, with a view to the creation of the office, is collecting specimens of the 167 kinds of indigenous trees to be found in Maryland, and inviting the people to examine them. The interest excited has already repaid the academy for its labors, and the appointment of a commissioner is now only a question of time. Wasteful cutting of trees in Maryland will denude it of forest tracts in a comparatively few years unless a halt is called. The Louisiana tupelo, or large-leaved tupelo, for instance, flourishes in the country back of the Pocomoke River, and during the last ten years several square miles of these trees have been felled to furnish material for factories which make bowls, bread-trays, peach and berry-boxes and baskets. The tupelo reaches a height of 100 feet and attains a diameter of four feet, and it is a tree that merits preservation, being picturesque to look at and indispensable to the watersheds.

WASHINGTON NOTES

WHAT IS GOING ON AT UNCLE SAM'S HEADQUARTERS.

Comment Concerning Transactions in the Various Departments.

Representative Jerry Simpson is reported as being much weaker. The present complication is of the kidneys, which thus far stubbornly refuse to yield to treatment.

With the tariff amendments all in print and submitted to the senate, there is nothing now to impede the progress toward a vote on the tariff bill.

The president, Tuesday, sent to the senate the nomination of H. H. D. Pierce, of Massachusetts, to be secretary of legation at St. Petersburg, Russia.

The comptroller of the currency has declared a first dividend of 30 per cent in favor of the creditors of the First National Bank of Starkville, Miss., on claims amounting to $17,000.

The senate spent upwards of an hour and a half in executive session Tuesday during which time they discussed the nomination of C. H. J. Taylor, of Kansas, nominated to be recorder of deeds for the District of Columbia, without coming to any final conclusion.

The comptroller of the currency has been advised that the First National Bank of Sedalia, Mo., has suspended payments. Bank Examiner Latimer has been ordered to take charge and make an examination. If found insolvent, a receiver will be appointed at once.

A careful poll is being made of the house in regard to an appropriation for the Atlanta exposition. Good judges believe that at least half a million dollars will be appropriated. The indorsement of the various commercial bodies of the country will have good effect.

President Cleveland and his cabinet have decided to attend the unveiling of the monument to Mary Washington in Fredericksburg, Va. Addresses will be delivered by President Cleveland, Governor O'Ferrall and Senator Daniel. Several military companies of Washington and vicinity, the Marine band and a train load of senators and congressmen will accompany the presidential party.

Secretary Herbert, accompanied by his daughters, Mrs. Micau and Miss Herbert; his neice, Miss Buell, of Alabama, and his naval aid, Lieutenant Reamy, left Washington Saturday morning over the Baltimore and Ohio R. R. for the west on a tour of inspection of the Mare island navy yards, Scott's ship building works, San Francisco, Cal., and the new Puget Sound naval station, near Seattle.

Ex-Congressman Barnes, of Augusta, expects to visit the Indian Territory very soon. He is one of the attorneys for the Choctaw and Chickasaw Indians in a large land claim they have pending before congress. These Indians want pay for several million acres of their lands which have been added to Oklahoma. The claims amounts to about $6,000,000, and if it ever goes through, Mr. Barnes will get a good round fee. It may, however, take many years to induce congress to pay such a big claim.

The president Saturday sent to the senate the following nominations: Seneca Hazleton, of Vermont, envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to Venezuela. Vice consuls—George Keenan, of Wisconsin, at Bremen; Colin C. Manning, of South Carolina, at Freyal, Azores; Edward J. Puckett, of Illinois, at Kiehl. Postmasters—Virginia—D. L. Torney, Manchester; James M. Neal, Danville; South Carolina—William F. Metts, Greenville; Caroline A. Youngblood, Chester; Louisiana—Frank A. Daniels, New Orleans; Tennessee—Charles B. Sevier, Harriman.

During the executive session Monday Senator Jones presented the amendments to the tariff bill which have been considered and agread to by the democratic senators, known as the compromise committee. There are over 400 of them and it makes a new bill, or a measure greatly differing from the Wilson bill and from the senate bill in any form in which it has been presented. The amendments heretofore presented by Senator Vest and reported from the finance committee are endorsed by the committee on compromise. There is a general increase in the bill, and in some schedules the increases are very marked. Many of the changes are unimportant and consist of a restoration of the house duties, which the senate had decreased. A number of articles have been taken from the free list, chief among these being agricultural products.

Coxey Before the Committee.

Coxey appeared before the House Committee on Labor on Wednesday, and presented a petition from the Commonweal Army that he and Carl Browne be permitted to address the committee in behalf of the Coxey bills for the construction of good roads, and for the issue of non-interest bearing bonds. Coxey supplemented the reading of the petition with a brief statement, and then answered the questions put to him by members of the committee. He asserted that the Commonwealers had tramped to Washington, and now they wanted a committee appointed to hear them on the goood roads bill and the non-interest bearing bonds bill. There are billions of dollars' worth of improvements throughout the country, to be made, he said, and there are millions of men to make them. There is but one thing standing in the way, and that is money. Ninety-nine per cent of the people, he asserted, ought to have the same privileges that have been granted to one per cent of the people for years, viz: the national banking class. He asked the same privilege for the people he represented, and asserted that the passage of the two bills above referred to would solve the industrial depression and put all men to work. After hearing Coxey the house committee on labor, by a vote of 7 to 2, decided to report a resolution for a joint investigation by a special committee of the senate and house of the Coxey movement and the depressed condition of labor in general.

CONGRESSIONAL.

DAILY PROCEEDINGS OF BOTH HOUSE AND SENATE.

The Discussion of Important Measures Briefly Epitomized.

Without preliminary business at Friday's session the house proceeded to the consideration of the river and and harbor appropriation bill under the five minute rule.

At Monday's session the house went into committee of the whole and took up the government printing office bill.

At 2:30, Tuesday, the house resumed consideration of the bill to purchase a site for the government printing office in committee of the whole.

The house was engaged in the consideration of the naval appropriation bill at Wednesday's session.

THE SENATE.

In the senate, Friday, Mr. Vest, member of the finance committee, presented the amendments to the tariff bill agreed upon in the democratic conference. These amendments relate to the income tax to be collected from corporations providing for a tax of 2 per cent on the net profits or income (above the ordinary expense) of all banks, trusts, railroad insurance and other companies—not to apply, however, to the building and loan associations that make loans to their shareholders. The amendments were laid on the table and ordered printed. Another armistice was agreed upon in the tariff debate. At 2 o'clock, Mr. Harris, in charge of the bill, moved an executive session.

The routine morning business Saturday was very brief, occupying less than ten minutes. Then the calendar was taken up under rule 8 for bills unobjected to.

The senate, at 11:30, Monday, went into executive session, the Chinese treaty being the matter immediately before it.

In the senate Tuesday, the credentials of John F. Gear as senator from Iowa were presented and laid on the table. The tariff bill was taken up and Mr. Hoar addressed the senate in opposition to it.

In the senate, Wednesday, Allen's resolution for the appointment of a select committee to investigate the police assault upon and the arrest of Coxey, Browne and Jones in the capitol grounds on May 1st, was laid before the senate and Allen argued in its support. After he had spoken for upwards of an hour, Sherman arose and replied briefly. The resolution went over and the tariff bill was taken up. Aldrich addressed the senate on the pending amendment.

TOTAL PROHIBITION

THE SUPREME COURT OF SOUTH CAROLINA HEARD FROM.

No One Has the Authority to Issue Liquor Licenses.

A Columbia, S. C., special says: The supreme court of the state Tuesday rendered a decision which would seem to indicate that South Carolina has total prohibition. The court's decision is, however, not entirely satisfactory. The court decides that, under the law as it now stands, there is no authority invested with the power to grant licenses for the sale of spirituous liquors within the limits of this state, and hence the action of the city council of Florence in granting the injunction as asked for by the petitioners, in the case first named, must be granted.

In the second place the petitioner moves for his discharge from custody on the ground that there is now no law forbidding the sale of spirituous liquors within the limits of the state. The court decides that this is a mistaken view of the law. On the contrary it holds that the act of 1892, commonly called the "dispensary act," having been declared unconstitutional in all its provisions excepting that forbidding the granting of licenses to sell spirituous liquors after the day therein named, the repealing clause of that act failed, and must be regarded as if never enacted, and hence the previous law forbidding the sale of spirituous liquors without a license remains of force, under which the petitioner may be lawfully indicted. In addition to this, he may also be proceeded against for a violation of the ordinances of the city of Florence mentioned in the warrant, under which he has been arrested and is now held in custody.

Governor Tillman says that he has no money with which to enforce prohibition, and that without money prohibition cannot be enforced.

The Road to be Extended.

The bondholders' committee of the Savannah, Americus and Montgomery Railroad Company decided to reorganize and take the property out of the receiver's hands. It was also decided to extend the road seventy-four miles into Savannah. One million dollars has been pledged by a syndicate composed of New York, Baltimore and Richmond bankers for these purposes.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF.

MADE UP OF ITEMS FROM ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD

Showing What is Going On In Our Own and Foreign Lands.

A cable dispatch from Vienna, Austria, says: The strike of miners at Olmuz, Bavaria, is still spreading. Additional troops have been sent to the scene to prevent disorder. The strike includes 8,000.

The steamer Australia arrived at San Francisco Saturday morning from Honolulu, bringing advices to the 28th ultimo. All was quiet. Admiral Irwin, who was relieved by Admiral Walker and Paul Neurman were passengers on the Australia.

What appears to be a revival of the anarchist agitation was inaugurated in New York Sunday. Over one thousand persons, the majority of whom were of respectable appearance, assembled at the Thalia theater and liberally applauded the fiery speeches that were delivered.

A sensation has been caused at St. Louis, Mo., by the announcement that Bishop D. S. Tuttle, of the Missouri diocese of the Protestant Episcopal church, has joined the Salvation army. The announcement of this fact was made from the platform of the Midland congress of the army by Mrs. Ballington Booth.

A London cable dispatch says: The reduction of the government's majority in the house of commons on nearly every important division must be accepted from all but the most extreme partisan point of view as an omen of an early dissolution, and few persons are to be found who regard the situation in any other light.

A cable dispatch from Rotterdam, Holland, says: A fire was discovered in the hold of the steamship Edam, which required most strenuous efforts of the ship's crew to subdue. The flames were finally extinguished and an investigation showed that the cargo is considerably damaged. The ship is only slightly injured.

Drexel, Morgan & Co., of New York, through their agents, John W. & D. S. Green, in Louisville, Ky., have purchased the bonds of those holders of the Louisville Southern opposed to the Richmond Terminal reorganization plan. This settles the matter and the Louisville Southern now passes into the reorganized Richmond Terminal system.

Mr. Kohlsaat has sold his half interest in the Chicago Inter Ocean to his partner, William Penn Nixon. It is understood that Mr. Nixon pays $400,000 for the stock. The paper is a fine paying property. Mr. Kohlsaat is very wealthy. He used to work on the streets of Chicago. He had an ambition to own a great newspaper, and the aim of his life was to that end.

A special from Connelsville, Pa., says: The strikers have gained their point of a complete shut-down in the coke region. Rainey's men have nearly all gone out, leaving only a few at work at Paul and Moyer. Fort Hill, Rainey, Elm Grove and Mt. Braddock are shut down tight. When the other operatives learned that Rainey had been closed down, they concluded to remain idle.

Heavy consumers of coal in St. Louis, Mo., who had feared serious results from a prospective famine in that much-needed article, are considerably relieved by a telegram received by Assistant General Manager Simpson, of the Consolidated Coal Company, stating that both mines Nos. 6 and 7, in Staunton, Ill., were in full operation again and that the coal strike in that section of Illinois is drawing to a close.

The severest storm known for years swept over Iowa City, Saturday afternoon. In fifteen minutes more than $200,000 damage was done to buildings and contents. The damage in the country is very great. The storm came from the west, preceded by dark clouds with vivid streaks of lightning and mutterings of thunder. Hailstones fell thick and fast, crushing through plate glass windows, peppering roofs and flooding stores and dwellings.

COXEY ORDERED TO MOVE.

The Sanitary Authorities Condemn His Camping Ground.

A Washington dispatch says: The district commissioners spent several hours Wednesday considering the report of the health department which pronounced the Coxey camp a menace to the health of the city and recommended, in the strongest language, that it be vacated. Dr. Hammett, health officer, declared that it was utterly impossible to make the camp habitable. It is very likely that a warrant will be sworn out charging Coxey with maintaining a nuisance. Coxey is getting ready to meet such a proceeding. He had a number of men at work improving the ground during the morning, but illness in the army is steadily increasing. Coxey was served with a notice to comply with the health regulations in regard to this camp within forty-eight hours, otherwise he will be prosecuted under a statute which imposes a fine of from $5 to $25 for each offense.

TOURISTS RESCUED.

They Were Imprisoned in a Cavern for Nine Days.

A cable dispatch from Gratz, Austria, says: A diver succeeded in reaching the party of tourists who have been imprisoned in the stalactite cavern at Sourisch for nine days past, owing to a sudden rise in the water and the fact that the passage into the cave became blocked with timber and bowlders. The diver found all seven of the tourists alive.

TRADE NOTES.

Business Review of the Past Week by Dun & Co.

R. G. Dun & Co's Weekly Review of Trade says; "It is now, as it has been for nearly a year, the amazement of intelligent observers that the United States suffers so little from reverses which other lands share, but which fall more heavily here than anywhere else. The past week has seen events which would suffice to call or to explain much disaster. Strikes of nearly all bituminous coal miners and coke workers, with numerous riots, strikes of many thousand men in other employments, stoppage of many manufacturing works in consequence, arrest of traffic on several great railroads by lawless proceedings and the tramping of discontented men, in all numbering several thousand, towards the national capital in the hope of controlling legislation; the lowest price ever known for wheat and almost the lowest prices ever known for commodities as a whole, exports of $5,400,000 gold, instead of abnormally cheapened products and the fall of the treasury gold reserve below the $100,000,000 limit, are significant of widespread difficulty. Yet the volume of business is but 13.3 per cent. less than a year ago. In some directions signs of improvement appear even now and the sublime faith of the people in their future is shown in the general belief that strikes and disorders will quickly disappear.

"It is also important that prices of iron and steel products promptly advanced in answer to the stoppage of some works through strikes, indicating that the recent improvement on the apparent demand was of a substantial character. At Pittsburg and Chicago, Philadelphia and New York, prices have generally advanced, though irregularly, and in bar iron quotations appear a shade weaker. Bessemer pig has advanced 75 cents to $1, steel billets $1 to $1.50, and plates and structural iron and steel and wire rods are stronger. Many reason that the advance may be maintained, at least for a time, because cost will rise if the strikes succeed, and if they fail, because of the demonstrated existence of a demand substantially equal to the full product of works thus far started.

"The money markets have not been disturbed by the large outgo of gold, which was taken mainly from the treasury through redemption of notes. The continued flow of unemployed money hither is not a sign of health nor the outgo of gold instead of wheat at 61 cents, or cotton at 7.31 cents. The demand for commercial loans of the better class does not increase, but there are more numerous applications for loans on questionable paper from the interior. Custom receipts were only $10,176,691 in April, against $15,418,638 last year, and are not likely to increase while tariff changes are pending. Exports of products are declining, though in April 9.2 per cent larger than last year, and the decrease in imports is about 33 per cent.

"The most encouraging sign is the marked decrease in liabilities of firms failing, which were only $1,443,144 for the last week of April, and for four weeks $8,366,567, of which $3,722,220 were of manufacturing and $4,644,367 of trading concerns. The amount of liabilities at the south was $2,919,419, against $3,111,032 in eastern and $2,692,257 in western states.

"Failures this week have been 233 in the United States against 216 last year and 355 in Canada against twenty-seven last year."

Delivering the Goods.

A Nashville dispatch says: The state funding board and the secretary of state, Morgan, left for New York Tuesday night with $1,000,000 of redemption bonds that have been sold to Blair & Co. at 98 cents, which is the same price paid for the $600,000 of penitentiary bonds. The bonds bear 4½ per cent interest. The proceeds will be utilized in redeeming $500,000 of 6s and $500,000 of 5s and the difference will save the state $10,000 per annum.

GROWTH OF THE SOUTH.

The Industrial Situation as Reported for the Past Week.

The review of the industrial situation in the south for the past week develops the fact that the strike among the coal miners is causing a decrease in the output of iron in the Birmingham district, where two furnaces have blown out for the want of fuel. The coal supply is growing less and the number of strikers is increasing. As the miners in many places in the southern field struck from sympathy and as their means of support are almost exhausted, it is believed that they will soon make a proposition to return to labor. The iron market is stronger as the supply diminishes. In some sections of the south business is growing lighter in consequence of labor troubles. Favorable weather has greatly improved crop conditions, and prospects are good excepting for peaches, which have been destroyed for this year.

Thirty-seven new industries were established or incorporated during the week, among which are the Texarkana Furniture Co. of Texarkana, Texas, capital $100,000; the Southern Book Is and Plow Co. of Dallas, Texas, with the same capital; the Contract Lumber Co., of Parsons, W. Va., capital $100,000, and a cotton mill with the same capital at Douglasville, Ga.; a cotton mill at Hall's Mills, S. C., brickworks at Asheville, Ky., and Elkins, W. Va., a brewery at Mobile, Ala., and a canning factory at Bessemer, Va. Electrical plants are reported at Batesville, Ark., Glasgow, Ky., and Raleigh, N. C.; flour and grist mills at Shellman, Ga., London, Ky., Letohatchee; La., Tyro Shops, N. C., and Bell's Depot, Tenn., and iron bridge works at Chattanooga, Tenn. An iron mining company has been organized at Knoxville, Tenn., a paper mill is to be built at Little Rock, Ark., and woodworking plants are to be established at Fayetteville, Ark., Ebren and Carrabelle, Fla., Shellman and Waycross, Ga., Lexington, Ky., Baton Rouge, La., Glen Alpine, N. C., Jackson, Tenn., and Emporia and Marshall, Tex.

Waterworks are to be built at Morganfield, Ky. The enlargements for the week include cotton mills at Columbus and Griffin, Ga., and Enterprise, Miss.; an oil mill at Kyle, Texas, and saw and planing mills at Baton Rouge and Robertsville, La.

The new buildings of the week, as reported, include business houses at Jacksonville and Tampa, Fla., Knoxville, Tenn., and Richmond, Va.; a church at Corinth, Miss., and a hotel at Fort Worth, Texas.—Tradesman (Chattanooga, Tenn.)

COXEY CONVICTED

OF TRAMPLING THE GRASS IN THE CAPITOL GROUNDS.

Browne and Jones Will Also Share in the Penalty.

A Washington special says: The three leaders of the commonweal—General Jacob Sleeher Coxey, Marshal Carl Browne and Christopher Columbus Jones—have been found guilty of violating the laws by a jury of their peers, and will have to submit to a sentence hereafter to be imposed by the court for their recent demonstration on the capitol grounds.

All three of the accused were convicted on the first count of the indictment, which charged them with displaying on the capitol grounds the banner of the Coxey Good Roads Association. Jones, of Philadelphia, was acquitted of the second count, which accused him of treading on the grass, but Coxey and Browne were convicted.

The jury retired at five minutes before 1 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, after hearing a long charge from Judge Miller, which left them little alternative but to convict if they followed his leadings. About half past 3 o'clock the jurors sent for the instructions given for the defense, but the government objected, and they filed into the courtroom, while the judge read the instructions.

Young Attorney Hyman endeavored, excitedly, to have the fact that the objection came from the prosecution laid before the jury, but he was suppressed. Judge Miller stated that he would not have handed over the written instructions under any circumstances, as that would have been irregular.

Only five minutes after this episode the jury returned with the verdict. General Coxey had been visiting with his wife and his daughter—the goddess of peace of the May-day procession—but took his seat within the bar, and all of the party received the result smilingly, except Mr. Hyman, who was on his feet with objection to the form in which the verdict was presented, but who was sat upon by his colleagues.

Motion for a New Trial.

Attorney Lipscomb immediately entered a motion for a new trial and another in arrest of judgment. Judge Miller gave him four days to file the formal paper. Then the judge made inquiries about bail, and Frank Hume, a well-known wholesale grocer, who several times has been a candidate for the democratic nomination to congress from the Virginia district across the Potomac river, signed a bond in $500 for each of the three convicted commonwealers.

THE STRIKE IN ALABAMA.

Apprehension that the Struggle Will Be a Long One.

The coal miner's strike in Birmingham Ala., district seems no nearer its close than when it began three weeks ago. Both strikers and operators remain firm. The continuation of the strike much longer threatens to cause the closing down of a number of industries, on account of the shortage in the coal supply. Already a number of coke ovens have banked, and two furnaces are preparing to blow out. It looks as if the struggle will be a long one, and while all is quiet, apprehension is felt, because every day marks a reduction in the food supply of the strikers.

AGREED TO A CUT.

Wages of Mobile and Ohio Men Reduced Eight Per Cent.

The Mobile and Ohio engineers have accepted a cut of 8 per cent. in wages. They agree that this 8 per cent. reduction shall go into effect May 8th and remain in force until December, then wages are to be restored for the four following months. If at the end of these four months the business does not justify full wages, the 8 per cent. cut will be made again. Committees representing three divisions of the road were present at a meeting in Mobile and signed the agreement.

Food for Coxey's Army.

There was a monster Coxey demonstration at Springfield, Mo., Saturday night. Colonel John O'Day, who is in deep sympathy with the movement, contributed 5,000 pounds of flour to the carload of provisions which will be shipped to Washington at once Four others each gave 1,000 pounds. The Republic Canning Company contributed a large amount of canned tomatoes.

Earthquakes in Venezuela.

The text of a cable message in regard to an earthquake in Venezuela received at Washington from Mr. Dartleman, the charge d'affairs of the United States legation at Caracas, is as follows: "Earthquake on the 24th of April destroyed the cities of Egido and Merida and several villages. The loss of life is said to be very heavy. Assistance would be appreciated."

A Judge Suicides.

Judge W. Green Smith, of Staunton, Va., committed suicide by shooting himself through the back of the head with a revolver. Judge Smith was widely known as a master commissioner of the circuit court. He was the first judge of the Staunton city court and was descended from a line of distinguished lawyers and jurists. He was about 64 years old.

Kelly and His Fleet.

A Des Moines, Ia., dispatch says: Commander Kelly sailed for Washington shortly after noon Wednesday. His flotilla consists of 150 flat boats. About 1,350 men sailed, and ten boats are filled with provisions.

A SPRING SONG.

O dear and gentle spring,
I sing
With gladsome, mirthful glee
To see
You on the wing.
My mind
Hath pined
For your return—
A year's
Full 18 karats strong—
Proportionally long.
Not that I love the lassitude,
With which my spirit is imbued
When you come on the scene,
With grasses green;
Not that I love your most unpleasant way
Of sprinkling hot and cold throughout the day;
Your beastly plan
Of aggravating man
By sending blizzard's when he's dressed for bed,
And making things red-hot when he fears sleet;
Not that I love one of your fads untold;
But I rejoice because you bring me gold.
For I'm a druggist keen, and o'er the counter take
A dollar for a pill it costs a cent to make,
Which tired-feeling people buy when you appear,
Which neither harms nor cures, but much allays their fear.
And so, O spring,
I sing
With gladsome glee
To see
You on the wing.

In the Toils of Love.

I saw him enter the restaurant in an uneasy, flurried way. He was dressed in his best—his high, stiff collar and exquisite coat sat uncomfortably upon his excited neck and shoulders. With a nervous hand he began his dinner, while a hand still more nervous held a small sheet of violet notepaper midway between his face and soup. He swallowed little, gave a number of contradictory orders, tipped over his tumbler and made a great fuss.

As we were waiting at the coat room he again drew from his pocket the sheet of violet notepaper, and I saw him smile feverishly as he perused it.

Later on, in the street, I saw him close under an electric light, where his eyes furtively jumped from the sheet of violet-colored notepaper in his hand to the electrics that lumbered by. The same feverish smile was on his countenance.

A certain car passed and he entered it. And as he comfortably seated himself in a corner, he once more drew the violet-hued note from his pocket and read with the same child-like interest, and the smile on his face was still feverish.—Boston Courier.

The French Navy.

The French Navy, while it does not embrace as many vessels as the navy of Great Britain, is stronger in men. The British Navy includes eighty-two armored ships, as against fifty-eight for France, and 137 unarmored ships, as against sixty-five for France. It is also stronger in gunboats, but the French Navy has more torpedo boats. The total active list in officers and men is: Great Britain, 63,452; France, 76,220. Additional to this are the Naval Reserves, aggregating 76,700 for Great Britain, as against 94,176 for France.—New York Sun.

TO COUNTY OFFICIALS.

For the next eight months the View offers to publish all the advertising coming from the office of the Sheriff, Tax Collector, Tax Assessor, Treasurer, Probate Judge, Circuit Clerk and County Commissioners at the uniform rate of sixty per cent less than the legal rates.

The View thus publicly makes its bid so that if the officers are disposed to do any thing in the line of saving the people's money the View will help them to that end.

THE COST OF THE ALLIANCE.

There was a mass meeting of Democrats of beat No. 3 at Isabella Academy, Saturday, April the 28th, at which a Democratic club was organized enrolling thirty-three names, all of whom are very sure of success in the coming election.

Our people are getting very much disgusted at hearing so many false charges against the Democratic party as being responsible for the present evil times when the truth, so far as our state and government affairs are concerned, the trouble is right here among ourselves. We are informed by good and responsible Alliancemen of the order that it costs one dollar to join them, and that little petty collections were taken up at every meeting, which altogether far exceeded the regular dues. Now to be fair with our erring brothers, say that these collections only amounted to $1.50 per year, this add'd to the regular dues give cash tax of 2.50 per year for each man in the order. The Alliance has been in existence for 7 years, this then makes it cost each member $17.50. For the entire time say there has been an average of fourteen hundred Alliancemen in the county (this is most likely below the average, but we desire to be within our limits) then we have the enormous sum of twenty-four thousand in cash that the great bundle of conflicting sound has cost the honest hard-working people of our country only to build up designing and cunning men. Add then the admission fees to this and it gives twenty-five thousand nine hundred. There is the Alliance Exchange which has published to the world (if we are not mistaken) that it had a cash capitol of $20,000. Suppose our county to be only an average Alliance county, there being 66 counties in the State the exchange then would cost us three thousand and six hundred and thirty-six dollars. Then there was a sale of about five hundred bales of cotton by our farmers to a so-called English Spinner on which they lost about one dollar per bale, as our Clanton merchants can testify, which would be five dollars. Every intelligent man in the alliance knows that it costs more to buy through the exchange and alliance stores than to buy direct from dealers from local merchants. In an instance in hurrying through the exchange in Montgomery by an agent sent by a sub-alliance according to his own statement the goods bought cost 16⅔ more per cent more than if he had bought them himself from the dealers. In another case, which came under my knowledge, on flour the party saved 12½ per cent by leaving the Alliance store and buying of our local merchants. We think from the best information we can get that it is safe to say that goods bought through the exchange cost at least ten per cent more than they should have cost. It is very low we think to estimate that there has been at least five hundred dollars of our people's money squandered in this way, fostering and supporting what has proven to be their own enemy. Add all these cast items together and it gives us the most enormous sum of money that any people ever spent to get absolutely nothing in return except confusion disorder, unrest discontent and strife among ourselves and strengthen the Republican party. In the long vile train of the Alliance comes avarice, ambition, envy, anger, hate, and intolerance, the enemies of good government and a free people. As said before our people are tired and sick of hearing the charges brought against the Democratic party that they are responsible for the hard times when in fact the figures and facts show that the Alliance and its evil figures are wholly responsible for them. Suppose Chilton County to be an average Alliance county and that the Alliance has cost us as shown by the figures $30,536,36 then there being 66 counties in the state the Alliance then would cost the state of Alabama $2,015,399.76 Oh how enormous are these figures, and yet there is a strong show of truth in them. Suppose this money was in circulation among us, our values would increase one hundred per cent in six months. During all these evil times the Democratic party has been standing close to the people pleading with them and begging them not to spend their time and sacrifice all their hard earnings to this God of discord. If you notice I have said nothing about the expense of county and state Alliances. We insist that the people look at these things as they are and come into the fold of the grand old Democratic party and let us stand shoulder to shoulder hand in hand and whoop at a victory for Democracy as a moment to the truth of her principles and doctrines the interest of the grand government, in the interest of our country, in the interest of our homes, our wives our children against negro rule and in white supremacy. In my next I will show something about the lost time and the unproduced wealth that has been spent in the service of this Idol. Vox Populi.

DEMOCRATIC COUNTY CONVENTION.

The Democrats of Chilton County met in Convention at 11 o'clock, Wednesday and selected Dr. H. W. Calley for temporary Chairman, and L. C. Day permanent Secretary. By unanimous consent one delegate was sent to the State Convention for Oates and four for Capt. Johnston. The following are the Executive Committeemen elected from the various beats: Beat one, James McKee; 2, Dr. J. P. Givhan, 3 G. L. Speer and E. J. Hayes, 4, R. Ehrman; 5, K. Wells and J A. Mitchell; 6, W. C. Dickerson, 7, Wm. Vines and J. H. Shoults; 8, D. J. Wakersworth, 9 J. Bice. Mr. K. Wells was made permanent chairman of the committee and L. C. Day secretary. The State and National administrations were unanimously endorsed.

CLEVELAND'S WISDOM.

IT MAY RESULT IN ACTUAL BIMETALISM.

Mobile Register.

The statement of Right Hon. A. J. Balfour, Conservative leader of the House of Commons, made in his address of welcome to the Bimetalic conferece in London yesterday, is a remarkable endorsement of the wisdom displayed by President Cleveland in insisting that the United states can not alone sustain silver, but that if this country refuses to attempt the work, all others of the great powers will be forced to join her in undertaking it. Mr. Cleveland, therefore, urged the repeal of the silver purchase law and refused to sign the Bland seigniorage bill. He gave no countenance to efforts which were made to give silver a standing on the credit of the United States done, the whole world unload its silver upon us and bimetalism would be postponed in practice to the indfinite future. Now comes Mr. Balfour and practically declares that Mr. Cleveland is right. He says: "Many who were suspicious of a doubt standard bi-metalic symtem now recognize, in view of the great impending dangers, that the best safeguard is to rehabilitate silver as one of the great instruments of the momentary transactions of the world. It is absolutely necessary that the momentary functions of silver should be restored, if business is to be carried on upon a solid basis. The difficulties international agreement are as to details, and if any question should be settled by international agreement surely this one should be so settled. The action of the United States in the purchase of large quantities of silver bullion has forced the Indian and British Governments into a system now prevailing, but the time has come when we ought to enter into agreement with the countries of the world for a bi-metalic joint standard. The solution of the problem is easier now than it will be five years hence. A great responsibility rests upon those who keep England in stupid isolation on this great quetion.

Kolb Sacrifices The Principles of His Party.

Luverne Liberal.

As the Liberal said last week that it would, in this issue decide whether or not it would allow itself to be led off into the republican Kolb, and as the time has come for the decision, we here and now most emphatically refuse to support that gentleman for any office he offers for.

The Liberal has been satisfied beyond any question of doubt that Captain Kolb has pledged the strength of his and our vote to the rebublican party in 1896 for their aid to him now; and, were we to vote for the gentleman now, we would be voting to place the republican party in charge of Alabama in 1896 this we will never do.

This is not an issue demanding an arguement to the effect that the republican party is follwing the demands of the Jeffersonion party, championed by Captain Kolb here at home and repudiated when in the presence of the most vicious southern haters the country has ever produced. Such is not the case, but the truth of the matter is, that Captain Kolb after he had been nominated for govenor of Alabama upon the Jeffersonion platform sought such republicans as we mention, by going all the way to Washington to treat with them to bargain off the ignorance of his following. Then and there Capt Kolb allowed the republicans to dictate terms to him and he accepted the agreement. Upon the face of this contract the republican of Alabama—Kolb's home—met in Birmingham—Kolb's headquarters—and there put themselves on record as Kolb surporters as far as endorsing him in his campaign for govenor.

He who dallies is a dastard.
He who doubts is damned!

The Liberal is now convinced of the fact that this is a moment of peril to the interest of Alabama and her people; that Captain Kolb, who has heretofore led a portion of the vote which has deserted one or the other of the old parties and is now known as, or is called the Jeffersonians—and that he has bargained this vote as he would so many hogs; will, should his plans carry as he has promised, lead to the carpet big government which those selfsame followers of Captain Kolb so nobly fought years ago that a better power might and has ruled the country since, as all can testify, save of Alabama is concerned. So the agreement and compact reaches from Washington to Alabama; not from Alabama to Washington, and Captain Kolb makes concessions and follows rather than demands concessions of those whom he should conquer—to be true to the party who nominated him for the office he aspires to at their hands.

It is as plain and simple as two and two make four.

The Liberal does not deny that Captain Kolb had claims upon the people of Alabama which should have made him governor in 1892; so strong were these claims believed by the people up till a few weeks ago, that Captain Kolb's popularity had lost none of his strength until his last deal in our principles came to light, now thousands his followers will desert him. To support him now is to surport republicans in 1896, and we cannot believe that the rank and file of the Jeffersonian party and its principles can be led off by any one man as Captain Kolb will soon find.

In conclusion, we will state that the Liberal has heretofore stood by Captain Kolb in the face of much adverse comment and under circumstances that caused us at times to doubt the wisdom of the course. But he was then the head of the Jeffersonian party, and as such was entitled to the most royal surport of Kolb. therfore, it gives us no pleasure now to say that to follow him further would be to desert the party of our state and section and the party that we were taught to worship by a blessed man who has long since passed into the great unknown. The Jeffersonian party and its principles will live on despite the efforts of Captain Kolb to sell us as stock in-trade nor will we give one inch nor concede a solitary point the republicans in whose ranks Captain Kolb has seen fit to be hereafter found.

The Liberal has no harsh criticism for Captain Kolb because we have parted company; our paths will henceforth run in different directions, hence there will be no occasion for us to come in contact one with the other as in the past Capt. Kolb may think he is right or our entire party is wrong, but until we are convinced that the Jeffersonian principles are at fault, we will continue to fight for such principles, though every man in the party desert our cause.

ELECTROPOISE CURES CANCER

Keysville, Fla. April 17th, 1894. Messrs. Dubois and Webb, Louisville, Ky.—Dear Sirs: "About eleven months ago I bought from you an Electropoise for the purpose of treating cancer. I had one of about ten years' standing, and it had reached a stage where it was making rapid progress, being about the size of a silver dollar. I knew that I had to do something or my time was about up, and you being the only party that I corresponded with that would give me any assurance of a cure, got my patronage. I am now happy to inform you that the cancer is no more, the Electropoise arrested the progress of the cancer perceptibly in about thirty-six to forty-eight hours and gradually and slowly grew less until now there is a place about the size of a pin head that is not quite healed but gradually closing up. You can use this or any part of it as a testimonial if you wish. Very truly yours M. M. Lillibridge."

D. A. Bryant, Hacknevville:—"I was badly crippled with rheumatism, also had a bad kidney trouble, I was helpless and could do no work. The Electropoise cured me and enabled me to work regularly.

Rev. W. C. Hearn, Talledega.—"For producing calm refreshing sleep and curing sciatic rheumatism the Electropoise can not be equaled.

Joseph Williams, Stevenson—"I can walk all over town and even run, whereas a few weeks ago I was a helpless cripple, the electropise did it."

Mrs. W. P. Nelson, Sunshine—"My recovery was wonderful. I have also tried the electropoise on several of my neighbors, for various ailments, nausea, kidney trouble of the worst form, all with the most gratifying results."

No more pleasant visitor has ever been to Clanton than Mr. Chas. B. Holt, of Montgomery. His agreeable manners make friends for him wherever he goes. The latch string always hangs outside for such men.

The "Deestrick Skule" given at Mullin's hall last Tuesday night under the management of Prof. W. J. Martin, wasquite a success, and was highly appreciated by the entire audience. We refrain (for like of space) from personating the actors, but each adorned in dress like scholars of the "deestrick skule," of yore, fully justified themselves in the representation.

Numerous friends mourn with Mr. J. H. Marbury and family in the death of his oldest daughter, Mrs. Walter Wilkerson, of Marion. We have known Miss Lizzie for several years. Her bright and happy disposition made scores of friends for her on every hand and we join with these in sending deepest sympathy to the bereaved husband and loved ones.

We have the grand jury in session this week. It is composed of good and true men who are anxious to do their duty and all they need is that citizens who know of violations of law shall act like true men and report such things. The good men of Chilton county must do their duty without fear or favor or our county will soon be given over to a gang of outlaws and toughs.

When you get through at the court house you will be tired and thirsty, so come down to the Clanton Drug Store and get a glass of ice cold soda water—any flavor.

The editor of the View learns with pleasure that Rev. Mr. Feagin spared neither friend nor foe in last Sundays sermon. He denounced in becoming language the sin and crime of public drunkenness and the use of profane language on the streets. The View joins in that condemnation and trusts that every man addicted to such habits will be indicted by the courts to pay the fullest penalty for such acts.

The Verbena Kid Nine in acceptance of a challenge from our kids to play ball Saturday, duly arrived here on the morn of said day for the contest and were hastily greeted by the kids of the town. After a prolonged discussion among both teams of bats, balls, mass, suits, umpire, ground, etc., to the apparent satisfaction of all concerned, it was found to be near the hour for the blast of the dinner horn, and forthwith, each kid of the nine, was invited to the respective home of another, who relunger appeased, they immediately repaired to the ball ground, and umpire Bailey gave the signal to play ball. The Verbena kids clad in their uniforms of blue, played like "bully boys with blue eyes," but regardless of the fact, our kids won the game and carried off the colors in triumph and great glee, as evidenced by enthusiastic yells. The score stood: Verbena 9; Clanton 15.

Headquarters During Court.

Everybody invited to make my store headquarters during court. If you do not want to trade you are welcome anyhow, and I will not annoy you by urging you to buy something you do not want. W. L. Sumpey.

A GREAT RUSH.

On Tuesday morning an accident which might have resulted in seriously affecting the whole of Chilton County, was barely averted in the general merchandise store of W. M. Wilson & Bro. A gentleman who was in town attending court, having heard so much about the low prices asked by Messrs. Wilson & Bro., went into the store to investigate them, and pretty soon everybody in town was flocking in for the same reason. The first gentleman who was crippled, cried out to the multitude that he would use the courts against them all if they did not hold back so as not to trample upon him. But Messrs. Wilson & Brother were so prompt and courteous that they found time to serve every customer satisfactorily, and no harm was done, and the prices found even more reasonable than anticipated.

CIRCUIT COURT.

Last Monday morning, his honor, Judge, N. D. Denson called the court together and delivered to the grand jury a charge full of sound advice. He explained fully the responsibilities of that position. These men are the guardians of the peace and good citizens look to them to bring to the bar of justice every man high or low who violates the law. No man must be prosecuted for mere envy hate or malice. Not to find true bills because you hate somebody. Neither shall anyone be allowed to go unpunished by hope of reward or fear. Speaking of whiskey laws, the Judge said that it was the hardest law on the Statute books to enforce. The whiskey men have more tricks to defeat the law, yet the jury must do its duty. Witnesses will often perjure themselves, and whiskey men take the chances that witnesses will so act in their favor. He favors sending perjurors to the penitentiary. Officers, books, court house, jail, poor house and roads are to be diligently inquired into.

THE COST OF THE ALLIANCE.

There was a mass meeting of Democrats of beat No. 3 at Isabella Academy, Saturday, April the 28th, at which a Democratic club was organized enrolling thirty-three names, all of whom are very sure of success in the coming election.

Our people are geiting very much disgusted at hearing so many false charges against the Democratic party as being responsible for the present evil times when the truth, so far as our state and government affairs are concerned, the trouble is right here among ourselves. We are informed by good and responsible Alliancemen of the order that it costs one dollar to join them, and that little petty collections were taken up at every meeting, which altogether far exceeded the regular dues. Now to be fair with our erring brothers, say that these collections only amounted to $1.50 per year, this added to the regular dues gives cash tax of 2.50 per year for each man in the order. The Alliance has been in existence for 7 years, this then makes it cost each member $17.50. For the entire time say there has been an average of fourteen hundred Alliancemen in the county (this is most likely below the average, but we desire to be within our limits) then we have the enormous sum of twenty-four thousand in cash that the great bundle of conflicting sound has cost the honest hard-working people of our country only to build up designing and cunning men. Add then the admission fees to this and it gives twenty-five thousand nine hundred. There is the Alliance Exchange which has published to the world (if we are not mistaken) that it had a cash capitol of $210,000. Suppose our county to be only an average Alliance county, there being 66 counties in the State the exchange then would cost us three thousand and six hundred and thirty-six dollars. Then there was a sale of about five hundred bales of cotton by our farmers to a so-called English Spinner on which they lost about one dollar per bale, as our Clanton merchants can testify, which would be five dollars. Every intelligent man in the alliance knows that it costs more to buy through the exchange and alliance stores than to buy direct from dealers from local merchants. In an instance in hurrying through the exchange in Montgomery by an agent sent by a sub-alliance according to his own statement the goods bought cost 10⅝ more per cent more than if he had bought them himself from the dealers. In another case, which came under my knowledge, on flour the party saved 12½ per cent by leaving the Alliance store and buying of our local merchants. We think from the best information we can get that it is safe to say that goods bought through the exchange cost at least ten per cent more than they should have cost. It is very low we think to estimate that there has been at least five hundred dollars of our people's money squandered in this way, fostering and supporting what has proven to be their own enemy. Add all these cost items together and it gives us the most enormous sum of money that any people ever spent to get absolutely nothing in return except confusion disorder, unrest discontent and strife among ourselves and strengthen the Republican party. In the long vile train of the Alliance comes avarice, ambition, envy, anger, hate, and intolerance, the enemies of good government and a free people. As said before our people are tired and sick of hearing the charges brought against the Democratic party that they are responsible for the hard times when in fact the figures and facts show that the Alliance and its evil figures are wholly responsible for them. Suppose Chilton County to be an average Alliance county and that the Alliance has cost us as shown by the figures $30,536,36 then there being 66 counties in the state the Alliance then would cost the state of Alabama $2,015,399,76 Oh how enormous are these figures, and yet there is a strong show of truth in them. Suppose this money was in circulation among us, our values would increase one hundred per cent in six months. During all these evil times the Democratic party has been standing close to the people pleading with them and begging them not to spend their time and sacrifice all their hard earnings to this God of discord. If you notice I have said nothing about the expense of county and state Alliances. We insist that the people look at these things as they are and come into the fold of the grand old Democratic party and let us stand shoulder to shoulder hand in hand and whoop at a victory for Democracy as a moment to the truth of her principles and doctrines the interest of the grand government, in the interest of our country, in the interest of our homes, our wives our children against negro rule and in white supremacy. In my next I will show something about the lost time and the unproduced wealth that has been spent in the service of this Idol. Vox Populi.

DEMOCRATIC COUNTY CONVENTION.

The Democrats of Chilton County met in Convention at 11 o'clock. Wednesday and selected Dr. H. W. Caffey for temporary Chairman, and L. C. Day permanent Secretary. By unanimous consent one delegate was sent to the State Convention for Oates and four for Capt. Johnston. The following are the Executive Committeemen elected from the various beats: Beat one, James McKee; 2, Dr. J. P. Givhan, 3 G. L. Speer and E. J. Hayes, 4, R. Ehrman; 5, K. Wells and J A. Mitchell; 6, W. C. Dickerson, 7, Wm. Vines and J. H. Shoults; 8, D. J. Watersworth, 9 J. Bice. Mr. K. Wells was made permanent chairman of the committee and L. C. Day secretary. The State and National administrations were unanimously endorsed.

CLEVELAND'S WISDOM.

IT MAY RESULT IN ACTUAL BIMETALISM.

Mobile Register.

The statement of Right Hon. A. J. Balfour, Conservative leader of the House of Commons, made in his address of welcome to the Bimetalic conferece in London yesterday, is a remarkable endorsement of the wisdom displayed by President Cleveland, in insisting that the United states can not alone sustain silver, but that if this country refuses to attempt the work, all others of the great powers will be forced to join her in undertaking it. Mr. Cleveland, therefore, urged the repeal of the silver purchase law and refused to sign the Bland seigniorage bill. He gave no countenance to efforts which were made to give silver a standing on the credit of the United States done, the whole world unload its silver upon us and bimetalism would be postponed in practice to the indfinite future. Now comes Mr. Balfour and practically declares that Mr. Cleveland is right. He says: "Many who were suspicious of a doubt standard bi-metalic system now recognize, in view of the great impending dangers, that the best safeguard is to rehabilitate silver as one of the great instruments of the momentary transactions of the world. It is absolutely necessary that the momentary functions of silver should be restored, if business is to be carried on upon a solid basis. The difficulties international agreement are as to details, and if any question should be settled by international agreement surely this one should be so settled. The action of the United States in the purchase of large quantities of silver bullion has forced the Indian and British Governments into a system now prevailing, but the time has come when we ought to enter into agreement with the countries of the world for a bi-metalic joint standard. The solution of the problem is easier now than it will be five years hence. A great responsibility rests upon those who keep England in stupid isolation on this great question.

Kolb Sacrifices The Principles of His Party.

Luverne Liberal.

As the Liberal said last week that it would, in this issue decide whether or not it would allow itself to be led off into the republican Kolb, and as the time has come for the decision, we here and now most emphatically refuse to support that gentleman for any office he offers for.

The Liberal has been satisfied beyond any question of doubt that Captain Kolb has pledged the strength of his and our vote to the rebublican party in 1896 for their aid to him now; and, were we to vote for the gentleman now, we would be voting to place the republican party in charge of Alabama in 1896 this we will never do.

This is not an issue demanding an arguement to the effect that the republican party is follwing the demands of the Jeffersonion party, championed by Captain Kolb here at home and repudiated when in the presence of the most vicious southern haters the country has ever produced. Such is not the case, but the truth of the matter is, that Captain Kolb after he had been nommated for govenor of Alabama upon the Jeffersonion platform sought such republicans as we mention, by going all the way to Washington to treat with them to bargain off the ignorance of his following. Then and there Capt Kolb allowed the republicans to dictate terms to him and he accepted the agreement. Upon the face of this contract the republican of Alabama—Kolb's home—met in Birmingham—Kolb's headquarters—and there put themselves on record as Kolb surporters as far as endorsing him in his campaign for gover-

He who dallies is a dastard.
He who doubts is damned!

The Liberal is now convinced of the fact that this is a moment of peril to the interest of Alabama and her people; that Captain Kolb, who has heretofore led a portion of the vote which has deserted one of the other of the old parties and is now known as, or is called the Jeffersonians—and that he has bargained this vote as he would so many hogs; will, should his plans carry as he has promised, lead to the carpet big government which those selfsame followers of Captain Kolb so nobly fought years ago that a better power might and has ruled the country since, as all can testify, nor of Alabama is concerned. So the agreement and compact reaches from Washington to Alabama; not from Alabama to Washington, and Captain Kolb makes concessions and follows rather than demands concessions of those whom he should conquer—to be true to the party who nominated him for the office he aspires to at their hands.

It is as plain and simple as two and two make four.

The Liberal does not deny that Captain Kolb had claims upon the people of Alabama which should have made him governor in 1892; so strong were these claims believed by the people up till a few weeks ago, that Captain Kolb's popularity had lost none of his strength until his last deal in our principles came to light, now thousands his followers will desert him. To surport him now is to surport republicans in 1896, and we cannot believe that the rank and file of the Jeffersonian party and its principles can be led off by any one man as Captain Kolb will soon find.

In conclusion, we will state that the Liberal has heretofore stood by Captain Kolb in the face of much adverse comment and under circumstances that caused us at times to doubt the wisdom of the course. But he was then the head of the Jeffersonian party, and as such was entitled to the most royal surport of Kolb. therfore, it gives us no pleasure now to say that to follow him further would be to desert the party of our state and section and the party that we were taught to worship by a blessed man who has long since passed into the great unknown. The Jeffersonian party and its principles will live on despite the efforts of Captain Kolb to sell us as stock in-trade nor will we give one inch nor concede a solitary point the republicans in whose ranks Captain Kolb has seen fit to be hereafter found.

The Liberal has no harsh criticism for Captain Kolb because we have parted company; our paths will henceforth run in different directions, hence there will be no occasion for us to come in contact one with the other as in the past Capt. Kolb may think he is right or our entire party is wrong, but until we are convinced that the Jeffersonian principles are at fault, we will continue to fight for such principles, though every man in the party desert our cause.

ELECTROPOISE
CURES
CANCER

Kersville, Fla, April 17th, 1894.
Messrs. Duboise and webb, Louisville, Ky.—Dear Sirs: "About eleven months ago I bought from you an Electropoise for the purpose of treating cancer. I had one of about ten years' standing, and it had reached a stage where it was making rapid progress, being about the size of a silver dollar. I knew that I had to do something or my time was about up, and you being the only party that I corresponded with that would give me any assurance of a cure, got my patronage. I am now happy to inform you that the cancer is no more, the Electropoise arrested the progress of the cancer perceptibly in about thirty-six to forty-eight hours and gradually and slowly grew less until now there is a place about the size of a pin head that is not quite healed but gradually closing up. You can use this or any part of it as a testimonial if you wish. Very truly yours M. M. Lillibridge."

D. A. Bryant, Hackneyville:—"I was badly crippled with rheumatism, also had a bad kidney trouble, I was helpless and could do no work. The Electropoise cured me and enabled me to work regularly.

Rev. W. C. Hearn, Talledega:—"For producing calm refreshing sleep and curing sciatic rheumatism the Electropoise can not be equaled.

Joseph Williams, Stevenson—"I can walk all over town and even run, whereas a few weeks ago I was a helpless cripple, the electropise did it."

Mrs. W. P. Nelson, Sunshine—"My recovery was wonderful. I have also tried the electropoise on several of my neighbors, for various ailments, nausea, kidney trouble of the worst form, all with the most gratifying results."

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Day, of Jemison, visited relatives in Clanton this week.

Dr. F. H. Givhan, of Jemison, was down this week during the court session.

Mrs. W. H. Merritt and children returned Saturday from a visit to Montgomery.

We would be glad to mention by name every visitor to court, but space forbids it.

There are nine prisoners in the county jail, all of whom will be disposed of next week.

Quarterly Conference will be held at the Methodist Church next Saturday and Sunday.

Miss Smith, an accomplished young lady, of Jemison, visited friends in Clanton this week.

Mr. James A. Dudley spent Monday and Tuesday in Montgomery as a witness in U. S. Court.

Ice cold soda water at the Clanton Drug Store.

Dr. G. W. Dawson was in Clanton Monday. He has located at Kincheon, and starts out on a new career. Success to him.

The trial of Alex Shelton, negro, for the killing of Mr. James Harris, of Plantersville, last year takes place next Tuesday.

Dr. J. J. Dawson has the true ring about him. He tells Democrats that there can be no excuse for any one of them to be without the Chilton View.

Passengers and people arriving here take a rush for the store of W. F. Culp, whose wide rep. for selling best goods at cheapest price is well known.

The Baptist Sunday School will give a picnic in the near future, viz. when chickens grow ripe, berries, etc. The place has not been decided upon yet.

The contract on Merritt's store has been let, foundation laid and framing started. It will be a handsome two-story building, and appearances will be much improved in that location.

Messrs. D. M. Foshee and Caldwell McMorries minnrods and fishermen, returned last Saturday from a two days sport on Mulberry, and reported plenty of fish and a jolly sojourn.

Pure fruit juice soda water, ice cold, at the Clanton Drug Store.

Mr. W. H. Mills, a jolly citizen of Billingsley, attended court Monday and gave us a pleasant call. He is an Oates man, a strong supporter of Mr. Cleveland and stands flat-footed on the Democratic platform.

Everyone is invited to be present on next Tuesday night at Mullin's hall. A minstrel will be given by the young men of the town for the benefit of the cemetery. Much practice has been given to each part and play, and it will be a grand success.

Rev. J. G. Lowrey left last Tuesday for the Southern Baptist Convention in Dallas, Texas. He expects to visit relatives while in that state, and will be absent for three weeks. The members of his church wish for him a pleasant and profitable trip. Rev. Mr. Hogan, of Birmingham, will fill his appointment at the Baptist Church here next Sunday and all are invited to attend services.

Ice cold soda water at the Clanton Drug Store.

No more pleasant visitor has ever been to Clanton than Mr. Chas. B. Holt, of Montgomery. His agreeable manners make friends for him wherever he goes. The latch string always hangs outside for such men.

The "Deestrick Skule" given at Mullin's hall last Tuesday night under the management of Prof. W. J. Martin, was quite a success, and was highly appreciated by the entire audience. We refrain (for like of space) from personating the actors, but each adorned in dress like scholars of the "deestrick skule," of yore, fully justified themselves in the representation.

Numerous friends mourn with Mr. J. H. Marbury and family in the death of his oldest daughter, Mrs. Walter Wilkerson, of Marion. We have known Miss Lizzie for several years. Her bright and happy disposition made scores of friends for her on every hand and we join with these in sending deepest sympathy to the bereaved husband and loved ones.

We have the grand jury in session this week. It is composed of good and true men who are anxious to do their duty and all they need is that citizens who know of violations of law shall act like true men and report such things. The good men of Chilton county must do their duty without fear or favor or our county will soon be given over to a gang of outlaws and toughs.

When you get through at the court house you will be tired and thirsty, so come down to the Clanton Drug Store and get a glass of ice cold soda water—any flavor.

The editor of the View learns with pleasure that Rev. Mr. Feagin spared neither friend nor foe in last Sundays sermon. He denounced in becoming language the sin and crime of public drunkenness and the use of profane language on the streets. The View joins in that condemnation and trusts that every man addicted to such habits will be indicted by the courts to pay the fullest penalty for such acts.

The Verbena Kid Nine in acceptance of a challenge from our kids to play ball Saturday, duly arrived here on the morn of said day for the contest and were hastily greeted by the kids of the town. After a prolonged discussion among both teams of bats, balls, mass, suits, umpire, ground, etc., to the apparent satisfaction of all concerned, it was found to be near the hour for the blast of the dinner horn, and forthwith, each kid of the nine, was invited to the respective home of another, where hunger appeased, they immediately repaired to the ball ground, and umpire Bailey gave the signal to play ball. The Verbena kids clad in their uniforms of blue, played like "bully boys with blue eyes," but regardless of the fact, our kids won the game and carried off the colors in triumph and great glee, as evidenced by enthusiastic yells. The score stood: Verbena 9; Clanton 15.

Headquarters During Court.

Everybody invited to make my store headquarters during court. If you do not want to trade you are welcome anyhow, and I will not annoy you by urging you to buy something you do not want.

W. L. Sampey.

A GREAT RUSH.

On Tuesday morning an accident which might have resulted in seriously affecting the whole of Chilton County, was barely averted in the general merchandise store of W. M. Wilson & Bro. A gentleman who was in town attending court, having heard so much about the low prices asked by Messrs. Wilson & Bro., went into the store to investigate them, and pretty soon everybody in town was flocking in for the same reason. The first gentleman who was crippled, cried out to the multitude that he would use the courts against them all if they did not hold back so as not to trample upon him. But Messrs. Wilson & Brother were so prompt and courteous that they found time to serve every customer satisfactorily, and no harm was done, and the prices found even more reasonable than anticipated.

CIRCUIT COURT.

Last Monday morning, his honor, Judge, N. D. Denson called the court together and delivered to the grand jury a charge full of sound advice. He explained fully the responsibilities of that position. These men are the guardians of the peace and good citizens look to them to bring to the bar of justice every man high or low who violates the law. No man must be prosecuted for mere envy hate or malice. Not to find true bills because you hate somebody. Neither shall anyone be allowed to go unpunished by hope of reward or fear. Speaking of whiskey laws, the Judge said that it was the hardest law on the Statute books to enforce. The whiskey men have more tricks to defeat the law, yet the jury must do its duty. Witnesses will often perjure themselves, and whiskey men take the chances that witnesses will so act in their favor. He favors sending perjurors to the penitentiary. Officers, books, court house, jail, poor house and roads are to be diligently inquired into.

Reclaiming Arid Land.

The special committee of the United States senate on irrigation and reclamation of arid land says in its report: "The first step in such a survey, the water sources and supplies being ascertained, is to locate the reservoir sites for their conservation and the lines of main canals and ditches needed for the proper distribution of the same." And it adds, "Congress should provide for the same,"—that is, this kind of a survey.—Ex.

Bank of England Oddities.

Among the curiosities which are occasionally shown to favored visitors are some specimens of ancient notes, a number of them for denominations no longer in vogue, such as £1, £15 and £25. There is also carefully preserved the oldest surviving note, one of the year 1699, the amount being written with ink, says the Pall Mall Budget. Another curiosity is a note for £1,000,000, ($5,000,000) which was required for some transaction between the bank and the government, but in this case, too, the amount is written with the pen. The longest time during which a note has remained outside the bank is 111 years. It was for £25, and it is computed that the compound interest during that long period amounted to no less than £6,000. There is quite a labyrinth of vaults where the disused notes are stored until they have reached the necessary maturity of five years. They are estimated to weigh ninety-one tons, and number about 77,745,000, filling 13,400 boxes, and were of the original value of £1,750,626,600. The Bank of England note is a legal tender for any amount in excess of its face value, but not for less. Thus a person might refuse to take a £5 note in payment of a debt of £4 19s 6d, though, as a matter of fact, it must be remembered that bank notes are only legal tender as between members of the public, so long as the bank pays in gold on demand. If such an unlikely thing were to happen as the bank being unable to redeem its promises to pay, then its notes would at once cease to be legal tender. Even as it is, their legal tender quality does not extend to Ireland or Scotland.

All in a Tremble!

Nervous, elderly ladies use this phrase to describe their tremors, and highly graphic it is. Nerves "all in a tremble" are best tranquilized and strengthened with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. The Bitters is a nervine because it is a tonic for the nerves, and tone is what the nerves require if they are weak and shaky. Digestion and assimilation are insured by it, and it remedies constipation, biliousness and malaria.

A good point in farming is the point of a pencil for noting down the things to be done about the farm.

It is rumored at Lexington, Ky., that a delegation of democrats will soon wait upon Colonel Breckinridge and present him a paper asking him, in the name of the party, to withdraw from the race.

The bronze figure for the confederate soldiers and sailors' monument at Richmond, Va., was drawn by hand from the depot to the site of the column it is to surmount. Many children wearing scarfs of red and white, helped to man the ropes.

Colonel W. C. P. Breckinridge delivered his opening address at Lexington, Ky., Saturday, in the campaign for re-election to congress from the Ashland district. The audience to which he spoke consisted of people from all portions of the state, there being special trains from many points outside the district.

The North Carolina state crop report says that cotton is all planted, save in some bottom lands, and is coming up well. Corn is all planted, save in some of the mountain sections. There is an increased acreage of corn, some tobacco is being transplanted and there are many complaints of scarcity of plants.

Attorneys representing the employes of the East Tennessee Virginia and Georgia railway system have filed a bill in the United States circuit court at Nashville restraining the receiver of the road from reducing salaries 10 per cent. as was announced for May 1st. The case will be tried before Judge H. H. Lurton in Cincinnati on May 15th.

The first effects of the miners' strike has been felt at Knoxville, Tenn. The Knoxville Rolling Mills have posted a notice, saying that they were compelled to shut down, owing to their inability to secure coal. This is one of the largest iron mills in the south. If the situation is not soon relieved, other manufacturing industries will be forced to shut down.

The supreme lodge of the National Order of Car Inspectors met in Chattanooga, Tenn., Monday. Delegates were in attendance from nearly every state. Mayor Ochs welcomed the guests to Chattanooga. At night a rally in their honor was held at the courthouse. President L. G. Ernst, of New Orleans, presided over the meeting.

The cruise of North Carolina's naval reserves occurs July 15th to 22d. One of its chief features will be a demonstration to the country that the naval militia can, without any outside aid, handle a war vessel. The North Carolina reserve will, for the first time, do this and the organization will itself handle the monitor Nantucket as well as engines and guns.

Argument was heard in the supreme court at Columbia, S. C., Monday in the Florence habeas corpus and injunction cases brought to further test the liquor laws. From intimations by Justice Pope during the argument it appears that he regards the effect of the dispensary decision to leave prohibition in force after this decision, it is believed that all doubt as to the law will be removed.

Work will be commenced at once on the construction of a railroad from Carryville station on the Knoxville and Ohio railroad, thirty-eight miles from Knoxville, Tenn., to a connection with the Louisville and Nashville at Cumberland Gap. The road will be built through the righest coal field in East Tennessee and about $400,000 has already been voted by different counties through which it will pass.

The section around Greenville, S. C., has been visited by severe thunder storms, accompanied with hail, doing serious injury in many localities. At Sandy Flat, fifteen miles above the city the storm was very severe, covering a section of six miles long and half a mile wide. Hail stones as large as hen eggs fell and so great was the fall that in some places the stones banked up two feet deep. Cattle were badly bruised and injured. Roofs were broken in and cotton plants were completely destroyed.

The indications are that the miners' strike in Alabama will be complete in the Montgomery section. The Eagle miners will probably be the last to go out. Winifred miners are working, but say that if the rest go out, they will too. It is believed that if the Pocahontas region would go out the operators to a man would shut down, strike or no strike, and wait to force better prices, making yearly contracts on them, and then open up, paying the miners better prices.

Excitement at Jacksonville, Fla., is at a white heat over Colvin's suit in the federal court to stop the sale of municipal bonds. The board of public works is badly embarrassed by reason of its contracts made in anticipation of having plenty of cash. A petition has been put in circulation pray-Colonel Colvin to abandon his suit. It is being circulated by one democrat and one republican, but is getting very few signatures. Colvin remains obdurate and is likely to continue so.

Mr. J. H. Jordan, one of the most prominent and wealthy citizens of Mobile, Ala., came to his death in a tragic manner. He entered a drug store and, stating that he was ill, asked for a drink of whisky and soda. He walked behind the dispenser's counter and the clerk went to the soda fountain in the front part of the store to obtain the soda. While he was gone Mr. Jordan, in his excitement, picked up a bottle of carbolic acid and, pouring an ounce into a glass, drank it down in a hurry. Death ensued in twenty minutes.

A house builder of Montgomery, Ala., recently contracted to erect a large building at Houston, Tex., finding that brickmasons there were rather high-priced, he took along with him about a hundred Montgomery negroes to do the brick work. As soon as they arrived at Houston they were met by a delegation from the Bricklayers' union of that city and were notified that they must pay $25 initiation fee into the union and must charge union rates, about $4 per day, or they had best not go to work. The Texas mechanics showed the emigrants that they meant it, and the negroes were forced to return home.

An order taking effect at once has been issued to the employes of the Pennsylvania railroad shops at Altoon to work only four days a week, nine hours, each of these days. It affects 7,000 men and paralyzes business to a great extent. The depression is attributed to the present coal strike.

Owing to the Kanawha strike and the great falling off in business the Chesapeake and Ohio road has cut off twenty telegraph offices on their local divisions, Lexington, Cincinnati, Ohio and Big Sandy. MINERS USE DYNAMITE.

They Blow Up a Plant Where the Workmen Refused to Go Out.

A mob numbering from 200 to 500 men, went to Price's mines, at Horse Creek, Ala., Sunday night at midnight, blew up the boilers and other machinery with dynamite, and fired one hundred shots into the company's store and houses. No one was hurt. The mob then went to the Victoria mines and blew up several freight cars loaded with coal and turned others loose down the mountain, wrecking them.

Sheriff Guttery, of Walker county, and a strong posse, have gone to the scene of the trouble, but the mob had left. It is believed that they have gone to other mines to commit like depredations. The cause of the trouble is, that the miners at Horse Creek refused to join the strike. The strikers have threatened them several times. Great excitement prevails in Walker county, and Governor Jones has been appealed to for protection.

Governor Jones is in constant telegraphic communication with the constabulary and military at Birmingham and Jasper. Every movement of the strikers is reported to him as he is exceedingly anxious to preserve the peace.

Some Virtue in Colored Glass.

It is not many years ago since the blue-glass craze was general, and every one was fixing blue glass in his house windows, in order to prolong his days and increase his happiness. Like every other craze that is overdone, blue glass soon became a drug on the market, but it is more than probable that there was just a grain of common sense in the idiocy. Recent experiments show that in certain diseases tinted light has a great effect. We all know how rapidly sore eyes will mend under the influence of natural green, and it is now stated that any kind of rash disease is benefitted by a red tint produced by glass of that color being placed in the windows. Every one knows that a good deal of comfort can be obtained from a subdued light, and after a while people generally will appreciate the value of colored glass, even if it does not prove to have any actual remedial influence.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A KENTUCKY MIRACLE.

JUDGE JOHN M. RICE TELLS HOW HE WAS CURED OF RHEUMATISM.

Crippled for Six Years With Sciatica in Its Worst Form. He Expected to Die, But Was Saved in a Marvelous Manner.

(From the Covington, Ky., Post.)

The Hon. John M. Rice, of Louisa, Lawrence County, Kentucky, has for the past two years retired from active life as Criminal and Circuit Judge of the Sixteenth Judicial District of Kentucky.

He has for many years served his native county and state in the legislature at Frankfort and at Washington, and, until his retirement, was a noted figure in political and Judicial circles. The Judge is well known throughout the state and possesses the best qualities which go to make a Kentucky gentleman honored wherever he is known.

About six years ago the bodily troubles which finally caused his retirement at a time when his mental faculties were in the zenith of their strength, began their encroachment upon his naturally strong constitution. A few days ago a Kentucky Post reporter called upon Judge Rice, who in the following words related the history of the causes that led to his retirement: "It is just about six years since I had an attack of rheumatism, slight at first, but soon developing into Sciatic rheumatism, which began first with acute shooting pains in the hips, gradually extending downward to my feet.

"My condition became so bad that I eventually lost all power of my legs, and then the liver, kidneys and bladder and, in fact, my whole system became deranged. I tried the treatment of many physicians, but receiving no lasting benefit from them, I had recourse to patent remedies, trying one kind after another until I believe there were none I had not sampled.

"In 1888, attended by my son John, I went to Hot Springs, Ark. I was not much benefited by some months' stay there when I returned home. My liver was actually dead, and a dull, persistent pain in its region kept me on the rack all the time. In 1890 I was reappointed Circuit Judge, but it was impossible for me to give attention to my duties. In 1891 I went to the Silurian Springs, Wakeshaw, Wis. I stayed there some time, but without improvement.

"Again I returned home, this time feeling no hopes of recovery. The muscles of my limbs were now reduced by atrophy to mere strings. Sciatic pains tortured me terribly, but it was the disordered condition of my liver that was, I felt, gradually wearing my life away. Doctors gave me up, all kinds of remedies had been tried without avail, and there was nothing more for me to do but resign myself to fate.

"I lingered on in this condition sustained almost entirely by stimulants until April, 1893. One day John saw an account of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People in the Kentucky Post. This was something new, and as one more drug after so many others could not do so much harm, John prevailed upon me to try the Pink Pills. It was, I think, in the first week in May the pills arrived. I remember I was not expected to live for more than three or four days at the time. The effect of the Pills, however, was marvelous, and I could soon eat heartily, a thing I had not done for years. The liver began almost instantaneously to perform its functions, and has done so ever since. Without doubt, the pills saved my life, and, while I do not crave notoriety, I cannot refuse to testify to their worth."

The reporter called upon Mr. Hughes, the Louisa druggist, who informed him that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been very popular since Judge Rice used them with such benefit. He mentioned several who have found relief in their use.

An analysis of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People shows that they contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effects of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, all forms of weakness either in male or female, and all diseases resulting from vitiated humors in the blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent, post paid, on receipt of price (50 cents a box, or 6 boxes for $2.50—they are never sold in bulk or by the 100), by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

Varieties of Onions.

From an experiment conducted on the grounds of the Colorado state agricultural college these points were observed:

The varieties producing the greatest weight of marketable onions were Giant White Garganus, Prize Taker, Large Red Italian Tripoli, Extra Early Flat Red, White Bermuda and Yellow Globe Danvers, in the order named. The varieties ripening first were Extra Early Flat Red, Queen, Neapolitan, White Bermuda, Large White Italian Tripoli and Pale Red Bermuda. More scullions were produced by the late varieties than by the early.—Ex.

Oldest Fan of Christendom.

The oldest Christian fan in existance dates, it is claimed, from the sixth century, having belonged to Queen Theodelinda, the princess who possessed a nail of the holy cross, which was afterward set in the iron crown of Lombardy. The fan is preserved in the castle of Monza, near Milan, and shown to the tourist as a relic. It is a folded fan, made in two leaves, which shut on each other by means of a spring. It is gilded and ornamented with pearls and rubies, and bears traces of a Latin prayer. The handle is of solid gold, inlaid with gems. The young girls of Milan go to Monza on a certain day in the year simply to touch this magical fan, as it is supposed to bring about a speedy and happy marriage.—The Collector.

An Army of Pensioners.

It is stated as a curious fact that there are now, nearly thirty years after the civil war, 300,000 more persons getting pensions than there were troops in the field on the Union side at any single time during the war. Yet there are 700,000 applicants for pensions yet to be acted upon. In June, 1893, the pension roll had 966,012 names and 711,150 claims were pending. The outgo for pensions was $158,155,342, a figure which exceeds all the pensions paid by all the nations in the world for all their wars.—Charleston News and Courier.

From away up in British North America comes the following greeting to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Chief Consulting Physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y. Mrs. Allen Sharrard, of Hartney, Selkirk Co., Manitoba, whose portrait, with that of her little boy, heads this article, writes as follows: "I take great pleasure in recommending Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for 'falling of the womb.' I was troubled with bearing down pains and pains in my back whenever I would be on my feet any length of time. I was recommended to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which I did with happy results. I feel like a new person after taking three bottles of it."

As we have just heard from the frigid North, we will now introduce a letter received from the Sunny South. The following is from Mrs. J. T. Smith, of Oakfuskee, Cleburne Co., Ala. She writes: "I was afflicted and suffered untold pains and misery, such as no pen can describe, for six years. I was confined to bed most of the time. I expected the cold hand of death every day. I was afflicted with leucorrhea—with excessive flowing—falling of the womb—bearing down sensation—pain in the small of my back—my bowels costive—smarting, itching and burning in the vagina, also palpitation of the heart. When I began taking your medicine I could not sit up, only a few minutes at a time, I was so weak. I took Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription three times per day, I also took his 'Golden Medical Discovery' three times per day and one of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets every night. I have taken seven bottles of the 'Discovery,' seven bottles of the 'Prescription' and five bottles of the 'Pellets.' I took these medicines seven months, regularly, never missed a day. These medicines cured me. I feel as well as I ever did in my life. Four of the best doctors in the land treated my case four years. They all gave me up as hopeless—they said I could not be cured, and could not live. Through the will of God, and your medicines, I have been restored to the best of health." Yours truly,

mrs J. T. Smith

Mrs. W. O. Gunekel, of No. 1461 South Seventh Street, Terre Haute, Indiana, writes: "I had been suffering from womb trouble for eight years having doctored with the most skillful physicians, but finding only temporary relief from medicines prescribed by them. I was advised by a friend to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which I did, and found, in taking six bottles of the 'Prescription' and two of the 'Golden Medical Discovery,' that it has proved a positive cure, for which words cannot express my gratitude for the relief from the great suffering that I so long endured."

Yours truly,

W. O. Gunekel

As a powerful, invigorating, restorative tonic "Favorite Prescription" improves digestion and nutrition thereby building up solid, wholesome flesh, and increasing the strength of the whole system. As a soothing and strengthening nervine "Favorite Prescription" is unequaled and is invaluable in allaying and subduing nervous excitability, irritability, nervous exhaustion, nervous prostration, neuralgia, hysteria, spasms, Chorea, or St. Vitus's Dance, and other distressing, nervous symptoms commonly attendant upon functional and organic disease of the womb. It induces refreshing sleep and relieves mental anxiety and despondency. Even insanity, when dependent upon womb disease, is cured by it.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a scientific medicine, carefully compounded by an experienced and skillful physician, and adapted to woman's delicate organization. It is purely vegetable in its composition and perfectly harmless in its effects in any condition of the system. For morning sickness, or nausea, due to pregnancy, weak stomach, indigestion, dyspepsia and kindred symptoms its use will prove very beneficial.

ODOR.

Sitting in a graceful morning gown with coffee stain effects on the front, the poetess mused.

A BACHELOR GIRL SHE'D BE.

She was a very cultured and fashionable young lady, albeit she was only six years old. A gentleman calling on her parents had an opportunity to have a brief tete-a-tete with her.

"I presume," he said, "that when you grow up you will marry as all little girls do?"

"No," she replied languidly. "No, I hardly think I shall."

"Indeed! That will be so disappointing."

"Possibly it may be to mamma and the young gentleman, but not to me, I fancy," and she lolled back in her chair quite tired to death, don't you know.—New York Telegram.

"HE LAUGHS BEST WHO LAUGHS LAST."

A young British soldier was conducting a party from the United States over the citadel at Quebec. One member of the party was a small maid of nine, and to her the young soldier devoted most of his attention. She was a saucy child, full of enthusiasm, and blessed with the earnest, aggressive patriotism of extreme youth.

"Here," said the soldier, as they stood before two worn brass cannon, "are two guns we took from your people at the battle of Bunker Hill," and he smiled in triumph.

Nonplussed for a moment, the child was still; then she looked up. "Come home with me," she said softly, "and I'll show you a whole country we took away from your people about the same time."—Life.

THE MACHINE WAS USED TO IT.

The stranger at the hotel approached the typewriter girl stationed in the reading-room and said, with some embarrassment:

"I want to send a letter to a man in Milwaukee, and I haven't time to sit down and write it. It wouldn't take you more than two or three minutes to click it off from my dictation, would it?"

"No, sir."

"An' that's what you're here for, isn't it?"

"Yes, sir."

"The—the man I want to write to has played me a scurvy trick in a business transaction, and I want to use some pretty strong language. I didn't know whether—whether you would—"

"I guess the machine can stand it," said the typewriter girl, with a yawn. "Fire away."—Chicago Tribune.

A COLD WAVE.

"I see," said the grocer, thoughtlessly, for he had forgotten that the man with the ginger beard was sitting behind the stove, "I see that the temperature dropped twenty degrees in fifteen minutes down in Texas the other day."

"I don't call that nothing," said the man with the ginger beard. "I remember when they was a party of us campin' up in the Black Hills that the temperature dropped so sudden that one of the mules in the outfit, which was in the act of kickin', was caught an' froze that way, an' stood with its heels in the air two days. We had a thermometer along, but the confounded thing went back on us, so I can't exzactly say jist how much of a drap it was."

"Oh, yes," said the school teacher, "it is a well known fact that at a temperature of about forty degrees below zero the mercury freezes and hence cannot register."

"That wasn't it at all, young man," said the man with the ginger beard, with fine scorn. "The durn mercury drapped so quickly that the friction made it red hot and busted the glass."

The man from Potato Creek began to snicker, but the man with the ginger beard stopped his mirth with a stony stare.—Indianapolis Journal.

An Old Discovery.

Two families who have lived in adjoining new houses on Thirty-first street, above Diamond, since last November, were quite unaware that they were closely related until a few days ago, when the information was conveyed to them in a curious manner. A young lady in one of the families has a taste for painting on porcelain, and recently finished an elaborately decorated plaque as a gift to a maiden aunt, whose name was embroidered on it in gold. When it was returned from the firing establishment the messenger by mistake left it next door. As the name on the plaque was identical with that of a young lady of this family, the anonymous gift was accepted with considerable wonderment as to its source. Failing to receive her plaque, the artist made inquiries, and discovered that both young ladies were nieces of the same maiden aunt, after whom one had been named, and that their mothers were sisters-in-law. The artist insisted upon her cousin retaining the plaque.—Philadelphia Record.

THROUGH THE SOUTH

ITEMS OF INTEREST GATHERED FROM SOUTHERN STATES.

Culled and Condensed From Our Daily Dispatches.

J. M. Howe, jeweler of Nashville, Tenn., has made a special assignment to secure creditors whose claims amount to $17,000.

The North Carolina state medical society met at Greensboro Tuesday in its fortieth annual session. Dr. William H. Cobb, of Goldsboro, presided. Two hundred physicians were present.

Governor Carr, of North Carolina, has chosen Morehead City as the place of encampment of the state guards this year. The exact date is not yet designated, but will be very early in July. The railways make a rate of 1 cent a mile each way.

Wise & Co., retail grocers, of Huntsville, Ala., have assigned for the benefit of creditors. Their liabilities are $9,750. Their assets are considered fully equal in value to that amount. The house was one of the oldest in the grocery business in the city.

The newspaper men of Richmond, at a meeting organized the Old Dominion Press Club, with thirty-five charter members. All newspaper men in Virginia are eligible to election as non-resident members. The daily and weekly papers will be embraced.

George P. Raney, chief justice of the supreme court of Florida, has tendered his resignation to take effect immediately. His term expires on December 31st, 1894, by limitation and the position is the only state office to be filled by the popular election in October next.

A New Orleans special says: Donelson Caffery, at present senator from Louisiana, filling the vacancy caused by the death of General Gibson, was elected Monday for the full term beginning March 4, 1895, and ending March 4, 1901. Mr. Caffery secured 97 votes, against 21 received by ex-Senator Jonas.

A special from New Orleans announces that Congressman Boatner who was the leading candidate to succeed White as United States Senator, has abandoned the fight and withdrew his name. This assures the election of Mr. Blanchard as senator. Mr. Blanchard is now filling the position by the appointment of the governor.

The Tennessee law, which the officials of that state contend authorizes them to tax the property of the Mobile and Ohio Railroad Company for the years 1885 to 1889, inclusive, has been declared by the supreme court of the United States in an opinion read by justice Jackson, to be invalid as far as that company is concerned.

Governor Tillman has decided to have a court of inquiry to look into the action of the military companies which refused to obey his orders to go to Darlington during the dispensary troubles. He has issued orders appointing Brigadier General Richbourg, Brigadier General E. J. Dennis and Colonel Willie Jones as the court, with J. T. Barron as judge advocate.

At Belleaire, W. Virginia, Monday morning, 300 union miners went to the non-union miners of the Belleaire rail and steel works and by persuasion and threats induced the miners to quit work. The miners, however, were allowed to go in to prop up their rooms for an indefinite shut-down. By the miners going out, the mammoth steel and rail works, employing 1,200 men, will be compelled to shut down.

A Chattanooga dispatch says: Owing to the action of the miners, who persist in remaining out on a strike for what the company considers no cause, the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad company has decided to dismantle the Whitwell mines, move the company's store and abandon the mines indefinitely. This means that 500 men will be out of support from this source, and will have to seek employment elsewhere.

The Marble City Business League, of Knoxville, Tenn., held an interesting meeting at which strong resolutions were offered pledging the hearty cooperation and support of the League to the Cotton States and International Exposition to be held in Atlanta in 1895. The resolutions further favored a state exhibit from Tennessee, and the state's representatives in congress were asked to support the movement to secure a national exhibit.

General Auditor Loop, of the Southern Express Company, has requested the Southern Associated Press to send out the following warning to all southern cities: "Spurious money orders, purporting to have been issued by Wells, Fargo & Co.'s express, Chicago, have been sent all over the south. Some are sent through banks and attorneys. The general auditor of the Southern Express Company hereby cautions all bankers, express agents and others to beware of these counterfeits."

Horrible tales of suffering come from Coal Creek valley where the strike is on. It is said that not a dozen miners in the valley have anything to eat nor money to buy food. Farmers in the neighborhood have been missing cattle and hogs lately, and a search throughout the forests disclose hides and traces of slaughtering. At Shamrock mines the miners held a meeting and decided to go to work. It is now believed that the local strike's backbone is broken and all the men will soon return to work.

There will be a trades display in Montgomery, Ala., on May 23rd which is being looked forward to with considerable interest by the citizens. It will be a sort of miniature mardi gras and a large number of visitors from neighboring towns are expected to witness the parade. The city will, at the time, be filled with political visitors in attendance on the democratic state convention which meets the day before. The idea at the bottom of the display appears to be to entertain the visitors and at the same time call their attention to Montgomery's prosperity and business advantages.

By the disastrous fire in Boston, Mass., 137 buildings were totally destroyed, 22 partly burned, 464 families burned out, and about 2,300 persons rendered homeless. This is the report of the district fire chief after a poll of the district. The loss is about half a million.

The miners and mine owners' representatives meeting at Cleveland, O., agreed that a committee of five members representing each state be appointed to agree upon a scale of wages to be presented to the joint convention, arranged satisfactorily to each state upon that basis.

A Montgomery, Ala., special of Wednesday says: The Oates men claim to have official reports from the conventions held in all of the counties in the state except six and that these returns give Colonel Oates 254 88-100 votes in the state convention and Captain Johnston 215 12-100.

The democratic central committee of North Carolina met at Raleigh, Wednesday. It called a meeting of the state executive committee for 8 o'clock p. m., June 12th. It is the sentiment of the central committee that it is best to hold the state convention not earlier than the last of July nor later than August 1st.

A Washington dispatch says: Counsel for Coxey, Browne and Jones have filed in Judge Bradley's court an application for a writ of certiorari to stay the carrying into effect of the verdict in Police Judge Miller's court. Fire started early Wednesday morning in one of the wooden buildings in the enclosure known as Jones' woods, at Avenue A and Sixty-eighth street, New York. Fifty horses were burned to death and a number of persons injured.

The general assembly of the southern Presbyterian church assembled in Nashville Thursday morning. Among the prominent questions that will come before the assembly will be the question of the preaching of theological students who have not yet been licensed, and the case of Miss Sadie Means, a telephone operator in Columbia, S. C., who was disciplined by her church for continuing at her position in the telephone office on the Sabbath.

THE MINERS WEAKENING

And the Operators Will Make Their Own Terms.

The ending of the third week of the miners' strike in East Tennessee shows the miners to be weakening, and the operators confident of victory. When the strike began, the miners in the Jelico and Coal Creek districts, some six thousand in number, went reluctantly out. At the time, they had contracts with employers, but these were overlooked. The operators of these districts will decline to attend the meeting to be held at Cleveland, Ohio, but, on the contrary, when the meeting is over, the East Tennessee coal operators will hold a meeting and reduce the wages of miners ten per cent on the ton. They will also refuse to accept any proposition whatever from the miners, as they say there was no grievance or excuse for their going out at first.

Petitions asking for the pardon of ex-State Treasurer Hemingway, aggregating thirteen thousand names, have been filed with Governor Stone by Judge S. S. Calhoun, who briefly reviewed the strange phases of the case. A number of petions will be presented later on, when it is expected the total number of signers will reach twenty thousand. Hemingway was sentenced for five years and has one year yet to serve. His friends are hopeful of obtaining pardon for him.

WASHINGTON NOTES

WHAT IS GOING ON AT UNCLE SAM'S HEADQUARTERS.

Comment Concerning Transactions in the Various Departments.

Diplomatic relations between Brazil and Portugal have been suspended because of the conduct of officers of the Portugese war ships in connection with DaGama's surrender.

The senate committee on territories have ordered favorably reported (with amendments) the bill already passed by the house providing for the admission of Utah into the union as a state.

The senate Wednesday confirmed the nominations of the following postmasters: Virginia—James M. Neal, Danville. North Carolina—William P. Huffman, Hickory. South Carolina—William F. Metts, Greenville. Alabama—William B. Gear, Bessemer.

The state department has received a cablegram from Minister Baker announcing that the Nicaraguan government had given satisfactory assurance of prompt compliance with the peremptory demands of the United States in relation to the punishment of the murderer of Wilson, the American killed at Rama in March.

Senator Hunton, of Virginia, and Senator Kyle, of South Dakota, (the latter through his clerk) admits the truth of the published statement that they had been approached and offered money for their votes against the tariff bill, although both gentlemen declined to name the man who made the offer. The story was published in full in a New York paper Wednesday morning, and, with the exception of the matter of detail, is substantially correct.

President Cleveland left Washington Saturday night, accompanied by Secretaries Gresham and Carlisle, for another of the fishing trips, which are his principal recreation. It is understood that the party took one of the light-house tenders and slipped down the river, and that they will go to the North Carolina coast before returning. The trip will last for a week. Great secrecy was maintained about it by the white house officials, and they refused to admit that the president had gone away even.

Secretary Lamont is making an examination into the record of clerks in the war department with a view to making a wholesale cut in his force, and it is stated on good authority that the dismissals before the 1st of July, the beginning of the next fiscal year, will number fully 300. The record and pension office will furnish the greater number of these, and several chiefs of divisions will be among the unfortunates. Other heads of departments are preparing for many clerical changes. A number of reductions in grade among old clerks has already been made in the state department.

A disturbance was created in the house Monday by the sudden interruption of the even tenor of the proceedings by a negro in the center gallery arising in his place and shouting: "Mr. Speaker of the house of representatives!" Instantly the house was in confusion, and all eyes were turned upon the orator in the gallery. The speaker, who was the first to regain his composure, directed the doorkeeper to remove the offender. The man was of powerful physique, however, and the doorkeeper was unable to oust him for some time, the negro endeavoring to deliver his alleged divinely inspired message to the effect that the Lord had commanded him to come to the speaker of the house and order him to pass the Coxey bills.

An Alleged Tariff Bill "Expose."

The New York Press prints a full page article under a Washington date, which it claims is "a full history of the compromise tariff bill introduced in the senate last Monday, and a full and true account of the democratic surrender to the great trusts." The article states that the sugar trust not only paid $500,000 for the legislation it wants, but also guaranteed the United States senators who speculate, a rise of 30,930 points in Wall street on sugar trust stock. Alleged midnight conferences were held between senators and sugar trust officers within a stone's throw of the white house. It is also alleged that the Standard oil, lead and whiskey trusts were cared for in the same way.

BRECKINRIDGE BOYCOTTED.

Lexington Women Protest Strongly Against His Renomination.

The women of Lexington, Ky., intend to demonstrate their protest against the renomination of Colonel Breckinridge by arranging for a big reception in honor of William C. Owens, the principal opponent of the colonel, when he addresses the electors. Eight boxes in the opera house will be filled with representative women of the bluegrass region who seldom take any part in politics. A large delegation of the same sex will occupy the main part of the house. Already the feminine opponents of Colonel Breckinridge are boycotting the merchants who support his candidacy and others are dismissing their family physicians for the same reason.

Won by Dr. Rice.

A New York dispatch says: The Brooklyn handicap, the first big turf event of the season, was won by Dr. Rice in the fast time of 2:07¼. Over 40,000 persons saw the race. It was an ideal day for the race and the track was in perfect condition.

TALMAGE'S JUBILEE.

Commemorating the Twenty-Fifth Year of His Pastorate.

The Brooklyn tabernacle was again crowed to its utmost capacity Friday at the continuance of the celebration of the Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage's silver jubilee in honor of the completion of the twenty-fifth year of his pastorate. The proceedings on this occasion were of a national and international character, and was presided over by General Benjamin F. Tracey, ex-secretary of the navy. General Tracey in his introductory address spoke of the great work that had been accomplished by Dr. Talmage.

Ex-Senator William M. Evarts was the next speaker. His remarks were brief. At the conclusion of the ex-senator's address a number of letters and telegrams were read. A cablegram from Herbert Gladstone, son of the ex-premier, stated that the latter was somewhat out of health, but sent his best wishes to Dr. Talmage. Other cablegrams of congratulation were read from the Archdeacon of London, Canon Wilberforce, Thain Dundson and Professor Simpson of Edinburgh. A letter from the Earl of Aberdeen, Governor General of Canada, offered congratulations.

Other messages were received from United States Senator John Sherman, Wm. Walter Phelps, Gov. O'Ferrall, of Virginia; Governor Osborne, of Wyoming; United States Senator Carey; Governor Reil, of Michigan; United States Senator James Markham, of California; Governor Northen, of Georgia; Governor Lewelly n, of Kansas; United States Senator Vilas, Governor McKinley, of Ohio; General Schofield, Seth Low and John Wanamaker.

At the conclusion of the reading of the telegrams, Congressman Joseph C. Hendrix made a congratulatory address. Among the others who spoke was United States Senator Walsh, of Georgia.

Dr. Talmage made an exceedingly happy and characteristic address, offering a million of thanks for the honors conferred upon him. In conclusion he called for three cheers for the distinguished men who lent their presence to the occasion, and they were given with a will.

ASKING FOR $500,000.

Atlanta's Exposition Committee in Washington.

The Cotton States and International exposition committee had a two hours' hearing Tuesday before the house committee on appropriations. It was a very well conducted and very interesting affair. The members were introduced to the members of the committee by Representative Livingston.

From the very outset all hands got together and on the most amicable terms. Seldom has there been a hearing before a committee of congress so void of stiffness or so pregnant with mutual good feeling.

The committee will take up the matter at an early date. There is every prospect that it will recommend an appropriation, though it may not be as large as the sum asked, $500,000.

Representative Livingston, who is a member of the committee on appropriations, speaking of the matter, said: "The visiting committee made a very, very favorable impression on the members of the appropriation committee. I never knew a matter of the kind better handled or better calculated to attain its object. I think that the committee will recommend an appropriation. I do not think that it will be less than $500,000, and it may be $750,000.

BOGUS STAMPS.

Fully $500,000 Worth of Them in Circulation in Mexican Cities.

A special to the New Orleans Times-Democrat, from the City of Mexico, says: "There is much excitement in government circles over the discovery that there are in circulation fully $500,000 worth of counterfeit government stamps of the 50-cent denomination. The larger cities of Mexico have been flooded with the stamps and the authorities have as yet been unsuccessful in discovering the source of the gigantic fraud which has been so successfully worked.

Breckinridge's Bond.

Representative W. C. P. Breckinridge Wednesday afternoon gave a bond of $100 to the clerk of the supreme court of the District of Columbia, his brother, Brigadier General Joseph C. Breckinridge, inspector general of the United States army, giving his surety, for the purpose of securing an appeal in the case of Pollard vs. Breckinridge in the district court of appeals.

TALMAGE'S NEMESIS

THE BROOKLYN TABERNACLE AGAIN IN ASHES.

For the Third Time the Magnificent Structure is Burned to the Ground.

A New York special says: Fire seems to be the Nemesis of T. DeWitt Talmage and the members of his congregation. Their beautiful new tabernacle at the corner of Clinton and Greene avenues, Brooklyn, was destroyed by fire Sunday afternoon. Flames broke out in the church edifice just after those who had attended the morning service had left the building. Not only was the church destroyed, but the near-by hotel and a number of buildings were also greatly damaged. Had the fire broken out one hour earlier, while the building was filled with worshippers, it is almost certain that a dreadful panic and loss of life would have resulted.

This is the third time that the Talmage tabernacle was destroyed by fire. By a singular coincidence each fire occurred on a Sunday.

Everything in the tabernacle was destroyed with the building. Perhaps the loss which will grieve Dr. Talmage most is that of the memorable stones which he brought from the east, and which were set in the wall at the right of the organ, encased in stero-relief work. They were four in number. The top block was from Mount Calvary, and bore the word "Sacrifice." The stone below from Mount Sinai, bearing on it "The Law." The bottom stone is from Mars Hill and bears the inscription "Gospel." The front stone was unmarked.

A more unique collection of stones was never gathered in one place.

STARTED IN THE ORGAN.

The fire was discovered shortly after 12 o'clock, just after the congregation had been dismissed from the morning service. Dr. Talmage was in the church shaking hands with a number of people when flames burst from the organ.

Ex-Supervisor Boed, who was in the Summerfield Methodist Episcopal church, directly opposite from the tabernacle, had also seen the smoke coming from the tabernacle window and had sent in an alarm of fire. By the time the firemen arrived, the flames were bursting from all the church windows. Two extra alarms, and finally a special call were sent in, bringing all of the engines in Brooklyn and Williamsburg to the fire. The flames spread with lightning-like rapidity and the sparks flew in all directions. The greatest excitement prevailed.

Great jets of flames shot across the open space between the tabernacle and the Hotel Regent, which is next to the church, on Clinton avenue, and in a short space of time the hotel was burning fiercely.

The interior of the church was a seething roaring mass of flames inside of thirty minutes after the fire was discovered, and by 1 o'clock the roof and the handsome steeple had fallen in.

The tabernacle and the Hotel Regent were completely gutted. Nothing remains but the walls. At 5 o'clock portions of the rear wall of the tabernacle fell. The total loss is estimated at a little over a million dollars. The loss on the Hotel Regent, including the buildings, paintings and the guests' household goods, will amount to about $800,000. The loss on the tabernacle is about $400,000, and the adjoining buildings are reported to be damaged to the extent of $50,000. It is said that the hotel was insured for $500,000. Four firemen were overcome by heat during the progress of the flames and had to be removed from the scene. They all recovered.

It is supposed that the fire was caused by a spark from one of the electric light wires behind the organ.

The tabernacle was insured for $130,000.

The board of trustees of the tabernacle held a meeting in the house of Dr. Talmage, at which it was decided to rebuild the tabernacle. The trustees say that Dr. Talmage is to start on his trip around the world as first intended. He will go to Philadelphia first, then to Atlanta and through the southern states to Honolulu, New Zealand and Australia.

Y. M. C. A. JUBILEE.

Delegates from All the World Will Attend the Convention.

Great preparations are making for the Young Men's Christian Association jubilee, which is to be celebrated at London in about three weeks. Among the two thousand delegates who will attend the convention will be one hundred from the United States and Canada, three hundred and twenty from Germany, one hundred and forty from Norway and Sweeden, one hundred from France, nineteen from Austria, and many others from India, China, Japan and Turkey. Prince Oscar, of Sweden, will come with the Norwegians and Count Bernsteroff with the Germans. The celebration will be observed throughout the United Kingdom, and on June 3d twelve hundred jubilee sermons will be preached in England, Scotland and Wales.

TO COUNTY OFFICIALS.

For the next eight months the View offers to publish all the advertising coming from the office of the Sheriff, Tax Collector, Tax Assessor, Treasurer, Probate Judge, Circuit Clerk and County Commissioners at the uniform rate of sixty per cent less than the legal rates.

The View thus publicly makes its bid so that if the officers are disposed to do any thing in the line of saving the people's money the View will help them to that end.

Hurrah for OATES!

Every voter must register within the next few days or he can't vote in the August election. May 26th closes the time in which you can register.

Candidates for the Legislature and for County Superintendent of Education should announce themselves. The VIEW stands ready to welcome a card from every man desiring office. Our rates are $5 per such notices. We will do all in our power to elect good men to these positions.

A Texas paper says that J. F. Wade, of Kansas, left the populist party the other day giving the following as his reasons for so doing.

"Because the populist party is run by lawyers without clients, by doctors without patients, by preachers without pulpits, by women without husbands, by farmers without farms, by financiers without finance, by educators without education, by statesmen out of a job."

At the State Convention in Montgomery Tuesday, Col. Wm. C. Oates was made the Democratic nominee by a tremendous majority. His name was loud and enthusiastically applauded. His speech was able and showed the gratitude of a great man at the honor that has been conferred upon him. Harmony reigned supremely throughout the Convention, and everything work in unison.

Mr. Mastin is a choice of a large majority of the Populists of this county for the Legislature. They do not expect him to do much good in the Legislature, if he should be elected, yet they feel that he can't be pursuaded, knowingly, to go back on them. The Democratic party can defeat Mr. Mastin if they act in harmony and run an intelligent, courageous and clean man. To do this will require the utmost harmony in our ranks. And not only harmony, but a wisely directed zeal will be required.

The VIEW has offered to help the county officials save money by giving low rates on all county advertising. To help the officials in their determination the Banner cries out that such a price will not pay for the composition. If the VIEW can afford to do printing for less than the Banner charges, then by all that is fair and reasonable, the officials should give the work to the VIEW. These county officers have no right to use the people's money for campaign purposes. If they refuse our bid and give the printing to the Banner at higher rates they are untrue to their trust as public servants.

The County Convention was held last week after the VIEW was ready for the press so that only an imperfect report was published. The fact that Mr. J. Bice was elected Chairman was omitted from the report. The friends of Johnston and Oates fought warmly for their respective candidates, but when the convention closed everybody seemed satisfied, and the determination to work together in harmony was expressed by all. Our county machinery was placed in safe hands, with that patriotic and upright citizen, Mr. K. Wells as chairman of the Executive Committee. This committee is empowered to call a meeting of their body at any time to map out work for the party. No nominations were made. This will be attended to in due time. Meanwhile every Democrat is at work to give success to whoever may run for the Legislature and Superintendent of Education.

THE HUNDLEY AMENDMENT.

We appeal to you to work from now until the polls close on the first Monday in August, 1894, for the adoption of the School Amendment to the State Constitution.

Our State constitution now deprives the legislature of the power to permit any city, town or township, school district or community to levy a special tax for the education of its children. It does permit counties to levy special taxes for the construction of bridges and public buildings, and a part of the ordinary 50-cent tax permitted to counties may be set aside to schools just as the state sets aside a portion of its revenues to schools. But there is absolutely no way by which a community of people, who desire to raise by taxation a special fund for the education of their own children, can do so. Many cities, towns and townships desire to do that. Many do not. All that the friends of the amendment ask, is such a change in the constitution as will enable communities and neighborhoods to support schools by special local taxation or not, just as they may choose.

That is what the school amendment to be voted on at the next State election proposes—that and nothing more. It is in straight line with the great fundamental American theory of local self-government. Many things can be safely left to the neighborhood to decide for itself. The question as to how far each one is willing to go in the cause of education is one of these. If Birmingham, Mt. Pinson, Trussville, Montgomery and Ozark, for instance, wish to support their schools by special taxation, will it harm other cities and neighborhoods which do not wish it, to give us the right, of which the State Constitution now deprives us?

The clause of the constitution restricting local taxation now reads:

Section 2, of Article XI, of the Constitution:

"No power to levy taxes shall be delegated to individuals or private corporations—"

As proposed to be amended it will read:

"No power to levy taxes shall be delegated to individuals or private corporations; Provided that the General Assembly may confer upon the trustees of the school districts in this State the power to levy within their districts a special tax of not more than one fourth of her per centum, to be applied exclusively to maintaining the public schools in this district in which said tax is levied, Provided that the money collected from persons of the white race may by law be applied exclussively to the education of the children of the white race; and the money collected from persons of the colored race, may by law be applied exclusively to the education of the children of the colored race."

Under the new election law the substance of this amendment will be printed on the official ballot, accompanied by the words "Yes" or and "No." By each word is left a blank square. If the voter makes a cross mark by Yes he votes for the amendment, and vice versa. If he makes no mark at all it counts the same as a vote against it, for to be adopted the amendment must receive an affirmative majority of all the votes cast for members of the legislature.

It will thus be seen by the friends of education how important it is to reach every voter and arouse his interests in the Amendment. Its adoption is solely a question of votes.

The amendment carefully guards this new taxing power and the most conservative mind must be convinced by its terms that the power cannot be abused. It does not confer on the voters of any locality, a majority of whom may have no property, the power to get together at will and levy a burden on other people's possessions. But a law must be first passed by the legislature allowing the school trustees of the neighborhood to levy a tax not exceeding 25 cents on the $100. The conservatism of our legislature in levying is ample assurance that no community will be compelled to levy this tax against the will of its substantial debt-paying and tax-paying citizens.

The adoption of this Amendment will not interfere with the appropriations already made by the State for the Schools. These, just sufficient for three months schools will go on as they now do. But under the ameadment any community can be empowered by the legislature of supplement its share of the State fund by raising a fund of its own.

Our public schools are at a standstill. The State does not increase its appropriations as fast as the population increases. There is no prospect that it will. In every State of the Union where public school education is progressive, the schools are maintained by each community levying its own taxes and determining for itself how much or how little of education it will enjoy. If we go forward we must go on the same principle of community self government.

We appeal to the parents of Alabama to support this Amendment and acquire for themselves the privilege of a better education for their children and a still better for their children's children.

We appeal to the Teachers of the State, who above all men and women, appreciate and nourish the importance of education, to work in season and out of season on behalf of this amendment.

We appeal to the newspapers of the state, always the true and zealous friends of education not to allow the bitter strife of party to obscure this great cause, but to keep it always to the front as an issue non-partisan and above party, on which all men who love their posterity may unite.

We appeal to all voters to study the question in a spirit of candor and patriotism and regard for the generation that is coming on.

Editor Advertiser:

Enclosed please find subscription for your paper. While like a great many others, I have been misled by Kolb and his henchmen; now I must confess that I was wrong. I have been taught that an honest confession is good for the soul. If I know myself I am a Democrat, and since Ben DeLemos, Whitehead, Philander Morgan, Louis Parsons and Senator Hoar have joined in with Kolb and his schemes to turn old Alabama over to the Republicans, I cannot follow Kolb and his henchmen any further. I say without fear of contradiction that Kolb cannot deliver the farmer's votes to New England; it matters not how much of their money he may use. Kolb's treachery has not only turned me against him, but a number of my neighbors. Kolb pulled the wool over my eyes about two years ago, but he cannot do it any more, for a burnt child is afraid of the fire. Kolb has been the cause of shame and stain on the people's political record of quite a number of good citizens from Elmore county and in fact all over the state. I am proud to know that while he has fooled a great number of good people he can't do it any more now. Laying all prejudice aside I do not see how any good citizen could follow Kolb any further for several reasons. He first sold us to Chris McGhee. Next he has sold us to New England and Hoar. Hoar, the South hater, the originator of the force bill, and on top of that to think and to know that he has the gall to go around over the State claiming to be a Democrat. It is enough to turn the most prejudice man in the State. While I followed Kolb I was honest in my convictions, but I now know that Kolb is no Democrat, therefore I cannot follow him. I know a great many who two years ago were worshippers of him, who will not now support him. S. S. Sanford.

The Party Needs You.

If you are a Democrat the party will accept some service of you in the coming campaign. Whether you are in a position to do much or little as a true Democrat desiring the success of your party and its principles, you will be expected to do your part. The coming canvass will be no child's play affair. On the other hand, it will be a hard fought battle for political supremacy in the State, and if either side think they are going to have a walk over in this fight they are badly mistakened. It will require hard and systematic work to whip the fight. The Democratic party is in position to do the necessary work and nothing but the most criminal carelessnes will cause it to lose. But every Democratic will be be expected to do his duty and help win the victory.

ELECTROPOISE CURES CANCER

Keysville, Fla. April 17th, 1894.

Messrs. Dubuise and webb, Louisville, Ky.—Dear Sirs: "About eleven months ago I bought from you an Electropoise for the purpose of treating cancer. I had one of about ten years' standing, and it had reached a stage where it was making rapid progress, being about the size of a silver dollar. I knew that I had to do something or my time was about up, and you being the only party that I corresponded with that would give me any assurance of a cure, got my patronage. I am now happy to inform you that the cancer is no more, the Electropoise arrested the progress of the cancer perceptibly in about thirty-six to forty-eight hours and gradually and slowly grew less until now there is a place about the size of a pin head that is not quite healed but gradually closing up. You can use this or any part of it as a testimonial if you wish. Very truly yours M. M. Lillibridge."

D. A. Bryant, Hackneyville:—"I was badly crippled with rheumatism, also had a bad kidney trouble, I was helpless and could do no work. The Electropoise cured me and enabled me to work regularly."

Rev. W. C. Hearn, Talledega.—"For producing calm refreshing sleep and curing sciatic rheumatism the Electropoise can not be equaled."

Joseph Williams, Stevenson—"I can walk all over town and even run, whereas a few weeks ago I was a helpless cripple, the electropise did it."

Mrs. W. P. Nelson, Sunshine—"My recovery was wonderful. I have also tried the electropoise on several of my neighbors, for various ailments, nausea, kidney trouble of the worst form, all with the most gratifying results."

The friends and acquaintances of Mr. Ned Duke are glad to see him on a visit to our town.

The residence occupied by Mrs. Bruce has recently been painted and porch added to the front.

A musicle was given at Dr. W. E. Stewart's last Friday night, where every one spent a pleasant evening.

Miss G. C. Hanks has been on a visit here the past week, but left Wednesday for Jemison to visit her sister, Mrs. L. C. Day.

The scholars of the University School are practicing for the entertainment at the close of the school. It closes on the 6th of June.

The many friends of Mr. J. E. Gullette were sorry to see him leave for Montgomery last week, where he has accepted a position with the Alabama Printing Co.

The committee on Sunday School picnic of the Methodist and Baptist Churches have united and a union picnic will be had at Mim's mill, on Saturday, June 2nd.

The grand jury states that Chilton county is in no condition to build a new court house, but recommends that the old one be painted, to which we say Amen.

In the failure of Rev. Mr. Hogan to fill Rev. J. G. Lowrey's appointment at this place Sunday, Rev. Mr. Hudson who is traveling in the interest of the Texas Baptist Standard, occupied the pulpit, preaching morning and evening.

We are glad to note that crime is on a decrease in Chilton, the number of true bills returned by our last grand jury were 14, and the number of prisoners in jail was something less than at last court. Good citizens, we feel sure, will do all in their power to uphold law and order and bring about such results.

The Clanton Minstrel Co. gave their entertainment in Mullin's Hall Tuesday night, and had a large audience. Everyone enjoyed the comic performances. The Ethiopian elocutionist was well represented in the sonorous voice of the singer. A song sung will go for the benefit of the cemetery. The management deserve credit.

Two of Clanton's fairest young ladies and two highly estimable young gentlemen spent a day fishing on Duke's pond this week. It has not been ascertained yet whether the fishing was done on land or water, or confined to love or catching suckers. But from beaming countenances on their return, the conclusion was drawn that the fish-ing, whether made, had been enjoyed.

Two of Mr. Jim Collin's of Strus' employees, implicated last week, and whose presence is that Jack McLendon Smith and Gordon Jordan [illegible], are lodged in jail, with strong evidence of guilt. They were captured [illegible] by detective Barnes and [illegible] taken into custody each negro had on three shirts and near half-dozen of cigarettes along. The shirts were identified by Mr. Collins.

Fair Warning!

All persons are hereby warned not to trespass in any manner whatsoever on the property known as the Duke fish pond, near Ehrman's mill in Chilton County, Ala. N. A. Kicker,
March 27, 1894. Agent.

The members of the Baptist Church of course thank the editor of the Banner for whatever he did to aid in making the entertainment given in behalf of that church a success. So far as the editor of the VIEW is concerned, he gave instructions to strike off a number of hand bills and for this he made no charge, neither did he know any money had been collected for the same, and so soon as such fact was discovered the money was refunded.

We are exceedingly gratified to see that enterprise and public spirit is still not an unknown quantity to some of our citizens, and that regardless of the stringency of the times improvements have been made. There are citizens in this town (as in others) who have no more public-spirit or desire for the up-building of Clanton than a buck-eared-mule, and who can kick as hard at times of such mentioning as the four footed animal could with two heels at once. But we have got to ignore all such spirit and overide all hindrances that are thrown in our way. It takes co-operation, vim and push to build a town.

Shelton's Sentence.

The trial of Alex Shelton last Tuesday for the murder of Mr. James Harris; of Plantersville, on last April one year ago, created considerable interest among the people of the county. The defenant was represented by Messrs Nolen and Smith and for the State by Solicitor Brewer and W. A. Collier, Esq.

At 8 o'clock court was announced in session and soon afterwards Shelton made his appearance in custody of the Sheriff. The court room was so packed that way had to be cleared for the entrance to the bar and commands given to clear the passage, and keep off the bar railings. The demeanor of the prisoner was calm and collected, and showed no sign of nervousness, but a look of dogged indifference was displayed on his countenance, and was maintained throughout his entire trial. He is a negro of wonduful physique, weighs about 180 and is an orange colored mulatto. The drawing of the jury consumed something over 1½ hours time. Only two witnesses were examined in the morning, of these was Mr. Letcher who deputized Mr. Harris to arrest Shelton and was with him up to a few minutes prior to his death. He heard the fatal shot, the call for assistance, and only reached the spot to behold Mr. Harris dead and Shelton fleeing in the distance. Here court adjourned for dinner and the prisoner was remanded to jail.

In the afternoon session the interest had not abated and the crowd was as large as ever. Several other witnesses were examined for the State, all evidence corroborating. Mr. Robert Martin told of a conversation had in Montgomery jail with Shelton in which he stated that he backed towards his gun when order to throw up his hands by Mr. Harris, and that Mr. Harris shot him in the attempt to pick it up, and he returned the fire Shelton does not deny killing Mr. Harris, but claims it was done in self-defense. When placed on the stand he contradicted Mr. Martin, though when stripped for the examination of bullet wounds Mr. Martin's evidence and Shelton's first statement was corroborated by the bullet mark itself, which entered his right chest at the shoulder blade and came out five inches below on his back, and in stooping posture makes a direct line through his body from entrance to exit, though in standing it makes the bullet take a course which would have been almost impossible. The marks given him by the Florida detective were also seen. The State here closed, and nole speeches, were made by Messrs. Brewer and Collier for justice and vindication of the life of a law abiding citizen, and by Messrs. Nolen & Smith in behalf of the defendant. Judge Denson gave the jury a clear charge, fully explaining the law in the case. The jurymen then retired and in an hour and ten minutes returned a death sentence. Shelton evinced no emotion at the return of the verdict, steadily held out his hands to be hand cuffed and proceeded with the Sheriff to his cell.

This it the first death sentence in the history of Chilton, and it is hoped that it will act as a warning to others. The day of execution has not been appointed.

A Summer's Dream.

She stood on the cool piazza
In the light of the setting sun,
And I thought her the fairest picture
That I had ever gazed upon.

The bold wind played with the curls
Of her golden flowing hair,
And daringly kissed the dimples
Of her cheek so sweet and fair.

Eyes as blue as skies in June,
Teeth like little pearls:
Oh! I lost my heart that summer eve
To this sweetest of girls.

A smile played round her ruby lips
There was a light in her eyes divine
And I vowed this fair creature
Should some day be mine.

As I stood watching and dreaming
A sudden flush mantled her cheek.
I knew by this sign of emotion,
That the maiden was going to speak.

As she opened her lips I wondered
Would the words correspond; ah! no.
"You're the same darned old mosquito
I tried to smash before."

I sighed as I turned to leave the spot—
All sweets have their bitters,
No rose on earth without a thorn,
And all is not gold that glitters.
—"Sarah Ann."

GRAND JURY'S REPORT.

To the Hon. N. D. Denson, Judge of the Fifth Judicial District.

We, the Grand Jury empannelled by your Honor, at this term of the circuit court, beg to submit the following report:

We have diligently inquired into the violations of law presented and have returned 14 true bills. The books of the county officials are neatly and correctly kept, so far as we have had time to examine. The financial condition of our county is improving, the actual cash on hand is $1,834.82, vouchers $21.80, fine and forfeiture balance $37.48.

As to our public buildings, we are not able to build a new court house now and will not be for some time, we recommend that the present one be painted. The jail is well kept and the prisoners properly cared for; we also suggest that the fence around the jail be kept well white washed.

We are proud to say that crime is on the decrease. We call attention of the justices of the peace to more readily comply with the law, which requires them to report on or by the second day of the term.

The condition of the public roads is reasonably good.

We are pleased to say that the committee who visited the poor house say that the unfortunate ones are well cared for by the proper management of the proprietor, Mr. Quigley. There are five white and one colored inmates.

Having discharged our duties to the best our ability, and thanking you for the clear charge given us, and our able solicitor, Mr. Brewer, for his able co-operation, and to Mr. B. H. Wells, Bailiff, for his prompt attention, we respectfully ask to be discharged.

P. C. Dennis,
Foreman.

A Girl's Life.

When a girl of sweet 16 appears on the street she has a cute, pert way of walking and tossing her head as though she owned the earth and was going to the middle of the next block to get it. After she is 18 the world she owns is about as far away as the World's Fair was to the most of us, and at 20 she gives up all hope of getting it at all. By the time she is 25, poor thing! she has a faint, vague suspicion that there is a great deal of insincerity in the world, and the thing for her to do is to get a position and do something useful. After awhile she gets married to a man who is not at all the sort of a man she dreamed of. Then she concludes she would be better off in heaven.—Exchange.

Cooking High-scented Foods.

Some housewives whose means are small find it impossible to have a separate dish to cook high-scented foods, such as cabbage, onions, and the like in, and often go without dishes that are dearly liked by the family just because it seems impossible to get the odors out of the metal. They should try burning. Wash the vessel in strong soda water, dry it, then lift the lid of the stove and turn the vessel over the blazing fire for five or ten minutes. It will burn out as clean and sweet as can be. Of course, this applies only to iron utensils. For tin a vigorous scouring will generally answer.

THE fear of robbery is ever present with the officials of the Bank of France, and every day when the money is put into the vaults in the cellar masons are waiting and at once wall up the doors with hydraulic mortar. The cellar is then flooded with water.

CONGRESSIONAL.

DAILY PROCEEDINGS OF BOTH HOUSE AND SENATE.

The Discussion of Important Measures Briefly Epitomized.

The house refused, 110 to 59, to take up the private calendar Friday for consideration, which was the regular order, and voted to proceed with the naval appropriation bill. Before doing this (12:30) some routine and private business was transacted.

The joint resolution agreed to Friday by the committee on labor providing for an investigation into the industrial condition of the country, was reported in the house Saturday and placed on the union calendar. Consideration of the naval appropriation bill was then proceeded with.

In the house Monday, resolutions of the Memphis Cotton Exchange favoring the Cotton States and International Exposition, at Atlanta, Ga., in September, 1895, were presented by Mr. Harris and referred to the committee on commerce. At noon the tariff bill was taken up.

Several private bills were passed at Tuesday's session and the house we t into committee of the whole on the naval appropriation bill.

In the house, Wednesday, unanimous consent was refused for the consideration of McGann's resolution for the investigation by a joint committee of congress of the causes of the present industrial depression, and after a call of the committees for reports, the house in committee of the whole, continued the consideration of the agricultural appropriation bill.

THE SENATE.

In the senate, Friday, the discussion on the tariff bill was confined to the amendments on the boracic acid item. Mr. Gallinger expressed the hope that under the guidance and protection of protectionist democrats like Mr. White, of California, who wanted a higher duty on boracic acid, the New England industries would be saved from crucifixion and destruction.

The time of the senate Saturday was mostly occupied in the discussion on pending amendments to make the duty on tannic acid 60 cents a pound.

Monday being district day in the senate measures relating to the district of Columbia were taken up.

During the discussion of the tariff bill in the senate, Tuesday, Mr. Vest said that it was very evident that it was the intention of the republican side of the chamber to kill the bill by delay. (Cries of "Oh, no!" from the republican senators.) "They say 'oh no,'" Mr. Vest went on, "but their acts belie their words. They spend day after day in discussing insectivorous matters. They want to kill the bill by procrastination. We on this side have got but one thing to do, and we intend to do it without waiting or hesitating. We intend to pass the bill if it takes us until snow flies next winter, and we will leave to the senators on the other side the task of defeating by filibustering, but we are not going into the field of conjecture to help them." Mr. Aldrich expressed surprise at Mr. Vest's speech and said: "There is no disposition, there has not been and there will not be, on this side of the chamber, to do anything with this bill except to discuss it fairly. There will be no filibustering, and no attempt at filibustering on the part of the opponents to the measure."

In the senate, Wednesday, Mr. Lodge offered a resolution reciting a statement in the New York Sun that bribes had been offered to certain senators to induce them to vote against the pending tariff bill, and signed articles in a Philadelphia paper stating that the sugar schedule had been made up as it now stands in consideration of a large sum of money paid for campaign purposes of the democratic party, and providing for the appointment of a committee of five senators to investigate those charges. The vice president asked Mr. Lodge what action he desired. Mr. Lodge replied that he asked for the present consideration of the resolution. Mr. Cockrill—"Let it be printed and lie on the table." And under the rule the resolution went over until Thursday. The tariff bill was taken up at noon, the pending question being item number 27, of the chemical schedule, "flaxseed or linseed and poppy seed oil, raw, boiled or oxidized, 15 cents per gallon."

STORM IN MINNESOTA.

Seven People Lose Their Lives and Property Greatly Damaged.

A special from St. Paul, Minn., says: Half a million dollars will scarcely cover the damage by the great storm of Tuesday in Minnesota and Wisconsin. The downpour of rain was the greatest ever known in this section of the northwest and in many places was as destructive as a waterspout. The damage is greatest along the St. Croix, Eugalle and Chippewa rivers, where the rise in the waters was so rapid that bridges could not resist it and dozens of them were washed away. In several places also dams were washed out and the swift flowing flood did large damage to business property. The death list so far includes seven, one being killed by lightning near Anika, Minn., and another near New Richmond, Wis. A woman and two children were drowned in the Eugalle river near Spring Valley, Wis., and two men were drowned near Mindon, Minn. Railway traffic was for a time in a state of paralysis because of the bridges and washouts on the tracks.

GINGHAM MILLS CLOSE.

The Treasurer Says Because of Imbecile Legislation at Washington.

The Barnaby gingham mills at Fall River, Mass., closed down Saturday. The following notice to the employees was posted in the mills: "Owing to the imbecile position taken by the present administration, and the idiotic legislation now going on in congress, the result of which you are perfectly familiar with, these works will shut down on May 12," The mills have 16,000 spindles, a capital of $400,000, operate 500 looms, employ 400 hands and have weekly pay roll of $8,000.

Coxey for Congress.

The populists of the eighteenth Ohio congressional district have nominated Jacob S. Coxey for congress.

TRADE TOPICS.

Dun's & Co.'s Report of Business for the Past Week.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade, among other things, says: "The strikes begin to have a serious, though, it is assumed, only a temporary effect. The number of works depending upon supplies of bituminous coal or coke for fuel is large, and quite a considerable portion of them has already been compelled to stop operations. No doubt the proportion is larger in the iron and steel manufactures than any other business, but nearly a third in capacity of the iron furnaces at work a month ago appear to have closed. Some railroads at the west are embarassed, and textile works of some importance must soon close unless the strike ceases.

"The movement of so-called armies of unemployed on Washington has caused little excitement, and is less important or significant than the outward movement of specie, which shows a shrinking of foreign demand for products and the further withdrawal of foreign capital.

"But neither strikes nor foreign distrust can long retard the progress of this country. The capacity of iron furnaces in blast May 1st was 110,210 tons, a decrease of 16,512 tons during April, but The Iron Age has telegraphic reports of stoppages by other furnaces having a capacity of 25,092 tons, including some expected to stop this week, which would mean a decrease of about a third of production since April 1st.

The textile manufacturers are not keeping up in prospect, for while orders do not increase, uncertainties in regard to the labor grow more serious. The working force shows much unwillingness to accept for another season the wages which were temporarily adopted in order to have the works reopened after last summer's suspension. The apathy of buyers in cottons is reflected in the further declines of print cloths, although some qualities of goods have advanced slightly.

The decline of the treasury gold reserve below $94,000,000 suggests the possibility that continued exports of the precious metal may cause not a little trouble before the season is over. But at present the banks are only gratified, as the accumulation of money from the interior has not ceased, while the demands for commercial loans does not yet enlarge.

"One large failure about doubled the aggregate of liabilities for firms failing in the week ending May 3d, which would otherwise have been quite small, but were $2,922,794. The number and the general average of liabilities are still encouragingly shrinking. For four weeks of April the liabilities reported were $8,826,862, of which $3,687,220 were of manufacturing, and $4,677,699 of trading concerns.

"For the past week the failures have been 206 in the United States, against 257 last year and 42 in Canada, against 23 last year, with none of especial importance."

BAPTISTS MEET.

Proceedings of the Annual Convention in Dallas, Texas.

The Southern Baptist convention met at Dallas, Texas, in the tabernacle which is provided with 5,000 seats. All the space was filled. Hon. Jonathan Harralson, former president, called the convention to order. After perfecting the roll of delegates, Judge Harralson was selected as permanent president. Drs. F. M. Ellis, of Maryland; S. H. Ford, of Missouri; J. William Jones, of Virginia; J. S. Cotton, of Kentucky; J. B. Cranfill, of Texas, and Governor Northen, of Georgia, were each placed in nomination for vice-president. J. F. M. Ellis, J. William Jones, S. H. Ford and W. J. Northen were elected. Dr. Lansing Burrows and O. F. Gregory were elected secretaries. Elaborate papers on foreign and home mission and Sunday school boards were read by Drs. Tichner, Willingham and Bell, corresponding secretaries of the boards.

The majority report of the committee on representation in the convention was submitted by Dr. Folk, of Tennessee. After much discussion the report was laid on the table. The effect of the report, if adopted, would have been to reduce the representation. This is a most important question, as the convention has become so large as to make it burdensome on the communities in which it meets.

SENSATIONAL PREACHING.

The pulpits of Dallas and surrounding towns were filled by Baptists Sunday. The convention had no appointment for preaching at the great tabernacle, but the overflow of the churches filled the place to hear Dr. Justin Darlton, of New York, who preached morning and night, and made his usual attack on Romanism. He is a great preacher, but his views and methods are not approved by southern Baptists. At the same meeting at night Dr. J. B. Cranfill, of Texas, made a very strong speech, in which he paid his respects to Governor Northen, by saying that he would not vote for a Romanist to any office, nor would he vote for any man who would vote for a Romanist or appoint one to office. Dr. Alex. Marchand, a former Roman Catholic priest, who now has charge of the Baptist church in El Paso, delivered an address, saying the Roman Catholic church is a living lie. The convention had nothing to do with this meeting, and has in no way, approved of these utterances.

In the session Monday morning, reports of committees on the reports of the foreign mission boards, were discussed. The application of the East Oregon convention for membership was not accepted. The place of meeting next year was left with the board.

Delivering the Goods.

A Nashville dispatch says: The state funding board and the secretary of state, Morgan, left for New York Tuesday night with $1,000,000 of redemption bonds that have been sold to Blair & Co. at 98 cents, which is the same price paid for the $600,000 of penitentiary bonds. The bonds bear 4½ per cent interest. The proceeds will be utilized in redeeming $500,000 of 6s and $500,000 of 5s and the difference will save the state $10,000 per annum.

NEWS IN GENERAL.

A BRIEF SUMMARY OF IMPORTANT HAPPENINGS

Showing What is Going On In Our Own and Foreign Lands.

The Missouri democratic state convention met at Kansas City Tuesday.

The Brooklyn Tabernacle, Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage's church, was destroyed by fire Sunday afternoon.

Professor Henry Morley, L. L. D., the distinguished author and lecturer, died at Carrsbrooke, Isle of Wight, Monday morning.

A London cable dispatch says: Secretary Asquith positively refused an order of release of Mrs. Maybrick, who is serving a life sentence for murdering her husband, or to even reopen the case for the purpose of introducing new evidence.

The Irish National League of Great Britain held its annual convention at London, Saturday, and the outcome promises to be of great importance, as it was decided to attempt to heal the differences existing in the Irish parliamentary party.

A great Aurora mine at Ironwood, Mich., is on fire. Just how much damage has been done cannot be told as yet. The lives of 500 men are in danger and the whole community is in great excitement. The Aurora mine is one of the best known mines on the Gogebic range.

Leading bankers, merchants and manufacturers of Chicago, to the number of fifty, have formed themselves into a committee to further the interests of international bi-metallism, and have prepared a statement of their aims and objects.

The board of managers of the Union League at Chicago have voted to expel Congressman W. C. P. Breckinridge from the roll of honorary members. The vote was taken without discussion at the meeting, and not a single member of the executive board voted against the motion to expel.

A Boston, Mass., dispatch says: Four students at Harvard college were drowned in the upper harbor, near Thompson's island, Tuesday afternoon. They hired a catboat for a sail and did not return. The boat was found overturned with the bodies of two students in it. The others have not beenfound.

Between two and three thousand workmen in the various departments of the Pullman works at Pullman, Ill., went on a strike Saturday morning. Their action took Pullman and his executive manager by surprise, as it was understood that the men were satisfied with the result of the recent conference.

Keeler & Co., wholesale and retail furniture dealers, and one of the largest firms of the kind in Boston, Mass., have assigned to G. W. Moore, president of the First Ward bank, of Boston; J. C. Bullard, of the Cambridge National bank, and the bookkeepers of the firm. A heavy falling off in business is the cause of the failure.

The Brooklyn Tabernacle, which was burned for the third time Sunday, is to be rebuilt, and Dr. Talmage is to remain in Brooklyn. This decision was reached at a meeting of the trustees, held at the residence of Dr. Talmage, at which the pastor and his assistant, Rev. Chandler A. Oakes, and every member of the board of trustees were present.

A beautiful bronze statue of Christopher Columbus, executed by the Spanish sculptor, Sunol, was unveiled with becoming ceremonies in Central park, New York, Saturday afternoon. The figure represents the ocean pathfinder in an erect position, holding an elevated standard in one hand and with the other extended, as if making a graceful gesture, in course of an address.

A Washington special says: The trio of commonweal leaders, "General" Coxey, Marshal Carl Browne and Christopher Columbus Jones, met with another rebuff in the police court Tuesday. After four hours and a half spent in arguments on the motion for a new trial, Judge Miller overruled the motion and notified the defendants to appear Thursday for sentence.

John Y. McKane, the Gravesend, Long Island, politician, now in Sing Sing under sentence of the Brooklyn courts, has been baffled in his efforts to secure release on a writ of habeas corpus. Justice Harlan, in the supreme court of the United States, announced the unanimous decision of that court affirming the decision of the late Judge LaCombe in refusing to issue a writ against Warden Dunston, of Sing Sing.

The international congress of miners was opened at Berlin, Germany, Monday morning, with an attendance of ninety delegates, the socialist element largely predominating. The program of the congress deals with a variety of questions, including those of wages, the employment of women and children, the personal safety of workers, etc., but the principal question is the establishment of a legal working day of eight hours.

A dispatch from Greensburg, Pa., says: The Galvin commonwealers received very little encouragement here and now the army is on the verge of starvation. Colonel Galvin and his staff called upon the mayor and chief of police and informed them, unless food was given within a few hours, he would turn his men loose to prey upon the town. Forty special policemen are now guarding the town from the starving unfortunates.

WOMEN TAKE A HAND

And Inform the Strikers That They Must Not Interfere.

Operators at Cumberland, Md., state that their companies will go to work in all the mines as soon as they can get ready, and will do so under the protection of the officers of the law. The wives of the miners willing to work are determined they shall work, and assembled in a large body at the mouth of the mines and told the strikers that if they did not allow their husbands to go to work they would enter the mines themselves and dig their coal for them.

"I SHOULD re-mark," says the cattle king at the round-up.

Don't Blame the Cook

If a baking powder is not uniform in strength, so that the same quantity will always do the same work, no one can know how to use it, and uniformly good, light food cannot be produced with it.

All baking powders except Royal, because improperly compounded and made from inferior materials, lose their strength quickly when the can is opened for use. At subsequent bakings there will be noticed a falling off in strength. The food is heavy, and the flour, eggs and butter wasted.

It is always the case that the consumer suffers in pocket, if not in health, by accepting any substitute for the Royal Baking Powder. The Royal is the embodiment of all the excellence that it is possible to attain in an absolutely pure powder. It is always strictly reliable. It is not only more economical because of its greater strength, but will retain its full leavening power, which no other powder will, until used, and make more wholesome food.

Lime Water and Old Age.

It is thought by many modern physicians that the ossification of the system, or the conversion of many tissues into bone or gristle, is one of the greatest enemies of longevity.

Editor Joseph Midill of the Chicago Tribune has taken a new lease of life since he became 71, by drinking water only after it has been distilled. In this way he gets rid of the lime which he claims is the great cause of physical ills as men grow old. Since he has begun the use of distilled water his rheumatism and indigestion have disappeared, his kidneys works normally and his spirits are as cheerful as a schoolboy's. Getting rid of the lime is not the only, and perhaps not the most important, result of using distilled water. It is worthy of note that the larger part of mankind in China and India have for ages used water boiled in making tea. They consider it more healthful, but it is probably the boiling, rather than the nicotin in the tea, which makes the latter drink more conducive to health. The fact that tea-drinking nations are the most populous is evidence of the healthfulness of this beverage as a drink.

Facts About Snow.

A foot of newly fallen snow makes but one inch of water when melted. Snow seldom falls as far south as Pensacola, Fla., but has been known along the border the gulf from that point to Brownsville, Tex. One hundred miles north of Key West is the farthest point south in Florida that it has ever been known to fall, at Punta Rosa, on Jan. 1, 1876. The only time snow was ever known to fall at San Diego, Cal., was during the great storm period of Jan. 15-17, 1882. The average annual fall in Maine is seven feet, New York five feet, and Iowa two and a half feet.

The subject of the above portrait is the Rev. Charles Prosser, a much beloved and most devout minister of the gospel of Carmel, Northumberland Co., Pa. Mr. Prosser's usefulness, was, for a long time, greatly impaired by a distressing, obstinate disease. How his malady was finally conquered we will let him tell in his own language. He says: "I was a great sufferer from dyspepsia, and I had suffered so long that I was a wreck; life was rendered undesirable and it seemed death was near; but I came in contact with Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and his 'Pleasant Pellets.' I took twelve bottles of 'Discovery,' and several bottles of the 'Pellets,' and followed the hygenic advice of Dr. Pierce, and I am happy to say it was indeed a cure, for life is worth living now."

For dyspepsia, or indigestion, "liver complaint," or torpid liver, biliousness, constipation, chronic diarrhea and all derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels, Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery effects perfect cures when all other medicines fail. It has a specific tonic effect upon the lining membranes of the stomach and bowels. As an invigorating, restorative tonic it gives strength to the whole system and builds up solid flesh to the healthy standard, when reduced by "wasting diseases."

Mr. J. F. Hudson, a prominent lawyer of Whitcherville, Sebastian Co., Ark., writes: "Having suffered severely, for a long time, from a torpid liver, indigestion, constipation, [illegible] and general debility, and finding no relief in my efforts to regain my health, I was induced to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and 'Pleasant Pellets.' Under this treatment, I improved very much and in a few months was able to attend to my professional duties."

Yours truly,

J. F. Hudson

To purify, enrich and vitalize the blood, and thereby invigorate the liver and digestive organs, brace up the nerves, and put the system in order generally; also to build up both solid flesh and strength after pneumonia, fevers and other prostrating diseases, "Golden Medical Discovery" is unequal. It does not make fat people corpulent, but builds up solid, wholesome flesh.

Do you feel dull, languid, low-spirited, have fullness or bloating after eating, bad, coated, bitter or bad taste in mouth, irregular appetite, frequent headaches, "blues," "specks" before eyes, nervous prostration or drowsiness after meals?

If you have any considerable number of these symptoms, you are suffering from torpid liver, associated with dyspepsia or indigestion. The more complicated your disease the greater the number of symptoms. No matter what stage it has reached, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will cure it.

Nervousness, sleeplessness, nervous prostration, nervous debility, and kindred disturbances are generally due to impoverished blood. The nervous system suffers for lack of pure, rich blood to nourish and sustain it. Purify, enrich and vitalize the blood by taking "Golden Medical Discovery" and these nervous troubles vanish.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" is better for this purpose than the much advertised nervines and other compounds loudly recommended for nervous prostration, as they "put the nerves to sleep," but not invigorate, brace up and so strengthen the nervous system as does the "Discovery," thus giving permanent benefit and a real cure.

Buy of reliable dealers. With any one something else that pays them better may probably be urged as "just as good," perhaps it is, for them; but it can't be for you.

A SONG.

It was the time when heaven comes down,
And paves the wood with blue;
A firmament of hyacinths
Drank the moist forest dew.
The sighing of a lonely dova
Went murmuring on the breeze,
And everywhere swayed the songs
And splendors of the trees.
The velvet palms of moss caressed
My weary, fevered face;
Sounds of joy from Paradise
Seemed present in the place;
The very silence was a voice, and I sang,
Of love, and life, and dead, of you.
When from the gracious heaven came down
And paved the wood with blue.

—From Norman Gale's "Orchard Songs."

"ONLY MAGGIE."

UST the two words, "only Maggie," were a sort of by-word in the Clements family, where the young lady rejoicing in the baptismal appellation of Margaret was considered somewhat inferior in all respects to the three elder sisters.

Miss Nora Clements was artistic. Miss Georgiana Clements was musical, and her time was spent executing intricacies upon the piano; Miss Cordelia Clements was a beauty.

Maggie, the youngest, was simply a sunshiny, good-tempered, industrious girl, who aimed at no special display of either beauty or talent, but was quite content to be handmaiden for the others.

Howard, the oldest brother and the eldest of the family, was a physician, and the head of the household, the father and mother being dead. There was wealth enough to make a pleasant home when the separate incomes were combined, and Howard would have been unwilling to see his sisters leave him for any but a home and husband of their own.

"We can all live comfortably together," he would say, "but you have not enough to live upon without work, it can leave the house we own among us."

At first the two older girls were quite anxious to figure, one as a great artist, the other as a great musician, but finally they allowed their brother to have his own way.

The young doctor was very proud of his sisters and their various attractions, and when his warm friend and fellow-student, Paul Goddard, appeared to make him a short visit, he led him from the office into the house adjoining it, delighted at the prospect of showing off the girls to a city gentleman.

A tour of inspection in the drawing-room preceded the actual introduction.

There

"This scene upon the Catskill Mountains was painted by my eldest sister, Paul. We spent the summer there for the express purposes of allowing Nora to make sketches."

"Very fine!" murmured Paul, trying his best to admire the mountains.

"And the music is Georgina's. Georgina is Signor Skwaliinni's best pupil."

"A great talent?" Paul murmured again.

"And this," continued Howard, opening the photograph album, "is Cordelia."

He added no more—and, truly, the face was sufficiently beautifully to need no comment.

Paul spoke cordially:

"What a beautiful face! Who is this opposite your sister, Howard?"

"That is Maggie. She is my youngest sister."

"And does she paint or sing?"

"No, no! Maggie has no talent and no beauty. She is a good little thing! But come to your room, Paul! Dinner will be ready at six."

"So Maggie is housekeeper," thought Paul, as he looked around the tasteful apartment assigned to him. "I think Maggie certainly has something of her sister's artistic eye. How exquisitely these flowers are arranged—and how cool and fresh it is here after my hot, dusty ride!"

Seeking the drawing-room again, Paul found the artistic sister contemplating the scene from the back windows with rapt enthusiasm.

"Dr. Goddard," she said, advancing to meet him.

Paul made the necessary speech of gratification, wondering if it was the brown of the Catskill Mountains that was doubled so extensively upon the skirt of Miss Nora's blue dress, and if it was artistic meditations that had made her pin her collar crooked and forget her cuffs altogether. She launched at once into a bewildering sea of technicalities, and called upon Paul to admire effects of cloud and shadow, light and foliage, from the back window, until he felt like a reproved prisioner upon the entrance of another sister, who was introduced as "my sister, Cordelia."

The beauty was superb. Every curl of her glossy brown hair was arranged for effect. Her creamy complexion was heightened by a dress of soft white muslin, with tiny green leaves scattered over it. She bowed with languid grace, but sat as if actually afraid to move for fear of disarranging any fold of her faultless costume. Georgiana appeared as the bell rang, and Georgiana spoke but little. It made her hoarse to be always talking.

Paul was inwardly resolving to cut his visit very short when Howard opened the door of the dining-room and introduced:

"My sister, Maggie."

She was not pretty; she was not artistic nor musical; but she was charming to Paul's eyes in five minutes. Her dress fitted her graceful little figure perfectly; her collars and cuffs were white and smooth; her hair was dressed carefully and becomingly; she was exquisitely neat.

Not fearing for her voice, she chatted gayly and pleasantly; not being anxious about her dress, she moved gracefully and freely, and having no specialty of talent, she could talk sensibly about the various topics her brother and his friend started.

Dinner passed off pleasantly. Paul concluded that if Maggie was housekeeper her dinner certainly did her credit.

A week passed away, and Paul found himself groaning in spirit over the Misses Clements. He had wandered in search of the picturesque with Nora, had sacrificed gloves and boots in the pursuit of wonderful boughs and inaccessible flowers. He had listened to Georgiana till his ears fairly ached, and he was divided in his own mind as to whether the performer or the listener deserved the more pity. He had admired Cordelia in every variety of costume, in every effective attitude; had seen her eyes raised and the long lashes of the drooping lids; and marveled at the whiteness of her hands, at the profusion of her curling hair; had cohsidered her a beauty, a weariness and a burden of spirits.

The three eldest girls were a good deal puzzled about Dr. Goddard, and not a little humiliated by his apparent indifference.

"He doesn't seem to possess the least love for art," said Nora, disdainfully. "I have shown him my very finest pieces of work, and when I attempt to discuss them he looks bored. He is our guest, I know, but really I must say he is rather rude."

"As for music," chimed in Georgiana, "I don't believe he has any ear for it. The other day I went into the drawing-room with my latest piece of music. I thought he might like to hear it, but would you believe it, girls, he listened to my singing, thanked me absent-mindedly, and then excused himself?"

"He isn't a bit clever at turning compliments," sighed Cordelia, rising and examining herself critically in a mirror. "I've changed my costume at least three times every day, and he has never once told me that such and such a dress became me wonderfully."

"He's a bear," cried Nora, resentfully. "I really think, girls, that we'd better stop trying to please him and devote ourselves to our own bents."

For some moments the girls were silent. It was a tempting retaliatory proposition, but would Dr. Goddard care? He certainly seemed a most unappreciative young man.

No; they could not afford to let him severely alone. Young men were too scarce, and each of these three girls had a secret but positive desire to marry and have homes of their own.

It was only Maggie who found no fault with Paul. She devoted herself to making her brother's charming friend comfortable, and permitted herself to have no other thought.

And she knew that Paul was enjoying himself. She read it in his eyes, which glistened at every fresh sign of her thoughtfulness. Which one of her sisters did he prefer? she wondered.

But he could find but little time to speak to Maggie. He saw the evidences of her industry and taste in every detail of housekeeping; knew whose skill directed the servants; whose fingers filled the flower vases; whose eyes were everywhere. But the very perfection of all these arrangements kept the little woman too busy for many idle moments, and in the evening the older sisters were all-engrossing.

Two months had passed, and instead of June roses, early fall fruits and flowers were abundant at Mossvale, when Paul Goddard passed again through the village, and called at Dr. Clements's office.

"I am sorry," said Howard, as he cordially shook his friend by the hand. "All the girls are away. Uncle James invited them to pass a month at the White Mountains, and they deserted me."

"Then you are alone."

"Oh, not entirely. Maggie stays to keep house for me."

"Oh, Miss Maggie is here? Shall I intrude if I stay a day or two, Howard?"

"Intrude, Paul? Far from it. I am not very busy, and Maggie was telling me to-day that time actually hangs heavy on her hands. You know she was always running for the others. So now the little damsel has time to enjoy herself, and we have had some lovely rides and drives. Maggie does ride beautifully, and her horse is very fond of her."

It was true that Maggie was finding many leisure hours while her sisters were away, and Paul found that the retiring, modest girl was one of the pleasantest companions it had ever been his good fortune to meet.

It was an amusement the young physician enjoyed, to draw out the accomplishments that had been overshadowed by her sisters' loudly-proclaimed talents and attractions. He found that Maggie could sing with a sweet, bird-like voice, though she never attempted the difficult songs in which Georgiana was supposed to excel. She could play simple pieces with feeling and expression, and her fingers would fairly dance over the keys in livelier music that required no wonderful talent or elaborate execution.

And it was wonderful how pretty the child-like face became in Paul Goddard's eyes. There was a charm in the constant cheerfulness that kept the rosy mouth ever smiling and sweet; there was a beauty of expression in the brown eyes that mere form and color can never give; there was an attraction always in the exquisite neatness of dress that was never stiff and prim, though so carefully arranged.

Howard Clements, who loved his friend, and had hoped to secure him as a brother during his former visit, opened his eyes wide in amazement, as the days wore away and Paul lingered in Mossvale. During his first visit, Howard had hoped to see him yield to the fascinations of the elder Misses Clements, and no manoeuvering mother ever took more pains than this brother to display the talents and beauties of his sisters. That any one would look twice at Maggie, when in the company of the others, had never occurred to Howard.

But in the light of Paul's evident admiration, the brother began to contemplate with different emotions the possibility of losing his little sister. He had borne with perfect composure the prospect of parting with the others. It seemed no great hardship, even when the separation involved the disappearance of Nora's masterpieces and Georgiana's music rack. But to lose Maggie was quite another matter.

"Who," Howard asked himself in dismay—"who would superintend the servants and keep the house in order? Who would wait with cheerful smiles upon him, when the duties of his profession obliged him to ask for meals at all sorts of irregular hours?"

Visions of Nora in paint-bedaubed dresses, Georgiana with frowsy hair, and Cordelia in inert beauty, presiding over the household, filled Howard's brains; and while he lamented, he admitted that "Paul's head was level," in his apparent choice.

Maggie could scarcely believe she heard aright when Paul Goddard pleaded for the gift of her love, and promised all loyalty and devotion if she would come and preside over his home.

"But," she said, "you cannot really love me."

"I really can and do," was the reply.

"But I'm so plain, and so stupid, Howard said" —— She paused and blushed.

"Well, what did Howard say? Tell me. That's a darling."

"He said, then, that I was sure to be an old maid, and after others were all married, I was to stay here and help him keep up a bachelor's hall. I really don't see," she added earnestly, "how Howard will get along."

"He must do as I do."

"How?"

"Seek a darling little housekeepe. for a wife."

So, to the amazement of all concerned, the first Miss Clements who was married was not the artist, not the musician, not the beauty, but only Maggie.—New York Journal.

Chinese Fighting Power.

The fighting powers of Chinese militia, when armed with modern weapons, is evidenced by the frequent repulses and defeats which the French suffered during the campaign in Tonquin, the last being that of General Negrier, near Lang-Son, nine days before the Franco-Chinese treaty of peace was signed, and when the French army of occupation in Tonquin had been raised to 40,000 men. These Chinese troops were merely levies from Yunnan, Kuang-tung, and Kuang-si, and not part of the 150,000 who had been trained by European officers in Northern China.

The total army of China at that time, including 600,000 militia, known as the Green Flag Army, scattered through the various provinces, was said to be about 1,000,000 men. In time of necessity this force could be largely increased. The following quotation from an author who had experience with General Gordon's "Ever-Victorious Army" shows Chinamen are admirably suitable for soldiers.

"The old notion is pretty well got rid of that they are at all a cowardly people, when properly paid and efficiently led; while the regularity and order of their habits, which dispose them to peace in ordinary times, give place to a daring bordering upon recklessness in time of war. Their intelligence and capacity for remembering facts make them well fitted for use in modern warfare, as does also the coolness and calmness of their disposition. Physically, they are, on the average, not so strong as Europeans, but considerably more so than most of the other races of the East, and on a cheap diet of rice, vegetables, salt fish and pork, they can go through a vast amount of fatigue, whether in a temperate climate or a tropical one, where Europeans are ill fitted for exertion. Their wants are few; they have no caste prejudices, and hardly any appetite for intoxicating liquors.—The Nineteenth Century.

Heat and Thirst in India.

The handling of a gun after the sun had played upon it for an hour or two was sufficiently warm work when done in gingerly fashion, and with the least possible contact with the metal of barrel or trigger guard; the sudden clutching of a barrel suggested collision with the wrong end of a red-hot poker.

And the thirst! when once the man who is out in that heat yields to the temptation of his water, or cold tea, or lime juice or water bottle, he is thereafter for the rest of that day a lost creature, the slave of any fluid with which he can wet his parching lips and allay his insatiable thirst.

Then would he drink kerosene, or ink, or any other abomination that possessed, in his view, the indispensable qualification of being liquid. So, too, will the natives, the mahouts and others—descend from the elephants and drink greedily from any fetid pool, though death be in the cup.—Blackwoods Magazine.

WASHINGTON NOTES

WHAT IS GOING ON AT UNCLE SAM'S HEADQUARTERS.

Comment Concerning Transactions in the Various Departments.

The ministerial crisis at Paris is following its normal course. President Carnot received, collectively, the formal resignations of the cabinet, which they declined to retract. The president pressed General Mercier to remain at the head of the ministry of war and, in a conditional way, he assented.

Sam Tanhouser has tired of the tinsel and tribulations of an American consulate. He was appointed by President Cleveland several months ago to protect the American flag at Matamoras, Mexico. Tuesday he forwarded, through Colonel Livingston, to the state department, his unqualified resignation. He asks to be released by June 1st.

Senator Berry, of Arkansas, delivered a notable speech in the senate advocating the adoption of a cloture rule by that body. He said if he had enough senators with him he would adopt it at once. He declared for action and speedy action, and said that every senator, whether he be democrat or republican, should listen to the demands of the people and pass the tariff bill without delay.

The sugar investigating committee met Saturday morning and adjourned after reaching the unanimous decision that all hearings in the matter of the investigation of the charges of the bribery and the doings of the sugar trust should be held behind closed doors. It was argued that better results could be thus obtained. Mr. Gray, the chairman, was requested to give to the press such matters as would not interfere with the work of the committee in hand.

Reducing the Force.

Public Printer Benedict has dismissed a large number of the employes at the government printing office. There were all sorts of estimates as to the number discharged, ranging from 500 to 1,000, but a rough canvass of the several departments indicates that about 275 were dismissed from the folding room, 125 from the three divisions of the document rooms, fifty-five from the department branches, eighty from the bindery, forty-five from the specification and proof rooms and perhaps 100 to 150 from other divisions and individual positions. None of the force on the Congressional Record were disturbed. About half of the number discharged were women. More removals are looked for, as it is Mr. Benedict's intention to reduce the force of 3,600 to somewhere near the 2,200 he left in office when he retired five years ago.

Sold It for $3,275.

A telegram Tuesday night from Chicago to a treasury officials confirms the rumor that Secretary Carlisle sold the government building in the world's fair grounds before his departure down the bay to fish. It seems that ten days ago he sent a special agent out to Chicago to dispose of the building upon the best terms possible. The agent had an offer of $3,275 for the building and sold it at that price, though it is less than 1 per cent of its cost, which was $400,000. However, this was the best offer and it went at that price to the Chicago Salvage Company. This company wire that it would resell it to the government for $25,000, and that is, perhaps, what the government will have to pay to get it again. But Colonel Livingston is determined to have it, now that he finds it can be moved to Atlanta and erected on the grounds there at a total cost of $65,000, which includes every expense.

Before The Sub-Committee.

Messrs. J. J. Spalding and Clark Howell, representing the Cotton States and International Exposition, to be held in Atlanta in the fall of 1895, appeared Monday morning before the sub-committee of the appropriations committee of the house and gave full details, facts and figures concerning the exposition. The committee also had before it Mr. Bickford, secretary of the board of managers of the government world's fair exhibit at Chicago. Mr. Bickford, in reply to the question as to the advisability of the removal of the government building from Chicago to Atlanta, stated that he thought it entirely feasible and well worth consideration. It was shown that the building, which cost $375,000, could be transported to Atlanta and re-erected at an approximate cost of $100,000. The sub-committee, which consists of Livingston, Brookshire, Robertson, Coggswell and Cannon, communicated with the secretary of the treasury concerning the ownership of the building, which it had been reported had already been sold by the government. The treasury department replied that the building still belonged to the government and that the secretary of the treasury had done nothing further than to consider a proposition for its sale. The committee seems to be favorably inclined to the removal of the building to Atlanta and the authorization of a government exhibit.

Disheartened Strikers.

Since the beginning of the strike in the coke region, about one month ago, the situation has never appeared so unfavorable to the strikers as at present. That they will ultimately lose the contest now seems a certainty. The action of the Cleveland convention in refusing to recognize the strike—its cutting off of all offers and promises of financial support—is regarded as the killing blow.

French Ministry Out.

The French ministry was defeated Tuesday on the miners' eight-hour bill and at once resigned.

COXEY IN JAIL.

BROWNE AND JONES WILL KEEP HIM COMPANY.

They Go from the Washington Police Court Handcuffed.

Coxey, Browne and Jones were sentenced by Judge Miller in the Washington police court Monday afternoon to twenty days in jail for violating the statute of the United States prohibiting the display of partisan banners in the capitol grounds, and Coxey and Browne were fined $5 each additional for trespassing on the grass, the alternative being another ten days in jail. Jones was acquitted on this last charge.

The proceedings preliminary to the passing of sentence were in line with the series of extraordinary incidents that have marked the whole trial.

Judge Miller asked the usual question whether the defendants had anything to say why sentence should not be passed.

Representative Hudson, of Kansas, one of Coxey's counsel, immediately rose and delivered a political address. As an American citizen, he said, he could not help stating that he had considerable contempt for the government in its prosecution of this case. Every point had been decided against the defendants.

Browne then addressed the court, comparing the jury to those who had participated in the crucifixion. He finally said he believed the few hours or days or months he would pass in jail would do more to help the cause than his feeble voice could.

Then the judge told the defendants that he could send them to jail for 120 days and fine them $200 each, but he would not do so. He wished, he said, that Coxey and Browne had so demeaned themselves that more than a nominal sentence would not be necessary, but their demeanor in court had changed this feeling. Judge Miller then imposed the sentence given above of twenty days' imprisonment in the district jail for all three defendants and $5 fine or ten days additional imprisonment for Coxey and Browne.

IN THE "BLACK MARIA."

At five minutes of 2 o'clock, Coxey, Browne and Jones, with handcuffs on their wrists, were placed in the "Black Maria" with a dozen white and negro workhouse laborers, who were not handcuffed, as companions, and the van immediately conveyed them to the jail.

Before going to the police court to receive sentence, and apparently without any anticipation of the actual outcome, Coxey prepared an elaborate proclamation, which he furnished to the press.

TRADE NOTES.

Business of the Past Week as Reviewed by Bradstreet's.

Bradstreet's review of trade says: "This week is the third in succession in which there has been no material gain in volume of business and practically no improvement in prospects for trade in the near future. Continued uncertainty regarding tariff legislation restricts trading in 'futures' in all staple lines. This is largely responsible for the reduction in the volume of bank clearings.

"The general industrial situation does not improve, although the striking New York and Patterson silk weavers, who have been out three months and have lost over $1,250,000 in wages, have gone back to work. The coal conference at Cleveland failed to settle the miners' strike, and the situation as to fuel supplies continues to grow worse. Shut-downs of industrial concerns, restricted transportation operations and seizures by railroad companies of coal on track are increasing and large quantities of foreign coal have been engaged for delivery on the Atlantic seaboard. The number of idle men through strikes still remains at about 225,000.

"Trade is slow in all lines at Philadelphia and Baltimore, at neither of which is the trade for the near future encouraging. At the south such centers as Charleston, Nashville, Memphis, Atlanta, Birmingham, Mobile, New Orleans and Galveston report the jobbing trade practically at a standstill, there having been no improvement within a week, and a sluggish demand. At Augusta drugs are relatively most active; at Chattanooga sales of hardware are improved, and at Savannah naval stores are firmer and lighter."

EX-TREASURER O'BRIEN SUED

And the Catholic Knights Also Made Defendants.

The Fidelity and Casualty Company of New York has filed a bill in the chancery court against ex-Treasurer M. J. O'Brien, praying that his individual bondsmen be permanently enjoined from selling certain real estate to satisfy judgments rendered against them. The company also prays that a receiver be appointed to take charge of the property. The Catholic Knights of America are also made defendants in the suit.

Pennsylvania Republicans.

The Pennsylvania republican state convention was called to order at Harrisburg Wednesday morning. Two hundred and fifty-seven delegates were present. General Louis Wagner, of Philadelphia, was elected temporary chairman, and the minor officers of the convention were designated.

Dr. Meyer Convicted.

The jury in the case of Dr. Henry Meyer, at New York, accused of having poisoned Ludwig Brandt, came into court and rendered a verdict of guilty of murder in the second degree, the penalty for which is imprisonment for life.

OATES NOMINATED

FOR GOVERNOR OF THE STATE OF ALABAMA.

End of a Hotly Contested Gubernatorial Campaign.

The democracy of Alabama has chosen its standard bearer for the state campaign. Hon. William C. Oates, congressman from the third Alabama district, was declared by the state convention at Montgomery to be the nominee of the democratic party for governor of Alabama.

The contest for the honor between Colonel Oates and Captain Joseph T. Johnson, of Birmingham, has been an exceedingly hot one. Both men were able an honest and had the confidence of the people of the state. Either was well equipped to make the state an excellent governor. The question was, which is the most available man with whom to defeat R. F. Kolb.

Out of the sixty-six counties in Alabama only two reported with contesting delegations—Lee and Hale. The executive committee spent a day listening to the evidence in the two cases and seated the Oates delegation in the former and the Johnston delegation in the latter. Each contest involved many points of equity and custom and volumes of evidence were adduced before the committee.

The convention was called to order by Hon. A. D. Smith, chairman of the state executive committee, who delivered a masterly address to the democrats of Alabama, exhorting them to harmonize their views and to unite against the common enemy. A committee on platform and resolutions was appointed by the chairman, to which was referred a number of resolutions. One of these was an eulogy of Senator Morgan and a recommendation that he be made his own successor.

Nominations came next in order. Mr. Hall, of Baldwin, nominated Colonel Oates. General Pettus, of Dallas, placed Captain Johnston's name before the convention. The first and only ballot resulted Oates, 271 88-100; Johnston, 232 12-100. Mr. Rhodes, of Jefferson, arose before the vote was announced, withdrew Captain Johnston's name and moved to make the nomination of Colonel Oates unanimous, which was done amid applause.

STATE-HOUSE OFFICERS.

The following state-house officers were nominated:

Secretary of State—James Kirk Jackson, of Florence.

Treasurer—J. Craig Smith, of Dallas.

State Auditor—John Purifoy, of Camden.

After a hard fight over the nomination of a candidate for attorney-general, William C. Fitts, of Tuscaloosa, was chosen on the eleventh ballot.

A CITY ENGULFED.

Fearful Damage Done by Earthquakes in Venezuela.

Advices were received at Washington Saturday from Consul Plumacher, at Maracaibo, dated May 5th, showing that the greatest damage of the Venezuelan earthquake was done on the famous San Carlos and Merida railway, nearly complete, in the Andes. The axis of the disturbances, which lasted at some points three days, was along its line. Several of the splendid bridges were totally destroyed, and others were considerably affected. Several stations were thrown down, the rails twisted and bent and in some places were broken apart and a number of lives were lost. Lagunillos, with all its inhabitants, disappeared entirely, a lake now occupying its site. In some places black water having a fetid odor was expelled from crevices in the earth. The earthquake is said to have been much worse than those of 1849 and 1875. At the latter, the flourishing city of Cuenta, Columbia, was demolished and 5,000 persons lost their lives. The Venezuelan minister at Washington has been asked to recieve contribution in this country for the relief of the sufferers of the catastrophe.

FRITZ IN WASHINGTON.

His Army of Industrials are Few but They Mean Business.

Michael Fitzgerald, with his band of forty-three, arrived in Washington Tuesday afternoon and took up quarters in a small chapel annex to the Mount Zion Methodist church, a house of worship for negroes, in the northwest section of the city. The chapel is just about large enough to accommodate the industrials and equipped with wooden benches, which the men are using for beds. The delegates are by far the most intelligent in appearance of any of the armies of the unemployed that have reached the city. Fitzgerald says his men do not expect to stay more than three or four days. They have a petition to present to congress, but have as yet made no plans concerning the manner of presenting it. The petition is strongly socialistic in its nature and goes much further than the Coxey plans. Fitzgerald says his men are in sympathy with Coxey, but that they are not in any way connected with him or his army.

Reagan Wants the Governorship.

A Dallas, Texas, special says: The formal announcement of Judge John H. Reagan, ex-confederate postmaster general, that he is a candidate for governor, although expected for ten days, created a profound sensation. A month ago, as published in the press dispatches, he declared he was against President Cleveland, in a proclamation. No man has a stronger or more enthusiastic following in Texas than Judge Reagan, and he is looked upon as a venerable father of democracy.

GEN. COOK DEAD.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE DIES VERY SUDDENLY.

He Was Popular and Well Known Throughout the State.

General Phil Cook, secretary of state, died Monday morning just before 1 o'clock at the home of Mr. W. L. Peel at Atlanta. It was a short illness that led to his death. Saturday the general was at his office attending to his duties as usual. But when he left his home he neglected to carry with him his overcoat. The cold wave came on and Saturday night the general complained of a severe cold.

Sunday morning he was up and about the house, but was complaining of a pain in his chest. He gave it no especial importance and was at the tea table with the rest of the family. Later in the evening he retired to his room and about half-past 11 o'clock awoke the household by asking for Mrs. Peel, his daughter. Mrs. Peel quickly responded, and when she reached the bedside of her father he remarked: "I believe I am going to die."

He appeared to be suffering, and it was painful to watch his attempts to breathe. A messenger was hurried for a physician, but by the time the doctor arrived the general was dead.

Than General Cook none of the statehouse officers were more popular or better known throughout the state. He made his first political appearance at the statehouse after the death of Secretary of State Barnett. When Gov. Northen made his first race General Cook was on the ticket and was elected and has since held the position most acceptably.

STILL AFTER BRECKENRIDGE.

Women Refuse to Decorate Confederate Graves on His Account.

Political, confederate and social circles at Lexington, Ky., are more excited now than ever because a young woman's auxiliary of the Confederate Association had stormy meetings and had refused to decorate the confederate graves because Breckenridge was a member of the veteran's association. The president of the auxiliary says it will take no part in the Breckenridge case as a body. Mrs. A. M. Harrison secretary, and her sister-in-law, Miss Mary Harrison, vice president, of the auxiliary, resigned their offices today. They are severe in condemnation of Colonel Breckenridge, and while they give no open reason for resigning, they say plainly it ought not be difficult to infer why they quit the organization.

CLEMSON COLLEGE BURNED.

It Was the State Agricultural College of South Carolina.

The main building of the Clemson college, at Fort Hill, S. C., caught fire Tuesday morning. The main building is a total loss. The dormitory, chapel and mechanical building were all saved. The Clemson Agricultural College, so called from Thomas G. Clemson, son-in-law of John C. Calhoun, who donated the ground for its site, stands within a stone's throw of Calhoun's old home. It is the state agricultural and mechanical college, and was established in 1893, as the result of a long agitation by the farmers of the state.

MET IN A TUNNEL,

With the Result That Half a Dozen Men Were Killed.

A disastrous wreck occurred Saturday morning on the Newport News and Mississippi Valley railroad at Standing Rock Tunnel. An extra freight train crashed into a pile driver train with a boarding car attached. The pile driver train was backing with the boarding car in front when the two trains met in the middle of the tunnel. Conductor Nick Hill, of the pile driver train, and six or seven occupants of the boarding car were killed.

More Rain at Johnstown.

A special from Johnstown, Pa., says: The renewal of the heavy downpour of rain again alarmed the inhabitants of the seemingly ill-fated Conemaugh valley. The rain had not been sufficient, however, to cause the rivers to get wild again. No damage was done and it is again thought that the danger is passed.

Taylor Confirmed.

The senate Wednesday confirmed the nomination of Charles H. J. Taylor, colored, of Kansas, to be recorder of deeds in the District of Columbia. The vote was 34 to 15. Taylor is from Kansas City, Kas., and was appointed through the influence of Senator Martin, of Kansas.

Chicago Brokers Break.

S. E. Dunham & Co., moderate traders on the board of trade at Chicago have announced their suspension.

THE rules of all railway companies recognize to some extent the fact that alcohol unfits their employes for their responsible duties. It is reported that on fifty-four North American lines total abstinence while on duty is insisted upon by the railway companies; on fifteen abstinence without restriction to time of duty; on thirteen the companies insist on abstinence as essential to promotion, and on one the employe's signature of the abstinence pledge is required before engagement. The Rock Island Railway Company has been enforcing its anti-drink rules lately with great vigor. General Prince Kuropatkin recently issued an order to the official staff of the Trans-Caspian Railway, requiring all officials and employes guilty of indulging in intoxicating drinks to be reported to him.

Hurrah for Oates!

Col. H. Clay Thompkins was elected chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee, and Hon. Thos. H. Clarke Secretary. Better selections could not have been made.

The summer season is upon the VIEW and it is necessary that every one indebted to the paper should come up and settle their dues. A cordial support from the Democracy is expected.

The editors and printers of Mississippi are protesting against the city and county officials sending out of the State for their printing and stationery, ignoring as they do worthy concerns at home. The Alabama Press Association should do the same thing. Thousands of dollars go out every quarter for articles which should be purchased in this State.

The Democrats of Chilton must begin in dead earnest to organize their forces so that in August Kolbism and Republicanism shall be buried so deeply that we shall hear no more from such disturbances for years to come. Let every community organize a Democratic club. Every man of us must be willing to sacrifice something of ease, time and money in order to overthrow the enemies of Democracy.

The farmers of Alabama, those who conduct small farms intelligently, are making a good showing. There is no State in the Union that offers more inducements to the farmer of small areas than does Alabama. With half the work found necessary to make both ends meet in other sections northern farmers who have located among us soon become independent, and attract their friends to come and settle with them.—Ex.

The Kolbites employed Hon. D. S. Troy to give them a legal opinion on the Sayre election law. These apostles of reform have prated much about this law, claiming that under it Registrars could defraud the people and yet go unpunished. Col. Troy shows that the general statutes on forgery cover every point, and make it almost impossible for one to do otherwise than what is just. As is set forth in the Democratic platform we favor giving the Sayre election law a fair trial, then if defects are discovered in it, repeal or amend it until we have a law which absolutely guarantees fairness.

These tempestuous times demand men—men who know the right and in knowing, dare to do. Give us men who will not cast lots for the spoils of office when their country is being crucified. Men who will not bend to earth like a weed with every popular clamor that blows, but will breast the storm like an oak and gather strength from every gale. Give us men who are not demagogues—men too brave to fan infuriated passions into flame. Give us honest men—men honest with themselves and true to all others. Men who prefer country above self. Men who stands above the fogs of party strife—sun crowned men! Give us men who dare to stretch forth their hands to steady the ark of good government when it is shaken by aliens. Give us men who dare rebuke wrong in its high places—men who love liberty more than life. God give us such men! —Age-Herald.

STATE CONVENTION.

A more important meeting of the Democrats of Alabama was never had than the one just held in the city of Montgomery. Friends of Oates and Johnson had made a gallant fight for their respective favorites and the enemies of Democracy expected to see a serious split. But like true men those defeated yielded to the inevitable and fell in line with the majority and will be found in the thickest of the fight holding up the banner of Democracy until her every foe shall be protestate in the dust at her feet. The men nominated are good and true Democrats who will labor faithfully for the success of the right. We command to our readers the following platform adopted with but one dissenting vote.

THE PLATFORM.

The Democrats of Alabama in Convention assembled, reaffirm the principles of the Democratic party as declared in its platform adopted in Chicago, in 1892, and congratulates the country upon the success of those principles in the triumphant election of Grover Cleveland, who has by his generous treatment of our people, shown that he is the President of the whole country, knowing no North, no South, no East no West. We recognize the wisdom and patriotism of the President, and believe in his fealty to the principles of party, and endorse his administration of the Federal Government; while some of us differ with him in matters of policy, we are agreed that he is actuated by motives of patriotism and by an unselfish devotion to the greatest good to the whole people.

While there are differences of opinion among us in matters of detail we believe in free coinage of silver when it can be done consistently with the maintenance of a sound and safe currency.

We earnestly urge upon our Senators and Representatives in congress the speedy reform of the tariff and the prompt repeal of the ten per cent tax on the issue of State banks.

We heartily endorse the present administration of the State Government, headed by Thos. G. Jones who has so wisely discharged his great trust, and we commend him for his impartial and fearless execution of the laws.

We pledge to the people of Alabama a continuance of the good government of our State affairs inaugurated by the election of Geo. S. Houston in 1874.

The election law enated at the last session of our General Assembly is in accordance with the principles upon which are based the laws regulating elections in a large majority of the States of the Union enacted without regard to party, and was intended at the ballot box to obtain a full and fair expression of the will, and after giving it a trial, should it fail to accomplish the end which it was intended to effect, we pledge ourselves to make such changes and alterations therein as may be necessary to effect that end.

We pledge our party to the maintenance of a system of free public schools and to increase the appropriations for that purpose whenever the financial condition of the State will permit.

We pledge our party to continue its efforts to remove all the evils of the present convict system and to pass all the appropriate legislation to prevent its working injustice to any class of our people.

We extended a cordial invitation to all voters of Alabama who believe in the principles of Democracy and are in favor of the maintenance of a good government, to unite with us in the election of the ticket nominated by this convention.

Among the miners of Alabama and the United States are many foreigners, and the strikes are traceable to that element almost entirely. The greatest trouble about that class is their determination not to allow others to work. This is clearly an un-American idea which our native workmen would never adopt. Some states are now having great trouble in protecting the property of mine owners and miners who are disposed to work. So far Alabama has had but little serious trouble of this kind, yet as a preventative Gov. Jones has placed a large body of State troops near Birmingham so that they can prevent outbreaks.

Mrs. Lease of Kansas is dying, so is the third party, whose cause she so earnestly espoused.

SOLID AS A STONE WALL.

Age-Herald.

Those timid souls who think that the heated contest for the gubernatorial nomination through which the state has just passed will divide the Democratic party should remember that there have been other contests equally as warm and yet the party stood solid as a stone wall. Only four years ago there was a desperate struggle between giants. The partisans of each candidate were as fiery and as devoted as the clans of Culloden. But when the fight had been fought and the prize won by Thos. G. Jones did Johnston sulk in his tent? No. He at once took the field and fought for the success of the party with all the zeal of his impetuous nature. He was the Cœur de Lion of the fray. When the beautiful Rebecca, shading her eyes with her hand, looked out from the castle window upon a battle that raged below, she exclaimed to a wounded knight, Ivanhoe: "I see a gigantic knight with black plume approach the gate. They hurl down upon him great stones, but he heeds them no more than thistle down. He rains below upon the portcullis with his battle axe like lightning. There is but one knight in Christendom who can strike such blows. It must be — it is — Richard, the Lion Hearted! God of Abraham, he fights with more than mortal valor for his soul is in every blow!" Every blow that Johnston struck for Democracy had his soul in it. And where was Richardson? Did he cowardly desert his party? No! every blast upon his bugle was worth 1000 men. And Crook? Let the solid vote that his partisans cast be the answer.

And what about the great battle for the nomination in 1886? It was fierce and furious. The State was divided between the adherents of Seay, Dawson, McKleroy and Clayton. They stood among the foremost men of the land, and each strained every nerve for the prize. When the laurel wreath was placed on the brow of Seay by the convention did Dawson and his men bolt the party? Did McKleroy? Did Clayton? Never! They rallied their men in solid masses to the support of the nominees. "Their swords were a thousand, their hearts one."

And what of Joseph F. Johnston now? He is strong in the hour of defeat. Both he and his followers will rally to the Democratic standard with an enthusiasm that will sweep away the enemies of Democracy. These words of Captain Johnston before the convention ring like a bugle's horn to call battle:

"Now we are to meet the common enemy. Men are nothing! Measures and the old ship to its course! We must be found in solid phalanx for the old faith! We must stand for the right—for the cause of the people—unawed by the power of influence. As for my part, it is unnecessary to say that wherever the banner of Democracy waves, whenever the flag of my party floats, I will be found fighting beneath its folds for fair dealing, for peace and harmony, for the eternal principles of justice and the maintenance of Democratic supremacy."

Stallings Work.

Washington, D. C., May 23—Representative Stallings as chairman of sub-committee on pensions is preparing a bill giving any Mexican and Indian war veteran over 62 years of age $12 50 per month. This is amendatory to the present law which gives the veteran $8 per month, with an additional $4 if he swears that he is utterly incapacitated from obtaining a livlihood and uncapable of doing any manual labor. Mr. Stallings does not think a Mexican war veteran should be compelled to declarce that he is a pauper to obtain $12 per month pension.

There is between $250,000 and $300,000 lying in the treasury to satisfy claims against the U. S. for the horses lost by troops in the Mexican war. Almost if not all of this belongs to the South. Bills have been passed for the relief of those who so suffered, but the money has been held in the treasury because of a section in the law compelling the claimant to prove his loyalty during the late war. To-morrow Mr. Stallings will introduce a bill repealing this section of the law, and expects to secure its passage as the bill will be favorably reported immediately from the committee. PELTRET.

CURES
CANCER

Keysville, Fla. April 17th, 1894. Messrs. Dubois and webb, Louisville, Ky.—Dear Sirs: "About eleven months ago I bought from you an Electropoise for the purpose of treating cancer. I had one of about ten years' standing, and it had reached a stage where it was making rapid progress, being about the size of a silver dollar. I knew that I had to do something or my time was about up, and you being the only party that I corresponded with that would give me any assurance of a cure, got my patronage. I am now happy to inform you that the cancer is no more, the Electropoise arrested the progress of the cancer perceptibly in about thirty-six to forty-eight hours and gradually and slowly grew less until now there is a place about the size of a pin head that is not quite healed but gradually closing up. You can use this or any part of it as a testimonial if you wish. Very truly yours M. M. Lillibridge."

D. A. Bryant, Hackneyville:—"I was badly crippled with rheumatism, also had a bad kidney trouble, I was helpless and could do no work. The Electropoise cured me and enabled me to work regularly.

Rev. W. C. Hearn, Talledega.—"For producing calm refreshing sleep and curing sciatic rheumatism the Electropoise can not be equaled.

Joseph Williams, Stevenson—"I can walk all over town and even run, whereas a few weeks ago I was a helpless cripple, the electropise did it."

Mrs. W. P. Nelson, Sunshine—"My recovery was wonderful. I have also tried the electropoise on several of my neighbors, for various ailments, nausea, kidney trouble of the worst form, all with the most gratifiying results."

Mr. Logan Dunkin, of Blunt Springs, is on a visit to his parents in Clanton.

The friends of Prof. Tipton Mullins are glad to see him up again after a second spell of sickness.

The pupils of the University School are busy engaged this week in their annual written examination.

Mrs. L. A. Thornton and Miss Rosa Thornton have returned home after spending the winter in Florida.

Alex Shelton, negro, who was convicted last week of murder in the first degree for killing Mr. James Harries, has been sentenced to hang on June 29, 1894.

We welcome to our town Mr. J. B. Criswell and family, of Calera, but are sorry that Mr. C. has had the misfortune to lose a $50 cow during his short stay here.

Rev. J. G. Lowrey has returned from Texas after attending the Convention and visiting relatives in that State. He reports himself highly pleased with the country and a pleasant trip.

It seems that everyone in our town have the fishing craze, and invariably do they return empty-handed, tired and hungry—forcibly illustrating the fisherman's luck—on the banks of Goose creek.

Dr. J. S. Johnson will at an early date tear down his old stables and erect new ones on his lot back of Mr. Vines' shop, the street will be opened, conveniences added for the people, and an improvement made.

Conveyance for the union picnic will be furnished by the two Sunday Schools. Mim's mill pond is the place decided upon, and no prettier place could be found within a 5 mile circuit. Quite a gay time is contemplated by the little folks.

It is about time spring chickens were beginning to appear upon the market. The squall of a spring chicken in town raises about as much excitement as a fire alarm—neighbors rush out—listen again—and a race ensues that would do credit to prize runners.

Parents, patrons and those who feel and interest in our school should lend their presence next week during final examinations and closing exercises. Prof. McMorries has been faithful in his endeavor to build up a good school and well merits this proper courtesy show of appreciation.

At last this team has given permission for the Verbena nine to cross the trestle and in all probability, a game will be played Saturday, provided, the Verbena nine still have that great desire to play our boys, and, provided, they can be prevailed upon to remain on this side of trestle aboro.

Mr. Jim Broadhead is said to have the finest ten acre field of corn in the county. It measures 6 feet in height.

Most farmers report all the grass chopped out of their crops, and are only waiting for a good rain to send every everything off.

Our townsman, Prof. McMorries only entered the race for State Supt. of Education a couple of days before the Convention, but he got quite a respectable vote.

The fence around the cemetery is almost completed, post are lacking and as soon as procured it will be finished. Mr. B. M. Gentry has the contract and has built quite a substantial fence. The town should rejoice that the resting place of the dead will soon be free from the imprints of the hoofs of cows, hogs, etc. It has long been a range for the stock and a disgraceful negligence upon those who showed no interest in having the ground enclosed. Judge Callen deserves praise for the part he has taken in the matter.

Local news items being scarce in this town, we publish the wail of an exchange on the subject: "News, news, news! It's enough to give a fellow the blues. Nobody married, and nobody dead, nobody broken an arm or a head. Noby come in to talk of the "crap" nobody got boozy and started a scrap; nobody run in for stealing a horn, nobody got buried and nobody born. Oh! for a racket, a riot a fuss! someone to come and kick up a muss; some one to stir up the peace laden air, or somebody come to give us a scare. Somebody thumped within an inch of his life, somebody run off with another man's wife; some one come in and pay up his dues, anything, anything, just so it is news."

Closing Exercises of University School June 6th.

9 a. m. to 11 a. m. Public Reception at School Building.

8:30 p. m. Concert at Mullins Hall. Admittance fee to concert, twenty-five cents for those over twelve years of age, ten cents for those under. Tickets for sale at post office. Number limited. Each parent or guardian having children in concert are entitled to two complimentary tickets. The object of the fee is to begin the accumulation of a library fund for the School.

A Fair Man.

Please permit me to say a few things in vindication of that sterling Democrat of Chilton, D. J Watersworth, in his course in generously insisting upon the recent County Convention giving the Oate's men a prorate, though a Johnston man. I am lead to do so because, I understand some of the Johnston men seemed to censure him for the course he pursued and were somewhat inclined to deem him unfair to his Johnston constituents, in his sacrifice of personal preference for Chilton County Democratic harmony.

Again I must say that prior to the meeting of the convention and without knowing how the Convention stood, whether a majority for Oates or Johnston, he said to me: "I do think that a prorate is the only fair and impartial way of selecting the nominee in the County Convention and whichever way it may go, I shall insist on a prorate, and also insist on a resolution heartily endorsing both State and National Administrations." Such expressions as these are but characteristic of that unchangeable, fair, impartial and unswerving Democrat.

I do this only in a spirit of appreciation for the gentleman "in whom I've found no guile" and to let those know who might have misunderstood his action in last County Convention.

DEMOCRAT.

'Tis Sad.

'Tis sad when friends fall out,
For only simple trifles about ——,
Getting angry, mad, having the pout,
Instead of rectifying them as they "mout."

'Tis sad to see old friend meet,
Who avert their heads, do not greet;
Choose the opposite side of the street,
For trifles people can't repeat.

'Tis sad that friends of yore,
Should each the other ignore,
Because of a grievance that's sore,
As is often the cause you know.

'Tis sad when such is the case,
And we can't these feelings erase;
Have love take hatred's place,
Or the balm of Gilead embrace.

To Exterminate Flies.

Mix together equal parts of melted resin and castor oil, stirring for a minute or so until thoroughly mixed. Spread even and thin on strong, thick paper, leaving a margin for handling. Any kind of old paper that is not porous will do, and an old case-knife does well for spreading the mixture. Lay the papers wherever the flies are numerous and burn when full, replacing with fresh.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A Pointer for Boys.

"There is a science in doing little things just right," said a down-town business man to a reporter for the New York Sun a few days ago, "and I notice it in my office. I had two office boys there whose main duty it was to bring me notes or cards that were sent in to me, or to fetch things that I wanted to use. One of those boys, whenever I sent him for a book or anything heavy, would walk rapidly by my desk and toss it indefinitely toward me. If it happened to miss me and land on my desk it was all right. If it fell on the floor the boy always managed to fall over it in his eagerness to pick it up. Then if he had a letter or a card to deliver he would come close up to the desk and stand there scanning it over with minute care. This being concluded he would flaunt it airly in my direction and depart.

"The other boy always came and went so that I could hardly hear him. If it was a book, ink-stand or box of letters he would sit quietly down at one side of my desk.

"Letters and cards he always laid—not tossed—right where my eyes would fall on them directly. If there was any other doubt in his mind about whether he ought to lay a letter on my desk or deliver it to some other person in the office, he always did the thinking before he came near me, and did not stand annoyingly at my elbow studying the letter. That boy understood the science of little things. When New Year's came he got $10. The other boy got fired."—Ex.

CONGRESSIONAL.

DAILY PROCEEDINGS OF BOTH HOUSE AND SENATE.

The Discussion of Important Measures Briefly Epitomized.

The first half hour of Friday's session of the house was spent in passing a resolution to give the committee on railways and canals a clerk. That having been accomplished, the legislative and judicial appropriation bill for the year ending June 30, 1895, was taken up in committee of the whole. Under an agreement reached by the leaders after an hour's skirmishing general debate on the bill was closed at 5 o'clock, and the house voted to adjourn over Saturday. The most of the afternoon was occupied with a discussion of the matter of "docking" members for absent days, which took a wide range. At 5 o'clock the house took a recess until 8 o'clock, the evening session to be for the consideration of private pension and relief bills.

The house, in committee of the whole, considered the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bills under the five minute rule Monday.

The house, Tuesday, went into committee of the whole on the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill.

The house at 12:30 Wednesday again took up the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill, Mr. Dearmond's amendment to strike out the appropriation for the civil service commission being under consideration. A motion to strike out the paragraph appropriating $6,000 for traveling and other expenses of the commission was lost, 54 to 40. This closed the consideration of the civil service schedules, the net result being that the last paragraph only remains in the bill, appropriation for values for the commissioners and clerks having been stricken out previously. Notice was given that a seperate vote will be called for when the bill is reported to the house.

THE SENATE.

In the senate, Friday, the resolution for meetings of the senate at 10 a. m. daily, was taken up and agreed to without question or division. Immediately afterwards, however, a discussion was started by Mr. Sherman who was not in the chamber when it was offered, and knew nothing of the circumstances. In the course of the discussion, Mr. Frye expressed the opinion that it was the duty of the republican side to defeat the tariff bill and resort to any and all parliamentary methods in doing so. He had not been able, however, to persuade the republican side that that was the true policy to pursue. On the contrary, it seemed to be the determination of the republican side to permit the bill to come to a vote after fair consideration. The discussion closed with frank notice to the democratic side of the chamber, by Mr. Chandler, not to act upon the theory that it had been decided by the republican side either that they would or that they would not filibuster against the passage of the bill. The resolution was voted on a second time and agreed to, and then, at 12:15, consideration of the tariff bill was resumed.

In the senate Saturday the tariff bill was taken up and Mr. Gallinger delivered the third portion of his speech against the bill. Mr. Gallinger closed at 1 p. m., and the regular consideration of the tariff bill began.

At 10:30 Monday morning the tariff bill was taken up, the pending question being the first item in schedule "C," metals and manufacturers of iron and steel, placing iron ore on dutiable list at forty cents per ton. Mr. Aldrich criticised the finance committee for reporting the amendment, and recalled the promise of Senator Mills in his speeches in New England in the campaign of 1892, that whenever the democrats returned to power they would give to the manufacturers of that section free coal, free iron ore and free pig iron. Mr. Mills said that so far as he was able he was in favor of giving to the manufacturers of New England not only free wool, free coal, free iron ore, free pig iron and all raw material free, and that if he had his way he would convert every custom-house into a school house to teach the truth to the people.

In the senate, Tuesday, Mr. Walsh, of Georgia, rising to a question of privilege, referred to a publication in the morning paper of a dispatch from St. Paul, Minn., stating that the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers had adopted a resolution condemning him for having introduced in the senate a bill to punish, with twenty years' imprisonment, the obstruction of a train carrying the United States mail. He had, he said, introduced no such bill. He had introduced a bill to protect the United States mail, but he had had no intention of having it apply directly or indirectly to the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers or any other organization of workmen. He recognized that labor had its rights as well as capital or corporations. Having served his apprenticeship at the printer's trade, he had never seen the day when he did not sympathize with the laboring people of this country. Mr. Walsh then read the bill. It's title is "To Protect the United States Mail," and it provides that any persons who shall rob, or attempt to rob, or maliciously obstruct or retard for the purpose of robbery, the passage of any railroad train on which mails are carried, shall be punished by imprisonment at hard labor for not less than one nor more than twenty years. The bill was read the first and second time and referred to the committee on postoffices and post roads. At 10:30 the tariff bill was taken up. The finance committee amendment placing iron ore on the dutiable list at forty cents per ton, was agreed to without division.

In the senate, Wednesday, Mr Kyle introduced a resolution, which went over declaring it as the sense of the senate that the United States should not use force for the purpose of restoring to the throne the deposed queen of the Sandwich islands or destroying the existing government. The tariff bill was taken up at 10:30 the pending question being paragraph 117, relative to the railway bars of iron or steel. Mr. Jones, of Arkansas, withdrew the finance committee amendment and moved to make the duty seven-twentieths of a cent per pound. Mr. Gorman then addressed the senate. During the delivery of Gorman's speech the drop of a pin could almost have been heard, so deep was the hush upon the chamber. The definition of the position of the democrats and the arraignment of their political adversaries was given in impressive words, and when Mr. Gorman closed at 12 o'clock, after having spoken exactly an hour, with the warning that the opposition on the other side could not obstruct the progress of tariff reform the galleries burst into a whirl of applause, and quite a number of democratic senators, first among whom was Mr. Brice, hurried forward to congratulate the Maryland senator. Vice-President Stevenson quelled the confusion with his gavel, and warned the galleries that demonstrations of approval or disapproval would not be tolerated. Mr. Aldrich replied to Mr. Gorman and was followed by Mr. Teller, who, as a test question, moved to lay the tariff bill on the table. The vote resulted, yeas 28, nays 38.

Armed Miners Put Deputy Sheriffs to Flight.

Two hundred and fifty striking miners marched from Washington, Ind., to Littles, seven miles north of that place Wednesday morning, armed with 100 Winchester rifles, and had one wagon load of ammunition, provisions sufficient to last them thirty days and camped at the mine. In the afternoon, in a battle between the striking miners and those at work in the Littles mine, a number were wounded, two fatally. Six deputy sheriffs were disarmed and put to flight. Serious trouble is feared. A company of state militia is in readiness at Evansville to start at call to the mining regions.

The Plucky City, one of the cleanest built boats of light draught on the Tennessee river, was sold under the hammer at Chattanooga Saturday by the United States marshal, to satisfy debts. A Knoxville, Tenn., dispatch says: The postponement of the hearing of the suit of the trainmen of the East Tennessee system against the receivers to July 15th, which was ordered on application of counsel for the trainmen, will probably end the matter, as that is eight days after the date upon which the road is ordered to be sold. By that time the question of wages will adjust itself under the new management.

At Chattanooga, Tenn., Saturday, an indictment was returned against G. N. Henson, president of the Citizens' bank and Trust Company, for murder in the first degree. Last February Henson shot dead J. B. Wert, the alienator of his wife's affections. The two men were descending in an elevator cage at the time. Henson was shortly afterwards released on $10,000 bond and great surprise was expressed at the severity of the indictment.

M. A. Spurr, president of the defunct Commercial National bank, was placed on trial Tuesday in the federal court at Nashville on a charge of certifying the checks of Dobbins & Dazey, when that firm's account was overdrawn. A jury was secured and the prosecuting counsel stated that they expected to prove that Spurr certified checks for $136,000 when he knew that the firm had not the money in the bank. The taking of evidence then began.

The boiler of the Harris mill, which is located a few miles east of DeFuniak, Fla., exploded with terrific force Tuesday morning. It was blown through the roof and deposited some 200 yards away. The mill is almost a complete wreck. The fireman, J. H. Davis, was instantly killed and horribly mangled. John Cody, one of the mill hands, received probably fatal wounds about the head. Several other of the mill hands received painful scalds and wounds.

A Birmingham, Ala., special says: The mine situation is assuming more serious proportions. Monday Sheriff Morrow and a body of forty deputy sheriffs went to Pratt mines to quell anticipated trouble. They were met there by a mob of 500 miners who did everything to provoke shooting on the part of the guards. After drawing the deputies up in line and telling the mob that if they did not disperse he would fire into them. Sheriff Morrow succeeded in dispersing the excited strikers.

The local committee on the Tennessee centennial celebration met at Nashville Monday night and decided to call a state convention the 19th of June to put the ball in motion. The committee has been in correspondence with the mayors and other officers of every city and town in Tennessee, and with the county officers as to the proposition to celebrate the centennial of Tennessee's admission into the union and the responses have been so uniformly favorable that the convention has been called.

SLUMBER SONG.

Who taught the first little girl how to sing?
I know, I know
The dear little birdies that come with the spring,
They chirped and they twittered on light feathered wing,
And sang to her stories of everything
They taught her to sing—
I know.

Who taught the first little girl how to dance?
I know, I know.
She saw how the butterflies flutter and prance
And the tall lady-grasses retreat and advance
As the wind fool little Columbine caper and glance
They taught her to dance—
I know.

Who taught the first little girl how to play?
I know, I know.
The sweet little blossoms all named for the May,
From under their leaves peeping at her so gay
The May-flowers play hide-and-seek every day
They taught her to play—
I know.

Who taught the first little girl how to rest?
I know, I know.
The weary little birds always go to their nest,
And the flowers—no matter if dressed in best—
All droop when the sun settles into the West.
They taught her to rest—
Bye-low!

SAVING THE CLAIM.

MRS. ASHBY stood in the open doorway of her little sod cabin and gazed longingly out across the broad stretch of level Kansas prairie. She was a frail, broken woman, whose deeply furrowed features and great hollow eyes told a pitiful story of mental and physical suffering.

Like many of the poor settlers on the great Western plains she had experienced the bitter trials and hardships of a long and unsuccessful warfare against poverty. There was a yearning, soul-hungry expression on her sad, wan face that was touchingly pathetic.

Up across the prairie from the west came another woman. She was young—not above twenty at the most. She was tall and slender, almost to frailty, and her face wore that sad, wan expression that characterized Mrs. Ashby, but without the hopeless, despairing look.

"Well, Mary?" Mrs. Ashby said, in an eager, questioning tone, as the younger woman approached and sank low seat by the cabin door.

"Dick Enness will not buy the claim, mother," the other replied, folding her hands in her lap.

Mrs. Ashby stared at her daughter in amazement.

"Why, Mary!" she finally exclaimed, "how is that? I thought he wanted to buy it."

"He did, mother, while father was living, but he has changed his mind now."

"But why has he changed his mind? He surely needs the claim now as much as he needed then."

"Yes, he does."

"Then, why doesn't he want it now?"

"He does want it, mother.

"Then why don't he buy it?"

Mary hesitated a moment, then rising and drawing her form to its full height, with angry indignation, replied:

"Mother, Dick Enness is a rascal, and he won't buy our claim because he thinks by waiting a little while he can get it for nothing. He was anxious to buy it while father was living because he knew father could hold it, but he thinks now we will be compelled to give it up and move away, and then he will have nothing to do but enter it in our stead."

"Surely, Mary, Dick Enness did not tell you that?" Mrs. Ashby said, incredulously.

"No," Mary answered. "But he said enough to make his meaning clear. He means to get this claim, and without paying anything for it."

Mary twirled her bonnet nervously, and an expression of set determination gradually overspread her features. With a deep sigh Mrs. Ashby at last broke the silence.

"Well," she said, "if what you say is true, Mary, I don't see that there is any hope for us. It is hard to believe that Enness would take advantage of our helplessness and deprive us of our land when we have worked so hard to improve it. I would never have thought he could be so heartless."

"Neither would I," Mary replied. "It is a poor return for the way father helped Dick Enness when he came here and the way he nursed him and helped him in his crop last year when he was sick. He might, at the least, pay us for the work that's been done on the claim, rather than to see us turned out in the world with nothing. But, mother, he shall not have our home. I thought it all over as I came back across the prairie and I made up my mind that we wouldn't give it up."

Mrs. Ashby looked at her daughter in astonishment.

"Why, Mary," she said, "how can we help giving it up? We have no means of living here unless we can raise a crop."

"I know that, but we'll raise a crop," Mary replied, with quiet determination.

"But how can we?" Mrs. Ashby asked. "We haven't a dollar to hire help, and nobody is going to work for us without the money in hand."

"We won't ask anybody to work for us," Mary said. "We'll work for ourselves. We'll sow the land in wheat, just as father intended to do, and I'll break the ground and drill the grain myself."

"You?" the mother exclaimed, incredulously.

"Yes, I," Mary replied, firmly.

"But, child," Mrs. Ashby protested, "think what a task it would be, and you're only a woman."

"I have thought, mother, of all that, but we must not mind the work. I'd rather go through anything almost than to give up our home and leave here with nothing."

"But I can't think of you trying to manage a farm and doing a man's work," Mrs. Ashby objected.

"I can think of it much better than I can think of giving everything over to Dick Enness. I may not prove successful in my efforts to raise a crop, but I'll try. We have the team, the plows and the seed, and I'll make use of them."

Mrs. Ashby did not acquiesce readily in her daughter's plans, but she finally gave a reluctant consent, and Mary at once set to work to carry her plans into execution. Fortunately, she was used to hard outdoor work, having aided her father on the claim the two years they had lived in Kansas, and at the same time she had gained an idea of farm management that stood her in good stead.

At the end of three weeks she had forty acres of ground broken and ready to seed, and she felt that the worst part of her task was done.

"I'll go over to Dick Enness's," she said to her mother, "and get the drill and put the wheat in, and then I'll be through with the work for the present and have a little time for rest."

"Goodness knows you need rest," Mrs. Ashby replied, casting a look of love and sympathy on her daughter. "You're not strong enough for such hardships as you have gone through."

"Oh, I've not hurt myself in the least, mother," Mary replied, "and now that the hardest part of the work is done I shall get along all right. It will only take a little while to drill the wheat, and the work is not hard at all."

Mary harnessed the horses, and departed for Enness's to fetch the drill. Enness was at home, and when she came up to his yard-gate, he walked out to meet her.

"Good morning, Miss Ashby," he called. "Where are you starting so early?"

"I came to get the drill," she replied, "to put in our wheat. I have the ground ready, and I thought I'd use the drill while you are finishing your breaking, so that you could have it when you are ready to use it."

Dick Enness looked at Mary very hard for an instant, then cast his glance down while a flush overspread his face.

"I'm sorry to have to refuse you a favor," he said after awhile, "but I don't just see how I can let you have my drill, for I shall need it myself for several days."

"Your drill?" Mary exclaimed in surprise.

"Yes, ma'am," Enness replied, without looking up. "I supposed you knew it was my drill?"

"I didn't know it, Mr. Enness," Mary said, "and I can't understand how it comes to be your drill. I know that you and father bought it together and I know that he paid half of its cost."

"That's true enough, Miss Ashby. But about two months ago, just before your father's death, I bought his interest out and paid him for it, so now it is all mine."

Mary Ashby looked at Enness in wonder. That there was a word of truth in his claim she did not for one moment believe.

"Mr. Enness," she said at last, "it surprises me that you should claim that which is not yours. I never would have believed that you would be so base as to rob two helpless women, and especially the wife and daughter of a man who did so much for you as my father did."

"Miss Ashby," Enness replied with cool effrontery, "the drill is mine and you can't have it, and that is all there is to it."

He turned on his heel and walked away, and Mary, realizing her helplessness, returned homeward with a heavy heart.

She understood Enness's purpose and she knew that he had had more in view than the simple possession of the drill. His object was to thwart her attempt at raising a crop, so that the claim would come to him, and if he could deprive her of the use of the drill he argued that her efforts would be balked. But he had a different spirit to deal with than he had anticipated and one that was capable of surmounting the impediments he placed in her way.

She thought the matter over. Before she reached home she had a plan formulated. It was useless, she knew, to fight with Enness for her rights and it was equally as useless to seek elsewhere for a drill. Yet she was determined to put the wheat out and she adopted the only plan that was open to her for the accomplishment of that purpose. She would sow it broadcast and harrow it in.

And she did, though it took days of hard work. She persevered until the last foot of land was planted and harrowed. Enness, who was watching her movements and who chuckled to himself when she began, thinking she would soon give up the undertaking, changed his tune and felt somewhat crest-fallen when he saw the work completed.

"I had no idea she was half so gritty," he mused, "and it begins to look like I'll not have a very easy time getting her off that claim, but then the chances are that her wheat will fail after all."

But Enness was doomed to a disappointment in his hopes of a crop failure, for her wheat grew and prospered, and at last when it was ready to harvest it was the finest field of grain in that section.

Miss Ashby had a long spell of sickness immediately after getting her crop out, but she was well and strong again at harvest time, and though Enness did all he could against her by hiring her harvest hands away from her, she was able to get her grain secured without loss.

When the wheat was all threshed and marketed, Miss Ashby counted up the proceeds and found that she had $500 clear of all expenses. She was justly proud of her achievement, and it was with a feeling of pleasure that she looked back on those days of hard, weary toil, when she broke the soil and planted the seed that brought such a rich harvest.

Enness learned full soon what Miss Ashby had gained and the information came to him as a death blow to his hopes of securing the claim for nothing.

He decided that if he was to secure the claim he would have to buy it, and he felt that the sooner he bought it the better.

So one morning he walked over to Mrs. Ashby's sod cabin, and after passing a few commonplace remarks, said:

"Mrs. Ashby, I've concluded that I might afford to take your claim off your hands being as you're so anxious to sell. I don't really need it, but to accommodate you I'll buy it."

"What will you give?" Miss Ashby asked.

"Well, it ain't worth it," Enness replied, "but I'll allow you what you asked for it when you offered it to me shortly after Ashby's death."

"I told you then you could have it for $200, I believe?" Mary remarked.

"Yes, I think it was $200, and though that is too much, I'll give it just as a matter of accommodation, as I said before."

"Mr. Enness," Mary said, "if you want to buy this claim you can have it for $1000."

Enness started and stared in amazement.

"You surely don't mean that," he gasped.

"I do mean it. We won't take a cent less."

"But you offered it for $200."

"Yes, because we felt that we were compelled to sell it, but we don't feel so now."

"You will feel so," Enness said, as he arose and left the room. "You'll fail on your crop next year and then you'll be glad to get what I offer, but I won't promise to give it."

He was angry and disappointed. He had never dreamed that his offer would be refused, and he really wanted the land. He consoled himself, however, with the thought that Miss Ashby would yet come to his terms and be glad enough to accept his offer, and he determined to patiently bide his time.

"I'm very sorry to have to decline your generous aid, Mr. Enness," Miss Ashby interrupted, with a queer smile, "but the truth is we've contracted the claim to the railroad company for a town site for four times what you offer."

Without a word Enness left the house and walked back home. He was too completely beaten to say a word, but he thought a good deal. For the first time in his life it appeared to him that it was very easy for greed to overstep itself.

It was manifest to him, too, that even a woman could accomplish a great deal when she resolved to try, even though she labored under adverse circumstances.

A few weeks later Mrs. Ashly stood in the doorway of the little sod cabin and looked out across the Kansas prairie for the last time. Her face was no longer sad and wan, for she was very happy. She was at last going back to the old Eastern home for which she had so long yearned, and the old, dark days of hardships and privations were only a remembrance. Mary Ashby's indomitable will and energy had brought better and brighter times.—Chicago Saturday Record.

A Light That Has Shown 150 Years.

During the past 150 years a bright light has twinkled nightly in the window of a farmhouse at South Ferry, a mile below Saunderstown, on the west store of the bay. This light has been a welcome beacon to mariners who have run in under the lee of Beaver Tail to escape the fury of outside tempests. But now, for the first time in this long period, the farmhouse has been deserted, and stands solitary and dark. For the past few years the dwelling has been occupied by J. L. Eaton, the well-known pilot. He established a reporting station there, connected by a telephone, and vessels which put in for a harbor in time of storm were so reported. Pilot Eaton has moved up to Saunderstown, to get within speaking distance of a neighbor or two. He has taken his telephone along with him, however, and will still circulate among storm-bound craft which desire to be reported as formerly.—Providence (R. I.) Journal.

Boyhood of England's Premier.

It is said that Lord Rosebery as a boy displayed the traits which have made him great as a man. When only fourteen years of age he made an address to a volunteer company, which his father was entertaining, and showed so much eloquence and self-possession that a prominent gentleman present said that the youth was sure to become a prime minister some day. Such prophecies are seldom fulfilled, but Rosebery has lived to fulfill this.—New Orleans Picayune.

The Cincinnati road began its policy of retrenchment at Chattanooga, Tuesday, by dropping eighty men out of the 125 workmen, boiler-makers, machinists, car repairers, etc., employed in the railway shops.

A special from Denver, Col., says: The committee on arbitration met to renew the efforts towards a settlement of the miners' strike. The deputies are in camp at Midland and no move will be made until the arbitration is settled.

Craven & Craven, worsted spinners of Bradford, England, have failed, liabilities amounting to £200,000; assets unknown. Several other large failures are expected, as the trade of the town has been half ruined by the McKinley law and the delay in arranging a new American tariff.

One miner was killed and several wounded before dawn Saturday morning in an attack made by miners upon a train containing deputy sheriffs at Cripple Creek, Col. The miners fired from behind boulders and the deputies from the coach windows, giving battle in earnest.

A suit for one million dollars damages has been begun in the United States circuit court at Chicago by the French republic against the World's Columbian exposition. The litigation grows out of the French government's claim for damages to exhibits of French subjects injured during the manufacturers' building fire.

While leaving Green Mountain cemetery, at Quincy, Ill., Monday the horse driven by the wife of W. D. Kendall ran away. After running three blocks, Mrs. Kendall turned the horse into a fence. When the people ran to aid her they found her dead. Fright killed her. The horse was driven to town later and ran away again, the animal dropping dead this time.

The socialist labor party of Massachusetts held its fourth annual state convention at Springfield and put in nomination the following candidates: Governor, David Taylor, of Boston; lieutenant governor, Morris Ruther, of Holyoke; secretary of state, Joseph F. Maloney, of Lynn; treasurer, Emil Auerbach, of Adams; attorney general, Fred Nagler, of Springfield; auditor, Charles N. Wentworth, of Lynn.

Heavy storms were reported Sunday from many points along the south of England coast. Much wreckage has gone ashore at Broad Stairs and Ilfracombe. The camp of the East Kent militia regiment at Shorn Cliffs has been flooded. The tents were blown away and the bedding and clothing were drifting about in some eighteen inches of water. The grain crops and fruits further inland have been greatly damaged.

A great drought in the far western part of Nebraska is reported. The farmers have been unable to raise a crop or obtain water for stock. As a consequence hundreds of farms in Lincoln and adjoining counties are being deserted by their tenants, who are moving eastward in wagons. No rain has fallen in weeks, and all vegetation is parched. Other portions of the state fare very much better, but in many places the small grain is a failure.

A party of rainmakers from some point in the north have been operating in the usually arid region about 100 miles west of San Antonio, Texas, near Brackett, for the past two weeks, and have thoroughly convinced the people of that section that their scheme is a grand success. Heavy rains have fallen in that immediate locality during the past few days, the total fall having been greater than for several years. The process consists of firing some kind of chemicals into the air.

There is a storm gathering about the head of General Kelly, of the California industrial army. Three members of the army will make charges before United States Commissioner Crawford, at St Louis, against their commander. When the command left Des Moines it included a glee club of eleven men who sailed in a boat purchased by their own money. They say that the money earned by their singing was turned over to Kelly, but that Kelly wanted to get rid of them because they knew of his alleged irregular use of money contributed by the public.

A Topeka, Kan., dispatch says: Ex-Adjutant General Artz, at the head of his commonwealers, marched from their armory Tuesday afternoon to the office of commissioner of elections, and each of the fifty men were registered, all announcing their intention of returning from Washington in time to vote at the November election. Governor Lewelling addressed the company. He said that while he did not entirely approve of the methods adopted by the wealers to accomplish the desired end, that they had a perfect right to travel over the country at will, and that no one had any right to interfere with them.

An appeal has been made by the Baroness Rouques, the mother of Mrs. Maybrick, to the press of England and America, asking their aid in behalf of her daughter, now serving a life sentence in the working prison for the murder of her husband. The appeal is accompanied by a pamphlet containing the latest evidence gathered in favor of the prisoner. The baroness attributes the refusal of the home office to reopen the case of her daughter to the fact that the home office authorities are in possession of adverse evidence which they obtained secretly. She appeals for the assistance of the press as an American and as a mother.

TO DEAD HEROES.

A BEAUTIFUL MONUMENT IS UNVEILED AT RICHMOND.

The City Crowded and Thousands Witness the Imposing Event.

The chief feature of memorial day at Richmond, Va., was the unveiling exercises of the Confederate private soldiers monument. The exercises began with a cavalry reunion. Fitz Lee, Wade Hampton, Governor O'Farrell, the Rev. J. Williams Jones and General Rosser made speeches. The latter was bitter in his arraignment of the United States pension system. The largest crowd was in the city since the unveiling of the Lee monument. The vast procession began to move shortly after 3 o'clock. A marked feature of the parade was the children's division. Many hundred were in line, each decked with bunting sashes and carrying flags, a unique sight, hundreds of little ones from five years up and not a grown person allowed in the ranks.

The Maryland delegation of veterans, headed by General Bradley T. Johnson, was large and imposing. That from Washington city was also conspicuous in the parade. A delegation from Charleston carried branches of palmetto in their hands. North Carolina was represented by Adjutant General Cameron, and several companies of state guards and South Carolina by several companies of state troops. The Virginia volunteers made a remarkably fine showing.

Business was almost entirely suspended during the day, the banks, exchanges and state and municipal offices being closed. Almost without exception, the houses on the line of march were profusely decorated, mainly with the confederate and Virginia colors, so that the parade was through lines of bunting. "Old Glory" was by no means absent, however, being often intertwined with the confederate colors which were flying from almost every flag staff.

At the monument the programme was carried out as arranged. Mr. D. C. Richardson, president of the monument association, filled the post of chairman with ability and modesty; there was a prayer by Rev. Dr. Hoge. Mr. A. C. Gordon read his poem written for the occasion and the Rev. Mr. Cave, of St. Louis, then made the address of the day. On the conclusion of the address the veil was withdrawn by a little boy and a little girl, representing respectively the army and the navy, and there was a salute by artillery and infantry, lasting some time and waking the echoes of the James as of yore.

TROOPS CALLED FOR.

The Sheriff of Jefferson County, Alabama, Needs Them.

A Montgomery, Ala., special says: The sheriff of Jefferson county writes the governor that it is impossible for him to preserve the peace with his deputies and citizens without serious loss of life and perhaps of property. In consequence of the request, and other independent information, Governor Jones, as a matter of precaution, has ordered the Second regiment of Alabama troops into camp of instruction at Birmingham, as they go into camp about this time every year at some point in the state. When their terms expire they will be replaced by another regiment. He proposes to keep the peace and to have force enough to prevent and punish armed bands roaming around and overawing peaceable citizens who may desire to engage in their regular occupation.

WILL FOOT IT.

The Arkansas Populist Delegates will March Across Country.

The Arkansas populist state central committee has decided that delegates to the state convention, which convenes at Little Rock on July 19, shall march overland instead of coming by railroads. Delegations will start on July 9 from various counties in the interior of the state and proceed across the country in wagons, on horseback and on foot directing their course toward Little Rock. At different places along the route the "army" will be swelled by delegations from adjacent counties, and at several towns stops will be made and populistic principles will be proclaimed by prominent speakers.

Servian Cabinet Goes Under.

A cable dispatch from Sofia says: The resignation of M. Stambuloff's ministry was due entirely to personal friction between the several members. M. Giekoff has declined to undertake the reconstruction of the cabinet and has advised Prince Ferdinand to summon some representative of the opposition for that purpose. The change in ministry will not affect the foreign relations of the country.

Dependent Upon Crossties.

The Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago Railroad Company has large gangs of men at work pulling up old railroad ties, which are now being used for fuel to run both freight and passenger engines. The pittsburg and Western railroad is out of coal and unable to confiscate another bushel because of the opposition developed among extensive coal speculators.

PUEBLO FLOODED.

THE ARKANSAS AND FOUNTAIN RIVERS OUT OF THEIR BANKS.

Water Running Six Feet Deep in the Main Streets.

Special dispatches from Pueblo, Col., state that the storm which has been raging in that vicinity for the past two days broke in all its fury Wednesday afternoon, causing the Arkansas and Fountain rivers, whose junction is in the city, to burst over their levees and flood the whole lower portion of the town. The rise was so rapid that the fire whistle was blown to call out the police and fire department, also the volunteers, to assist in rescuing some 300 families, who were hemmed in the "grove" or bottoms. The work proceeded as rapidly as possible. The men in their work were greatly hampered by the rising water. A second alarm was sounded calling the rescuers from the bottoms. The levees had broken above the city and there was great danger of the people being drowned. High wagons and boats were used in getting the unfortunates to the high ground. When the second alarm was sounded the work of saving the property was abandoned.

ABOVE SECOND-STORY WINDOWS.

Another cloudburst occurred at midnight in the residence portion of town and did great damage on Main street. The water is two feet deep in the Pueblo Journal office. The city is in darkness, the water works flooded and fires out. The water is six feet deep on Court street.

THE LATEST.

Latest advices up to time of going to press state that the greatest alarm is felt for the safety of the people. In some places the water is above second story windows. The houses are mostly of wood and can only stand against the present mad rush of waters for a few minutes. The water is washing down the principal streets at the rate of eighteen or twenty miles an hour.

Several serious accidents have occurred to men and women while trying to wade through the streets. The grand opera house stage is six inches under water. The First National bank, all the large dry goods, clothing and other stores on main street are five feet under water. The Central block, an elegant building five stores high, is flooded to within two feet of the ceiling of the first floor. The Journal building is under water and the printers fled to save their lives. It is almost certain that a number of people have been drowned.

A COACH TURNS OVER

And Nearly Every Passenger Receives Injuries.

There was a fearful accident on the Columbus, Ga., extension Wednesday morning. The rear coach of an excursion train left the track on a grade just after Holt's station was passed. The excursionists were mostly negroes on their way to the Memorial Day celebration at Andersonville, but the rear coach was reserved for whites and the occupants of this coach were the victims of the accident. The train was on an embankment and was running at the rate of twenty miles an hour when the accident occurred. The derailed coach with its human freight turned over three times and nearly every one in it was more or less hurt. None in it were killed outright. A spreading rail caused the accident.

A MEETING IN BIRMINGHAM

To Discuss the Situation at the Coal Mines.

An immense throng of all shades and positions in life gathered at the Winnie Davis wigwam at Birmingham, Ala., Saturday to discuss the present situation between the mine operators and the miners.

Resolutions were adopted denouncing the check system and other evils now existing, and a committee was appointed to try and effect a settlement of the strike; also a committee to wait on the railroad employes and ask them to refuse to haul coal cut by scabs or convicts. Good order prevailed and everything passed off harmoniously.

ON THE WAR PATH.

Armed Miners Put Deputy Sheriffs to Flight.

Two hundred and fifty striking miners marched from Washington, Ind., to Littles, seven miles north of that place Wednesday morning, armed with 100 Winchester rifles, and had one wagon load of ammunition, provisions sufficient to last them thirty days and camped at the mine. In the afternoon, in a battle between the striking miners and those at work in the Littles mine, a number were wounded, two fatally. Six deputy sheriffs were disarmed and put to flight. Serious trouble is feared. A company of state militia is in readiness at Evansville to start at call to the mining regions.

Reinforcements for Coxey.

A Washington dispatch says: Coxey's army reinforced by 150 men under "General" Galvin (who arrived at Coxey camp Tuesday) marched into town memorial day and decorated the peace monument on Pennsylvania avenue at the western end of the capital grounds with evergreens and wild flowers and then marched back to camp.

More Rain at Johnstown.

A special from Johnstown, Pa., says: The renewal of the heavy downpour of rain again alarmed the inhabitants of the seemingly ill-fated Conemaugh valley. The rain had not been sufficient, however, to cause the rivers to get wild again. No damage was done and it is again thought that the danger is passed.

COMMONWEALERS CONVICTED

And Will Serve Time in Jail for Seizing a Train.

Leaders of the Seattle contingent of the commonweal army were up before the United States court at Helena, Mont., Tuesday to answer the charge of contempt in seizing a train on the Northern Pacific railroad at the western line of the state, May 18th. J. W. Kelly, the leader, who is a brother of the Kelly whose army is now in St. Louis, was sentenced to the county jail for six months. John Ross, the engineer who had served two terms in the penitentiary and was released in January, was also given six months. William Blair, Stewart Lackey and Tom Davidson were each sentenced to thirty days in jail.

MONGOLIANS FOR MEXICO.

Two Hundred Thousand to be Brought Over and Located.

A distinguished Chinaman, named Kim Wing, has reached Mobile, Ala., en route from his home in Merida, Mexico, to Hong Kong, China, where he goes to get 200,000 of his countrymen to settle in Mexico. Wing is a wealthy merchant of Merida, and is a highly educated man. It has been with great difficulty that he has persuaded the Mexican government to permit him to bring so large a number of his countrymen over at one time. They are to be employed on coffee and hemp plantations, which are to be operated by Wing.

A FATAL WRECK

In Which Eight are Killed and Fifteen or Twenty Injured.

An accident resulting in the loss of eight lives and the injury of fifteen to twenty persons, more or less seriously, occurred at Marshfield, Wis. Train No. 26, on the Wisconsin Central railway went through an open switch and was completely wrecked. The cars afterward took fire and were consumed. Four persons were taken from the wreck dead and four others are missing, supposed to have been caught in the mass of broken timbers and crushed. Among the dead are the engineer, fireman and one of the Tweedy brothers.

Belva Lockwood Barred.

The supreme court of the United States has rendered its decision upon the application of Mrs. Belva A. Lockwood for a rule against the Virginia court of appeals to show cause why they should not admit her to practice before that tribunal. Chief Justice Fuller announced that Mrs. Lockwood's application must be denied, upon the ground that it was competent for the Virginia court of appeals to finally determine upon the eligibility of persons to practice before it.

"Acting Congressman."

A new profession has been established in Washington. It is the profession of "acting congressman," and a large number of men are following it with profit to themselves and, apparently, satisfaction to their employers. Whenever the house relaxes its rules so that members are not kept on hand by fear of arrest there is an exodus of representatives to their homes. These gentlemen can only be called back to the city by the mandate of the sergeant-at-arms, and they come complaining of the fate that makes them attend to their business. In their absence, however, their business is not altogether neglected. That is where the "acting representative" comes in. While the congressman is at home looking after his personal interests his representative in the form of a secretary stays in Washington and looks after everything the member cares for, answers letters and in all ways is a representative pro tempore, except that he cannot vote or attend the meetings of committees. There are fully fifty men in congress who practically delegate their duties to a secretary, and who have seldom been seen at a committee meeting since the present congress met. They appear to consider that they should not be called upon to do any work except where their personal interests or the interests of their districts demand it. They draw their salaries, however, with the same regularity as those who attend congress and occupy their time daily with the consideration of public affairs.—[Washington News.

The Wonderful Temples of Balbec.

These temples in Syria, about which so much has been said and heard; stand upon an artificial platform rising about thirty feet above the level of the surrounding plain. In some respects the foundation is like that of Solomon's Temple. This fact has led some to ascribe the work to David. Even to this day the ruins are grand in their immensity, like those of the Coliseum at Rome. At one place in the foundation, at the height of about twenty feet, there are three immense stones, each measuring sixty-three feet long, fifteen feet wide and thirteen feet thick. How these stones were quarried, transported and raised into place is in the category of the lost arts. On top of this platform of masonry stand the Temples of Balbec (three of them)—the Temple of the Sun, the Temple of Jupiter, and the Great Circular Temple. The first was 290 feet long, 160 feet wide, and was surrounded by Corinthian columns seventy-five feet high and seven feet three inches each in diameter at the base. The capstones were each fifteen feet square, and reached from one column to the other. Six of these columns are still standing. The temple of Jupiter is almost perfect, even in its ruins. It is a most magnificent and imposing structure, its outside dimensions being 230x130 feet.

Hurrah for OATES!

The issue before the voters of Alabama for settlement, is one of color and complexion, and not one of Finance.

The 1st of August next will sound the doom of Reuben F. Kolb so loudly that its reverberations will be music to the ears of the countless millions yet to come.

The Alliance Herald nor Kolb have been able to deny that Kolb did his best to trade white votes for Republican money, but at length up rises the Herald and says we were not promised $50,000, but only $5,000. Grant that the sum to begin with was only $5,000 the principle is in no wise changed, and it only puts Kolb and Co. into a deeper hole. Were over Southern white men so grossly insulted? A demagogue offering to trade their votes for $5,000.

Great efforts are being made by Populists and Republican news papers to show that Col. W. C. Oates is opposed to the education of the sons and daughters of the farmers. Nothing is wider from the facts. Here is where he stands. He believes in the public school system. He favors doing all he can possible to keep up good common schools, yet he opposes taxing all the people to support great universities within whose walls rarely any, save the sons of the wealthy, ever go. He also holds that when a boy or girl has been given a common education that if they are any account that they can thenceforth paddle their own canoe. And what common sense farmer will not say "them's my sentiments, too."

On our exchange table is a paper published in Atlanta, Georgia, called The Advocate. It is a Congregational paper, but is evidently edited by a Southern man. The Congregationalists of the north are denouncing the Advocate because it does not believe in mixing negroes and whites in the same church, and is manly enough to oppose those northern papers who are always villifying the Southern people. To show that missionaries and preachers under the authority of this church are instructed to mix the colors the Advocate publishes the following:

"The following is the agreement under which the Home Missionary Society and the American Missionary Association are working in the South, and says Dr. Ward, this is as official as anything can be: Neither society will establish in any locality a church that will not admit to membership colored persons suitably qualified; nor will it sustain any church that will not fellowship the neighboring Congregational conference or association. The two executive committees uniting in this action, take this opportunity to express unitedly their earnest desire to perpetuate the fraternal relations which have hitherto existed between them and between the societies which they represent, and they hope and expect that all who are in the employ of either society in the missionary field or elsewhere will cordially co-operate with them in their efforts to secure this end."

Kolb's whining cry has been "Fraud! Fraud! Fraud!" notwithstanding, he sneaks to Washington and tenders a $50,000 personal-campaign-fund from Republicans. "Ah, consistency, thou art a jewel."

THE RACE HAS TOO MUCH AT STAKE.

New Orleans, May 28.—The Picayune's Jackson, Miss., correspondent asserts the text of a letter from Senator E. C. Walthall to the editor of the Jackson-Clarion Ledger in reply to a request that he give his views upon current issues of the day. Senator Walthall says:

"I am unable to appreciate the distinction which is supposed to exist between administration and anti-administration Democrats in Mississippi; nor do I believe there is any occasion for it, or any true basis upon which it can be defined. There is no principle to justify it, and its manifest expediency should forbid the drawing of such a line. I am sure there is no sentiment in the body of the party favoring any such needless and hurtful division in this State. Mississippi Democrats know the value of party unity and depreciate all illiberality and intolerance which tends to breed dissensions. In former years they had some bitter experience, when their party was out of power, and they will not soon forget. They subordinate individual aspirations and interests to the general good which they believe can be best subserved by the continued ascendency of the Democratic party. If they do not enjoy all the benefits expected from the Democratic rule they know they are escaping many wrongs and burdens which they endured under Republican rule. Those who agree with Mr. Cleveland in his financial views, equally with those who differ from him, have too much staked upon Democratic supremacy to subject their party's organization or integrity to any unnecessary strain on account of any matter of detail involved in the so-called silver question. They are generally bi-metalist, and the signs of the times encouraged most of them to hope that the demands for silver coinage on reasonable terms cannot much longer be resisted, but they consider the unity and success of their own party of paramount importance to the triumph of any particular views as to the terms on which silver coinage is to be resumed, for they do not believe it will be resumed at all if the Republicans are restored to power.

They re-elected Mr. Lamar to the Senate, unanimously after he had voted against a silver bill, in violation of instructions, and some of his warmest supporters, myself among them, were the open advocates of free coinage of silver. We found no more reason for dividing our party on such an issue than we do now. The friends of silver in Mississippi honored and trusted their Senator, despite the single difference then existing between him and them. They stood by him because they had faith in him, and the same men for a like reason are standing by Mr. Cleveland now, between whom and themselves there is much the same difference now as there was at one time between them and Mr. Lamar. The difference was and is important, but Democratic unity is vital now, as then.

"I believe that a large majority of the Democrats in Mississippi are in favor of the free coinage of silver at the present ratio; but not one of them whose views have been given to the public, so far as I am informed, has authorized anybody to class him as an anti-administration Democrat. It is well known, if I may refer to my own position in this connection, that I am a free silver man, open and decided, but known as well that I am a party man and have always urged unity as a party duty, though it may involve concessions.

"I was a loyal supporter of the President in the Senate on all except financial propositions, and like other silver men in that body was willing when the purchase of the Sherman law was under discussion, to concede much for party harmony. In that debate, after stating my individual proposition, I made the following declaration:

"Still, sir, as a Democrat, believing the general good can best be subserved by a united Democracy, I am ready, as I have before declared, to make reasonable concessions and meet the single-standard advocates, or others from whom I differ in my party, at any point of agreement where a bimetalic policy can be established according to the pledges we have given."

"I introduce this extract here as a public utterance in harmony with what I have said, before and since, believing the willingness it expresses to make concessions for the sake of party unity represents the feeling of a majority of the people whose supposed opinions I am quite confident.

"I do not believe that the people will agree that those public men who discussed without them concealment, as opponents of the administration simply because, while standing by the President generally on other subjects, they did as he did on the silver question—stood by their convictions and what they believed to be the best interest of the people. If such a test of orthodoxy is to be applied, no man from Mississippi now serving in either house of Congress, or who has done so since Mr. Cleveland's first term began, can meet its exactions, if, indeed, any can who seek to do so now. The fact that the entire Mississippi delegation differ from Mr. Cleveland on the Silver questions is shown by their votes in favor of the Seinorage bill, emphasized by the action in the House on the proposition to pass that bill over the President's vato, which was supported by every member of the delegation including one who had previously voted against the rest of a kindred question.

"If such a test were to be applied in Southern States, one effect will be to strip such distinguished Democrats as Senators Mills, Gordon and Ransom, and Mr. Speaker Crisp, Mr. Patterson, of Tennessee, Mr. Oates of Alabama, and others in the House of much their prestige as Administration Democrats as they arrayed themselves against the President in their votes for the Seinorage bill, and the above named members of the House deliberately united with the Mississippi delegation and other Southern Democrats in the effect to override the President's veto of that bill.

"I do not believe that the Democrats of Mississippi will approve such a test as that referred to, and in this they are not singular. The fact that Mr. Oates, is called an administration Democrat, and Senator Morgan known to be an extreme silver man, have been both recently endorsed by the Democrats of Alabama, shows that Democrats in Alabama look upon this subject much as I think they do; and when Mr. Blanchard, a pronounced free silver man is elected, a Senator in Louisiana by the same Legislature that elected Mr. Caffery, who stands squarely by the President on financial questions, we have another proof that Southern Democrats look with no favor on the proposition to weaken their party by dividing on financial issues."

STATE CONVENTION.

The Democrats of Alabama in Convention assembled, reaffirm the principles of the Democratic party as declared in its platform adopted in Chicago in 1892, and congratulates the country upon the success of those principles in the triumphant election of Grover Cleveland, who has by his generous treatment of our people, shown that he is the President of the whole country, knowing no North, no South, no East no West. We recognize the wisdom and patriotism of the President, and believe in his fealty to the principles of party, and endorse his administration of the Federal Government; while some of us differ with him in matters of policy, we are agreed that he is actuated by motives of patriotism and by an unselfish devotion to the greatest good to the whole people.

While there are differences of opinion among us in matters of detail we believe in free coinage of silver when it can be done consistently with the maintenance of a sound and safe currency.

We earnestly urge upon our Senators and Representatives in congress the speedy reform of the tariff and the prompt repeal of the ten per cent tax on the issue of State banks.

We heartily endorse the present administration of the State Government, headed by Thos. G. Jones who has so wisely discharged his great trust, and we commend him for his impartial and fearless execution of the laws.

We pledge to the people of Alabama a continuance of the good government of our State affairs inaugurated by the election of Geo. S. Houston in 1874.

The election law enated at the last session of our General Assembly is in accordance with the principles upon which are based the laws regulating elections in a large majority of the States of the Union enacted without regard to party, and was intended at the ballot box to obtain a full and fair expression of the will, and after giving it a trial, should it fail to accomplish [illegible] We pledge our party to the maintenance of a system of free public schools and to increase the appropriations for that purpose whenever the financial condition of the State will permit.

We pledge our party to continue its efforts to remove all the evils of the present convict system and to pass all the appropriate legislation to prevent its working injustice to any class of our people.

We extended a cordial invitation to all voters of Alabama who believe in the principles of Democracy and are in favor of the maintenance of a good government, to unite with us in the election of the ticket nominated by this convention.

CURES
CANCER

Keyesville, Fla. April 12th, 1894.
Messrs. Dubois and Webb, Louisville, Ky.—Dear Sirs: "About eleven months ago I bought from you an Electropoise for the purpose of treating cancer. I had one of about ten years' standing, and it had reached a stage where it was making rapid progress, being about the size of a silver dollar. I knew that I had to do something or my time was about up, and you being the only party that I corresponded with that would give me any assurance of a cure, got my patronage. I am now happy to inform you that the cancer is no more, the Electropoise arrested the progress of the cancer perceptibly in about thirty-six to forty-eight hours and gradually and slowly grew less until now there is a place about the size of a pin head that is not quite healed but gradually closing up. You can use this or any part of it as a testimonial if you wish. Very truly yours M. M. Lillibridge."

D. A. Bryant, Hackneyville:—"I was badly crippled with rheumatism, also had a bad kidney trouble, I was helpless and could do no work. The Electropoise cured me and enabled me to work regularly.

Rev. W. C. Hearn, Talledega.—"For producing calm refreshing sleep and curing chronic rheumatism the Electropoise can not be equaled.

Joseph Williams, Stevenson—"I can walk all over town and even run, whereas a few weeks ago I was a helpless cripple, the electropoise did it."

Mrs. W. P. Nelson, Sumnfield—"My recovery was wonderful. I have also tried the electropoise on several of my neighbors, for various ailments, nausea, kidney trouble of the worst form, all with the most gratifying results."

What is
CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays Feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
DR. G. C. OSGOOD,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE,
Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

LOCAL BREVITIES.

June 1st—cold day.

Mrs. John Garner visited Montgomery Tuesday.

Prof. R. E. R. Hick's was in Clanton last Saturday.

The L. & N. sidetrack has been repaired at this place.

Rev. J. G. Lowrey filled his appointment in Verbena Sunday.

Mr. Ed. Boyd and family, of Birmingham, visited Clanton Tuesday.

Several car loads of water melons pass through Clanton June 1st.

Miss Eulah Rasberry spent Saturday and Sunday at her home in Lily, Ala.

Mr. Thos. A. Curry visited Montgomery last Wednesday on business.

We are glad to learn that Mr. W. H. Phillips, who has been quite sick is now fast improving.

The friends of Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Fink are sorry to learn that they leave next week for Louisville.

The young people who attended the ceciable at Mr. J. P. Vandervcer's last Friday night highly enjoyed the occasion.

Messrs. W. E. and M. H. Bradley, Miss Lucy Webster, of LaPine, Ala., and Geo. Lamar, of Snowdon, attended the closing exercises of the University.

A party of young people, of Clanton, attended the picnic given at Mulberry last Saturday and returned to the city much elated over the pleasure of the day.

At the residence of Mrs. Dr. Matthews, a large crowd assembled last Monday night for the purpose of witnessing the musicale given by her music class. The scholars acquitted themselves with credit and praise, and the occasion was a source of pleasure to those present.

Our readers will note the change in the card of the Acme Hotel. Messrs. Louis Gelders & Co., have rented the hotel at Obrien's Opera House and are prepared to give their customers even better accommodations than in the past. The New Acme is about one block from the Union Depot.

The VIEW is the recipient of tickets presented by Miss Gamma Middleton, of this city, to a concert given June 1st and 4th by the pupils of the National Conservatory of Music, Nashville, Tenn., at which college she has graduated; and is expected home this week, to the joy of admiring friends.

The day for the Sunday School picnic dawned bright and beautiful for such out-door-sport, and a very good crowd of Sunday School scholars, installed in the wagons furnished for the occasion, left for their 5-mile drive to Nim's mill, the appointed place for the picnic. The entire crowd, reported on their return, a gay time, and that little folks especially enjoyed themselves.

The Baptist Church is soon to have $135.00 organ. The old one has been exchanged in part payment, a good sum subscribed and the remaining amount will be forthcoming. All the money gotten up is independent of any fund on hand for the completion of the church, and to the success of the undertaking, is due the interest and zeal of Mr. Curry in the movement.

The following are the officers elected for the ensuing year by the Clanton Lodge on last Saturday night, and who will be installed on June 28th:

J. M. Staufield, W. M., B. H. Chestnutt, Sr. Warden; W. D. Sartor, Jr. Warden; W. H. Wright, Sr. Deacon, C. J. Stewart, Jr. Deacon, W. A. Middleton, Treasury; Jno. W. Staufield, Secretary; J. A. Miller, Tyler.

The circus men who attempted to give their show here last Thursday found to their sad surprise, that tooting horns and tinkling cymbals were not much of a go in this city. After two vain attempts to drum a crowd, the manager announced that "there would be no show" and his canvass was soon furled and returned to his car. Several negroes who worked three hours for the institution sneaked off with wares-gone appearances as if they had failed to get a complimentary ticket cashed.

Bad breezes defeated last Saturday by the combination also of Casper's rival Verbena, but all feathers plucked from their plumage have grown out again and they expect to "get in the game" soon with Verbena.

Died, near Mulberry May 31st, Mr. D. A. White. Mr. White has been ill for several months and his death was not a surprise. He was a good man, and was a member of the Mulberry Baptist Church, and of the Clanton Lodge of this place, and was buried with Masonic honors by the masons. He was at one time tax-collector for the county: and his death is a great loss.

News reached here this week, that Kendricks, who two years ago was arrested as Verbena by Mr. F. A. Gulledge, for burglary, and who with his pal, Marshall, were tried here and sentenced for twenty years in the penitentiary, succeeded in making his escape from the convict farm, near Spigners, Sunday morning. In an attempt made last year by Hendricks and Marshall at Pratt Mines to escape, the latter was shot and killed by a guard and Hendricks was re-captured. He is a desperate character and is wanted also in Tennessee and Mississippi; has had some close calls, one which deprived him of an arm.

The writer did not hear the testimony in the case of the State vs. Alex Shelton, consequently could not sign a petition to have his sentence commuted from death to life imprisonment. The attorneys of the condemned man are doing their duty in seeking to do what they can for their client, yet those who heard the testimony of Mr. Martin, to whom Shelton confessed, will be slow to interfere with the finding of the jury. The gist of the testimony as told us by several parties who heard the evidence was that the deputy sheriff went to Shelton and talked to him about working the road and then said "consider yourself under arrest," Shelton at once retreated about ten steps to his gun and as he went to pick it up Harris began firing, whereupon the negro shot and killed him. The jury considered the evidence sufficient to justify their verdict and unless reasons which we have not heard of are presented we could not ask the Governor to commute the sentence. It is an awful thing to take human life, even according to law, yet such protection must be given to our officers when in the discharge of their duties so that evil doers will be deterred from taking their lives, gambling on the chances of escaping altogether or coming off with simply a life sentence. Lynch law has already too much favor in our land, and our citizens though commended in going to any length to save an innocent man, must be sure than they do not let false sympathy cause them to aid in shielding the guilty and thus give fresh excuse for mob violence.

Said a gentleman the other day, on the subject of "the stringency of the times," who has traveled over a large portion of the State: "Yes, times are hard, but in one sense of the word, it is has been a blessing to our country. People have been made to stop and consider, to economize, and the farmer to plan, study and experiment: now he conducts his farm on a new scale and different mode—paying as he goes—diversifying his crops. More land is being put under cultivation, fields that have grown pine saplings since the war are being cleared, fences built, old ones repaired, homes improved, and with a zeal and spirit that hasn't been manifested in many a day. He tells you that he is working harder than ever before, gets along on less, that work agrees with him and he intends getting out of debt. Another thing, politics are not bothering him much, and his time and attention is earnestly devoted to his farm."

The following is from a reliable citizen of Coopers, which tells what some of our farmers have been doing:

ED. VIEW:—I had occasion last week to see the farmers east and west of Coopers for 12 miles in each direction, and was astonished to see the vast amount of maiden land put in cultivation and the repaired fences, the acres the farmers have under cultivation; while the crops are small, I never saw them in such excellent condition. With as much industry and economy practiced as has been displayed during the past six months for the space of two years to come with average crops and reasonable prices we will no longer hear the cry of 'hard times' and the 'scarcity of money'" P. C. Dennis.

Hurrah for Oates!

The issue before the voters of Alabama for settlement, is one of color and complexion, and not one of Finance.

The 1st of August next will sound the doom of Reuben F. Kolb so loudly that its reverberations will be music to the ears of the countless millions yet to come.

The Alliance Herald nor Kolb have been able to deny that Kolb did his best to trade white votes for Republican money, but at length up rises the Herald and says we were not promised $50,000, but only $5,000. Grant that the sum to begin with was only $5,000 the principle is in no wise changed, and it only puts Kolb and Co. into a deeper hole. Were ever Southern white men so grossly insulted? A demagogue offering to trade their votes for $5,000.

Great efforts are being made by Populists and Republican news papers to show that Col. W. C. Oates is opposed to the education of the sons and daughters of the farmers. Nothing is wider from the facts. Here is where he stands. He believes in the public school system. He favors doing all he can possible to keep up good common schools, yet he opposes taxing all the people to support great universities within whose walls rarely any, save the sons of the wealthy, ever go. He also holds that when a boy or girl has been given a common education that if they are any account that they can thenceforth paddle their own canoe. And what common sense farmer will not say "them's my sentiments, too."

On our exchange table is a paper published in Atlanta, Georgia, called The Advocate. It is a Congregational paper, but is evidently edited by a Southern man. The Congregationalists of the north are denouncing the Advocate because it does not believe in mixing negroes and whites in the same church, and is manly enough to oppose those northern papers who are always villifying the Southern people. To show that missionaries and preachers under the authority of this church are instructed to mix the colors the Advocate publishes the following:

"The following is the agreement under which the Home Missionary Society and the American Missionary Association are working in the South, and says Dr. Ward, this is as official as anything can be. Neither society will establish in any locality a church that will not admit to membership colored persons suitably qualified; nor will it sustain any church that will not fellowship the neighboring Congregational conference or association. The two executive committees uniting in this action, take this opportunity to express unitedly their earnest desire to perpetuate the fraternal relations which have hitherto existed between them and between the societies which they represent, and they hope and expect that all who are in the employ of either society in the missionary field or elsewhere will cordially co-operate with them in their efforts to secure this end."

Kolb's whining cry has been "Fraud! Fraud! Fraud!" notwithstanding, he sneaks to Washington and tosses a $50,000 personal-campaign-fund from Republicans. "Ah, consistency, thou art a jewel."

THE SOUTH HAS TOO MUCH AT STAKE.

New Orleans, May 29.—The Picayune's Jackson, Miss., correspondent sends the text of a letter from Senator E. C. Walthall to the editor of the Jackson-Clarion Ledger in reply to a request that he give his views upon current issues of the day. Senator Walthall says:

"I am unable to appreciate the distinction which is supposed to exist between administration and anti-administration Democrats in Mississippi; nor do I believe there is any occasion for it, or any true basis upon which it can be defined. There is no principle to justify it, and its manifest expediency should forbid the drawing of such a line. I am sure there is no sentiment in the body of the party favoring any such needless and hurtful division in this State. Mississippi Democrats know the value of party unity and depreciate all illiberality and intolerance which tends to breed dissensions. In former years they had some bitter experience, when their party was out of power, and they will not soon forget. They subordinate individual aspirations and interests to the general good which they believe can be best subserved by the continued ascendency of the Democratic party. If they do not enjoy all the benefits expected from the Democratic rule they know they are escaping many wrongs and burdens which they endured under Republican rule. Those who agree with Mr. Cleveland in his financial views, equally with those who differ from him, have too much staked upon Democratic supremacy to subject their party's organization or integrity to any unnecessary strain on account of any matter of detail involved in the so-called silver question. They are generally bi-metalist, and the signs of the times encouraged most of them to hope that the demands for silver coinage on reasonable terms cannot much longer be resisted, but they consider the unity and success of their own party of paramount importance to the triumph of any particular views as to the terms on which silver coinage is to be resumed, for they do not believe it will be resumed at all if the Republicans are restored to power.

They re-elected Mr. Lamar to the Senate, unanimously after he had voted against a silver bill, in violation of instructions, and some of his warmest supporters, myself among them, were the open advocates of free coinage of silver. We found no more reason for dividing our party on such an issue than we do now. The friends of silver in Mississippi honored and trusted their Senator, despite the single difference then existing between him and them. They stood by him because they had faith in him, and the same men for a like reason are standing by Mr. Cleveland now, between whom and themselves there is much the same difference now as there was at one time between them and Mr. Lamar. The difference was and is important, but Democratic unity is vital now, as then.

"I believe that a large majority of the Democrats in Mississippi are in favor of the free coinage of silver at the present ratio; but not one of them whose views have been given to the public, so far as I am informed, has authorized anybody to class him as an anti-administration Democrat. It is well known, if I may refer to my own position in this connection, that I am a free silver man, open and decided, but known as well that I am a party man and have always urged unity as a party duty, though it may involv concessions.

"I was a loyal supporter of the President in the Senate on all except financial propositions, and like other silver men in that body was willing when the purchase of of the Sherman law was under discussion, to concede much for party harmony. In that debate, after stating my individual proposition, I made the following declaration:

"Still, sir, as a Democrat, believing the general good can best be subserved by a united Democracy, I am ready, as I have before declared, to make reasonable concessions and meet the single-standard advocates, or others from whom I differ in my party, at any point of agreement where a bimetalic policy can be established according to the pledges we have given."

"I introduce this extract here as a public utterance in harmony with what I have said, before and since, believing the willingness it expresses to make concessions for the sake of party unity represents the feeling of a majority of the people whose supposed opinions I am now discussing.

"I do not believe that the people will agree that their public men should be classed without their consent, as opponents of the administration simply because, while standing by the President generally on other subjects, they did as he did on the silver question—stood by their convictions and what they believed to be the best interest of the people. If such a test of orthodoxy is to be applied, no man from Mississippi now serving in either house of Congress, or who has done so since Mr. Cleveland's first term began, can meet its exactions, if, indeed, any can who seek to do so now. The fact that the entire Mississippi delegation differ from Mr. Cleveland on the Silver questions, is shown by their votes in favor of the Seinorage bill, emphasized by the action in the House on the proposition to pass that bill over the President's veto, which was supported by every member of the delegation including one who had previously voted against the rest of a kindred question.

"If such a test were to be applied in Southern States, one effect will be to strip such distinguished Democrats as Senators Mills, Gordon and Ransom, and Mr. Speaker Crisp, Mr. Patterson, of Tennessee, Mr. Oates of Alabama, and others in the House of much their prestige as Administration Democrats as they arrayed themselves against the President in their votes for the Seinorage bill, and the above named members of the House deliberately united with the Mississippi delegation and other Southern Democrats in the effect to override the President's veto of that bill.

"I do not believe that the Democrats of Mississippi will approve such a test as that referred to, and in this they are not singular. The fact that Mr. Oates, is called an administration Democrat, and Senator Morgan known to be an extreme silver man, have been both recently endorsed by the Democrats of Alabama, shows that Democrats in Alabama look upon this subject much as I think they do; and when Mr. Blanchard, a pronounced free silver man is elected, a Senator in Louisiana by the same Legislature that elected Mr. Coffery, who stands squarely by the President on financial questions, we have another proof that Southern Democrats look with no favor on the proposition to weaken their party by dividing on financial issues."

STATE CONVENTION.

The Democrats of Alabama in Convention assembled, reaffirm the principles of the Democratic party as declared in its platform adopted in Chicago in 1892, and congratulates the country upon the success of those principles in the triumphant election of Grover Cleveland, who has by his generous treatment of our people, shown that he is the President of the whole country, knowing no North, no South, no East no West. We recognize the wisdom and patriotism of the President, and believe in his fealty to the principles of party, and endorse his administration of the Federal Government; while some of us differ with him in matters of policy, we are agreed that he is actuated by motives of patriotism and by an unselfish devotion to the greatest good to the whole people.

While there are differences of opinion among us in matters of detail we believe in free coinage of silver when it can be done consistently with the maintenance of a sound and safe currency.

We earnestly urge upon our Senators and Representatives in congress the speedy reform of the tariff and the prompt repeal of the ten per cent tax on the issue of State banks.

We heartily endorse the present administration of the State Government, headed by Thos. G. Jones who has so wisely discharged his great trust, and we commend him for his impartial and fearless execution of the laws.

We pledge to the people of Alabama a continuance of the good government of our State affairs inaugurated by the election of Geo. S. Houston in 1874.

The election law enated at the last session of our General Assembly is in accordance with the principles upon which are based the laws regulating elections in a large majority of the States of the Union enacted without regard to party, and was intended at the ballot box to obtain a full and fair expression of the will, and after giving it a trial, should it fail to accomplish the end whose accomplishment was sought, we pledge ourselves to make such changes and alterations there in as may be necessary to effect that end.

We pledge our party to the maintenance of a system of free public schools and to increase the appropriations for that purpose whenever the financial condition of the State will permit.

We pledge our party to continue its efforts to remove with the evils of the present convict system and to pass all the appropriate legislation to prevent its working injustice to any class of our people.

We extended a cordial invitation to all voters of Alabama who believe in the principles of Democracy and are in favor of the maintenance of a good government, to unite with us in the election of the ticket nominated by this convention.

CURES
CANCER

Keysville, Fla. April 12th, 1894.
Messrs. Dubois and Webb, Louisville, Ky.—Dear Sirs: "About eleven months ago I bought from you an Electropoise for the purpose of treating cancer. I had one of about ten years' standing, and it had reached a stage where it was making rapid progress, being about the size of a silver dollar. I knew that I had to do something or my time was about up, and you being the only party that I corresponded with that would give me any assurance of a cure, got my patronage. I am now happy to inform you that the cancer is no more, the Electropoise arrested the progress of the cancer perceptibly in about thirty-six to forty-eight hours and gradually and slowly grew less until now there is a place about the size of a pin head that is not quite healed but gradually closing up. You can use this or any part of it as a testimonial if you wish. Very truly yours M. M. Lillibridge."

D. A. Bryant, Hackneyville:—"I was badly crippled with rheumatism, also had a bad kidney trouble, I was helpless and could do no work. The Electropoise cured me and enabled me to work regularly.

Rev. W. C. Hearn, Talledega.—"For producing calm refreshing sleep and curing chiatic rheumatism the Electropoise can not be equaled.

Joseph Williams, Stevenson—"I can walk all over town and even run, whereas a few weeks ago I was a helpless cripple, the electropoise did it."

Mrs. W. P. Nelson, Sunshine—"My recovery was wonderful. I have also tried the electropoise on several of my neighbors, for various ailments, nausea, kidney trouble of the worst form, all with the most gratifying results."

LOCAL BREVITIES.

June 1st—cold day.

Mrs. John Garner visited Montgomery Tuesday.

Prof. R. E. R. Hick's was in Clanton last Saturday.

The L. & N. sidetrack has been repaired at this place.

Rev. J. G. Lowrey filled his appointment in Verbena Sunday.

Mr. Ed. Boyd and family, of Birmingham, visited Clanton Tuesday.

Several car loads of water melons pass through Clanton June 1st.

Miss Eulah Rasberry spent Saturday and Sunday at her home in Lily, Ala.

Mr. Thos. A. Curry visited Montgomery last Wednesday on business.

We are glad to learn that Mr. W. H. Phillips, who has been quite sick is now fast improving.

The friends of Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Flink are sorry to learn that they leave next week for Louisville.

The young people who attended the occiable at Mr. J. P. Vanderveer's last Friday night highly enjoyed the occasion.

Messrs. W. E. and M. H. Bradley, Miss Lucy Webster, of LaPine, Ala., and Geo. Lamar, of Snowdon, attended the closing exercises of the University.

A party of young people, of Clanton, attended the picnic given at Mulberry last Saturday and returned to the city much elated over the pleasure of the day.

At the residence of Mrs. Dr. Matthews, a large crowd assembled last Monday night for the purpose of witnessing the musicale given by her music class. The scholars acquitted themselves with credit and praise, and the occasion was a source of pleasure to those present.

Our readers will note the change in the card of the Acme Hotel. Messrs. Louis Gelders & Co., have rented the hotel at Obrien's Opera House and are prepared to give their customers even better accommodations than in the past. The New Acme is about one block from the Union Depot.

The VIEW is the recipient of tickets presented by Miss Gamma Middleton, of this city, to a concert given June 1st and 4th by the pupils of the National Conservatory of Music, Nashville, Tenn., at which college she has graduated; and is expected home this week, to the joy of admiring friends.

The day for the Sunday School picnic dawned bright and beautiful for such out-door-sport, and a very good crowd of Sunday School scholars, installed in the wagons furnished for the occasion, left for their 5-mile drive to Mim's mill, the appointed place for the picnic. The entire crowd, reported on their return, a gay time, and that little folks especially enjoyed themselves.

The Baptist Church is soon to have $135.00 organ. The old one has been exchanged in part payment, a good sum subscribed and the remaining amount will be forthcoming. All the money gotten up is independent of any fund on hand for the completion of the church, and to the success of the undertaking, is due the interest and zeal of Mr. Curry in the movement.

The following are the officers elected for the ensuing year by the Clanton Lodge on last Saturday night, and who will be installed on June 23th:

J. M. Staufield, W. M., B. H. Chestnutt, Sr. Warden; W. D. Sartor, Jr. Warden; W. H. Wright, Sr. Deacon, C. J. Stewart, Jr. Deacon, W. A. Middleton, Treasury; Jno. W. Staudfield, Secretary; J. A. Miller, Tyler.

The circus men who attempted to give their show here last Thursday found to their sad surprise, that tooting horns and tinkling cymbals were not much of a go in this city. After two vain attempts to drum a crowd, the manager announced that "there would be no show" and his canvass was soon furled and returned to his car. Several negroes who worked three hours for the institution sneaked off with worse-be-gone appearances as if they had failed to get a complimentary ticket cashed.

Our boys were defeated last Saturday by the combination nine of Cooper's and Verbena, but all feathers plucked from their plumage have grown out again and they expect to "get in the game" soon with Verbena.

Died, near Mulberry May 31st, Mr. D. A. White. Mr. White has been ill for several months and his death was not a surprise. He was a good man, and was a member of the Mulberry Baptist Church, and of the Clanton Lodge at this place, and was burried with Masonic honors by the masons. He was at one time tax-collector for the county: and his death is a great loss.

News reached here this week, that Kendricks, who two years ago was arrested at Verbena by Mr. F. A. Gulledge, for bugiary, and who with his pal, Marshall, were tried here and sentenced for twenty years in the penitentiary, succeeded in making his escape from the convict farm, near Spigners, Sunday morning. In an attempt made last year by Hendricks and Marshall at Pratt Mines to escape, the latter was shot and killed by a guard and Hendricks was re-captured. He is a desperate character and is wanted also in Tennessee and Mississippi; has had some close calls, one which deprived him of an arm.

The writer did not hear the testimony in the case of the State vs. Alex Shelton, consequently could not sign a petition to have his sentence commuted from death to life imprisonment. The attorneys of the condemned man are doing their duty in seeking to do what they can for their client, yet those who heard the testimony of Mr. Martin, to whom Shelton confessed, will be slow to interfere with the finding of the jury. The gist of the testimony as told us by several parties who heard the evidence was that the deputy sheriff went to Shelton and talked to him about working the road and then said "consider yourself under arrest," Shelton at once retreated about ten steps to his gun and as he went to pick it up Harris began firing, whereupon the negro shot and killed him. The jury considered the evidence sufficient to justify their verdict and unless reasons which we have not heard of are presented we could not ask the Governor to commute the sentence. It is an awful thing to take human life, even according to law, yet such protection must be given to our officers when in the discharge of their duties so that evil doers will be deterred from taking their lives, gambling on the chances of escaping altogether or coming off with simply a life sentence. Lynch law has already too much favor in our land, and our citizens though commended in going to any length to save an innocent man, must be sure than they do not let false sympathy cause them to aid in shielding the guilty and thus give fresh excuse for mob violence.

Said a gentleman the other day, on the subject of "the stringency of the times," who has traveled over a large portion of the State: "Yes, times are hard, but in one sense of the word, it is has been a blessing to our country. People have been made to stop and consider, to economize, and the farmer to plan, study and experiment: now he conducts his farm on a new basis and different mode—paying as he goes—diversifying his crops. More land is being put under cultivation, fields that have grown pine saplings since the war are being cleared, fences built, old ones repaired, homes improved, and with a zeal and spirit that hasn't been manifested in many a day. He tells you that he is working harder than ever before, gets along on less, that work agrees with him and he intends getting out of debt. Another thing, politics are not bothering him much, and his time and attention is earnestly devoted to his farm."

The following is from a reliable citizen of Coopers, which tells what some of our farmers have been doing:

ED. VIEW:—I had occasion last week to see the farmers east and west of Coopers for 12 miles in each direction, and was astonished to see the vast amount of maiden land put in cultivation and the repaired fences, the area the farmers have under cultivation; while the crops are small, I never saw them in such excellent condition. With as much industry and economy practiced as has been displayed during the past six months for the space of two years to come with average crops and reasonable prices we will no longer hear the cry of 'hard times' and the 'scarcity of money'" P. C. Dennis.

Queen Victoria's Birthday.

Queen Victoria celebrated her seventy-fifth birthday a few days ago. The queen is now in excellent health, and it is possible that she will live for some years to come. She has been on the throne fifty-seven years, and her reign embraces many of the most memorable events in English history.

Victoria will not rank in history among the greatest rulers of the world, but she will be remembered as a good wife and mother, a model of virtue and a queen who felt a deep interest in the welfare of her subjects. She has had nine children, of whom seven are still living.

Since she has been on the throne her people have given her in the civil list expenditures $110,275,000, and $48,676,705 for the support of her residences and stables. Her direct expenditures are $1,800,000 a year. The sum allowed by the government for the support of the other members of the royal family is $1,800,000 a year. The queen has saved and invested some thirty or forty million dollars, and in the event of a revolution her children would inherit enough to give them a new start in the world.

There is not much more to be said about this serene and fortunate old lady. She holds to the religious faith and the political creed of her fathers, and is opposed to liberal views. She hates scandal as much as she hated Mr. Gladstone, loves big dinners and good wine, and still believes that her husband was the best man that ever lived. Two or three attempts have been made to assassinate her, but her people love her, and her successor will be lucky indeed if he enjoys her popularity. This last anniversary was a notable one. It is a rare thing for a sovereign to celebrate a seventy-fifth birthday after fifty-seven years on the throne.—Ex.

Radishes.

Radishes possess valuable medicinal properties. They are demulcent, stimulating and diuretic, and should be eaten freely when fresh and crisp. They are usually eaten with salt only, but if sliced thin are very nice with a French dressing. In this country the radishes themselves are rarely cooked, though the tops of young radishes are often boiled. The radish is a native of Asia, where it has been cultivated from the most ancient times. Nearly an inch of the green top should be left on the radishes when they are prepared for the table, and this little portion of the top should be eaten, as the peculiar properties they possess help to digest the radish itself.—Westchester News.

Like the Gentle Dew from Heaven

Comes blissful peace to a turbulent, unruly liver brought into subjection and disciplined with that grand regulator, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a boon of priceless worth, not only to the bilious, but also to the malarious, the rheumatic, the nervous, the feeble, the constipated, and those whose kidneys and bladder are inactive. The liver is always chiefly involved in material complaints, for which the bitters is a remedy.

Teething Children.

Nothing on earth will take children through the trying ordeal of teething so pleasantly, and so very surely and safely, as Dr. King's Royal Germetuer. They all like to take it, and it acts like magic in meeting the troubles of that critical period. Thousands have tried it and it has never been known to fail.

ITEMS OF INTEREST GATHERED FROM SOUTHERN STATES.

Culled and Condensed From Our Daily Dispatches.

It is said that the late frost and snow have killed most of the seventeen-year locusts in the mountain section of North Carolina.

The city council of El Paso, Texas, has passed an ordinance forbidding women from wearing on the streets of that city what is known as the divided skirt.

Three hundred striking miners, out by McBride's orders, have returned to work at Rathburn, Tenn. This break will do much toward relieving the coal famine imminent at Chattanooga.

Governor Stone, of Mississippi, has offered a reward of $250, payable on conviction, for each of the murderers of Henry Smith and Will James, colored, hanged by a mob near Clinton.

Colonel Breckinridge states that he will carry the matter of Judge Bradley's refusal to allow his counsel to file a bill of exceptions to the supreme court. He declined to express an opinion as to the judge's refusal.

A special from Columbia, S. C., says: The military inquiry into the conduct of the Columbia companies during the dispensary riots continues. The indications are that Captain Alston's company, the Richmond Volunteers, will be retained in the service and that the Governor's Guards and Columbia Zouaves will be dismissed.

Congressman Breckinridge and E. E. Settle, one of his opponents, appeared at Owenton, Ky., Monday afternoon in joint debate and addressed a crowd of 2,000 people. The court-house was found inadequate and the speaking was held in the yard. The meeting occurred in Mr. Settle's own's county and he was received with great enthusiasm.

The safe in the office of the three C's railroad, at Yorkville, S.C., was blown open Monday night. It is supposed that the job was done by professional cracksmen. They got about $50 in cash. They did not visit any other business place in Yorkville and no clue to their identity. This is the first visit from safe crackers that Yorkville has ever had.

The severest and most damaging hail storm that ever occurred in western Texas is reported from Buchel county. The ground was covered to a depth of six inches with hail stones, some of which were as large as oranges. Crops were totally destroyed and many sheep and poultry were killed outright. The roofs of buildings were riddled.

Monday afternoon the immense wholesale grocery house of Preston & Stauffer at New Orleans narrowly escaped destruction by fire. Damage to stock is $60,000, and to the building $10,000; fully insured. While several firemen were on a shed, a lineman cut an electric wire which was in their midst. Captain Fahart and Pipeman Robert Burke fell to the stone pavement, and were seriously injured.

Robert Charben, who, for two years, was federal commissioner at Attalla, Ala., has been convicted in the United States court at Birmingham of presenting false accounts to the government, and sentenced to one year's imprisonment. He appealed to the United States court and gave bond for $1,000. There are four other similar charges against him for which he is being tried. This trial has created the greatest of sensations in Alabama. There are six other commissioners and deputy United States marshals under similar indictments.

THE ROADS EUCHRED.

They Lose the Famous Social Circle Short Haul Case.

In the United States circuit court of appeals at New Orleans, Tuesday, Judges Pardee, Locke and McCormick gave the following decision on the long and short haul case, the title being:

"The interstate commerce commission vs. the Cincinnati, New Orleans and Texas Pacific Railway Company, the Western & AtlanticRailroad Company and the Georgia Pacific Railway Company: Appeal from the circuit court of the United States for the northern district of Georgia.

"Ordered. That the decree of the circuit court be annulled, avoided and reversed, and that this case be remanded to the said circuit court, with instructions to enter a decree in favor of the complainant, the interstate commerce commission, and against the defendants, the Cincinnati, New Orleans and Texas Pacific Railway company, commanding and restraining the said defendants, their officers, servants and attorneys, to cease and desist from making any greater charge in the aggregate on buggies, carriages and on other freight of the first class carried in less than carloads from Cincinnati to Social Circle than they charge on such freight from Cincinnati to Augusta; that they so desist and refrain within five days after the entry of each decree, and in case they or any of them shall fail to obey said order, condemning the said defendants, and each of them, to pay $100 a day for every day thereafter they shall so fail, and denying the relief prayed for in relation to charges on freight from Cincinnati to Augusta. The said defendants to pay all costs of court."

Receiver's Certificates Wanted.

A Savannah special says: The taking of a final decree on the foreclosure of the consolidated mortgage on the Port Royal and Western Carolina railroad and the first mortgage on the Augusta and Knoxville railroad has been postponed by judge Simonton until July 10th. The receivers of the Central have filed a petition asking for an issue of receivers' certificates against the road amounting to $191,587.33, deficit from operating expenses and for betterments from July 4, 1892, to June 4, 1893, the time during which it was in Mr. Comer's hands.

A plot to blow up the parliament buildings and the bourse at Buenos Ayres by the use of bombs has been discovered. The police found several bombs and have arrested two Austrians and Italians charged with complicity in the conspiracy.

CONGRESSIONAL.

DAILY PROCEEDINGS OF BOTH HOUSE AND SENATE.

The Discussion of Important Measures Briefly Epitomized.

The house Friday refused to consider two or three private bills by unanimous consent, and at 12:30, on motion of Mr. Bunn, of North Carolina, the house voted to go into committee of the whole, Mr. Hatch in the chair, to consider bills on the private calendar. Mr. Springer gave notice that he would call up the Brawley bill Saturday, involving the repeal of the ten per cent tax.

On motion of Mr. Springer the house, Saturday, resolved itself into committee of the whole on the state bank tax repeal bill.

The house bill was passed Monday, extending one year the time of making final proof of the location of a settlement under the homestead and desert land acts. Two or three private bills were passed, and the house then, in committee of the whole, began the consideration of bills relating to the affairs of the District of Columbia. The response by the children of Louis Kossuth, the Hungarian patriot, to the message of sympathy transmitted by the speaker at the time of Kossuth's death, was laid before the house by Speaker Crisp.

Wednesday being Decoration Day, Mr. Catchings at the opening of the session of the house, Tuesday, moved that when the house adjourned it be until Thursday noon. Agreed to. Committees having been called for reports, the house went into committee of the whole—Mr. Richardson, of Tennessee, in the chair—on the 10 per cent bank tax bill. Speeches were made by Messrs. Cox, of Tennessee, Johnson, of Indiana, and Black, of Georgia.

THE SENATE.

In the senate, Friday, Mr. Kyle's resolution offered Wednesday as to Hawaii, was taken up. The discussion upon it was interrupted at 10:30 a. m. when the tariff bill was taken up, the question being upon paragraph 123, putting a duty of 30 per cent on breech-loading shotguns.

After some unimportant morning business, Saturday, the tariff bill was taken up in the senate at 10:30, the first question being on the paragraph as to iron or steel wheels. The duty in the house bill was fixed at 30 per cent ad valorem, and Mr. Vest, in behalf of the finance committee, moved to make it 1½ cents per pound. Agreed to. Mr. Hill moved to place lead ore on the free list. The bill, he said, was not satisfactory to him, but he was now and always had been in favor of its prompt disposition. He said that Mr. Gorman had exceeded his authority when he said that the democratic party was united on the present bill and denied that there was absolute unity in the party. The bill was satisfactory to very few senators and could not be satisfactory to him so long as there was a remnant of the populistic income tax on it.

The tariff bill was laid before the senate Monday. Mr. Hale's amendment to continue the existing duties on sawed boards and lumber was discussed till noon without reaching a vote, and then Mr. Walsh, of Georgia, addressed the senate on the general subject of the tariff.

TRADE TALK.

The Past Week was Rather a Dull One.

R. G. Dun & Co's Review of Trade for the past week says:

"Storms and floods, prolonged strikes and large exports of gold have done their utmost this week to give business a vacation. But the wants unsatisfied during the past year, belated and much lessened and yet greater than those of any other nation, have caused a volume of trade quite large for the season. While the iron industry especially and many others to some extent, have been restricted by scarcity of coal and coke, the number of works resuming has been greater than the number stopping from other causes. But it is a symptom not to be overlooked that the demand for manufactured products, instead of increasing, appears for the moment rather smaller than before and indifference of buyers is shown in cancellation of orders hitherto given. It is a waiting season, but the disposition to wait is this year much intensified. Works in operation are fairly busy in closing up orders for a belated spring demand, but there is even more shrinkage in orders for the future than was noticed last year as the precursor of coming dullness.

"There appears no increased demand for cotton goods and manufacturers have agreed that the accumulation of print cloths, which now sell at 2.69 cents for 64s must presently be checked by suspending production. Exchanges through clearing houses compare favorably for the week, being only 18.1 per cent. smaller than last year.

"Failures diminish in importance, the amount of liabilities for the third week in May being only $2,204,139 and for three weeks $7,836,972, of which $2,642,687 were of manufacturing and $5,025,007 of trading concerns. The number of failures reported this week is 183 in the United States against 259 last year, and in Canada 28 against 14 last year, and again there are noted scarcely any of importance."

IMMIGRATION CONVENTION

Assembles in Augusta—The South Well Represented.

The Southern Immigration Association organized its third annual congress in Augusta Wednesday at noon, President M. S. Bryan, of Nashville, presiding. Speeches of welcome were made by Mayor J. H. Alexander, president, and Joseph R. Lamar, of the Young Men's Business League, of Augusta; Governor W. J. Northen, of Georgia, and United States Senator Patrick Walsh, president of the commercial Club of Augusta. Responses were made by Governor McCorkle, of West Virginia; Governor Tillman, of South Carolina, and Governor Carr, of North Carolina. President Bryan opened the proceedings with an address, giving the origin of the organization and its objects.

WHAT IS GOING ON AT UNCLE SAM'S HEADQUARTERS.

Comment Concerning Transactions in the Various Departments.

The democratic managers are becoming impatient at the time being consumed by the republicans in the discussion of the metal schedule and are beginning to talk among themselves of the advisability of prolonging the hours of debate.

The special committee appointed to investigate the charges of attempted senatorial bribery on the part of Charles W. Butts submitted their report to the senate Friday. Butts is found by the committee to have made an attempt at bribery, despite his denial, and Senators Hunton and Kyle are exonerated from all blame.

The discussion on the repeal of the ten per cent tax on state banks commenced in the house Saturday morning. There is no limit on the debate, and it is expected to continue two weeks, at least, probably longer. The house is so evenly divided on the proposition that the discussion may change enough votes to pass or defeat the bill.

Secretary Carlisle is very much annoyed and disgusted at the newspaper publications hinting a deal of some kind concerning the sale of the government building at Chicago. It is learned that he had written letters to Colonel Livingston, as chairman of the sub-committee on appropriations, showing that the charges made are utterly false and ridiculous.

The dismissal of 450 clerks in the war department and 500 employes of the government printing office has caused consternation among the government employes in Washington. Almost every clerk fears the ax will fall upon him next time. Those who have been dismissed are beseeching the senators and members to have them reinstated.

The wholesale discharge of clerks for which Secretary Lamont has so long been preparing took place in the war department Tuesday, nearly three hundred employes receiving notices that their services were no longer required. Many of them were also notified that they would be allowed pay until various dates in June on account of regular leaves of absence.

Senator Gorman has not been in his seat in the senate since the day he delivered his recent speech upon the tariff bill. It was known that he was indisposed, but each day the announcement was made that rest was all he needed. Tuesday, however, the senator's brother was quoted as saying that Senator Gorman is a very sick man. Overwork, he says, is the cause.

The comptroller of the currency has declared dividends in favor of the creditors of insolvent national banks as follows: Second dividend of 50 per cent. in favor of the creditors of the Alabama National Bank, of Mobile, Ala. making in all 100 per cent. on claims proved amounting to $68,699. A fourth dividend of the First National Bank of Wilmington, N. C., making in all 50 per cent in claims proved amounting to $551,329.

Decoration day was observed in Washington in the usual manner. The chief exercises took place at Arlington, but appropriate exercises were held at the soldiers' home and at the various cemeteries. The district militia headed the procession of grand army men and other veteran associations, which marched to Arlington. Interest in the celebration increased by the personal participation of President Cleveland, who left the white house at noon and drove directly to Arlington.

GROWTH OF THE SOUTH.

The Industrial Situation as Reported for the Past Week.

The review of the industrial situation in the South for the past week shows that business in the coal regions of Alabama and Tennessee is somewhat unsettled in consequence of the miners' strike, and the output of the furnaces has been diminished. Contrary to previous expectation it has not been necessary to close down any furnaces, as fuel supplies furnished by negro and convict labor have been sufficient. There is an increasing demand for pig iron, and prices are irregular. Textile mills throughout the South are running on full time with plenty of orders and encouraging prospects. Lumber producers have obtained lower freight rates to the North and West, and are doing more business than heretofore. Prices, however, are low, and in many instances do not afford a reasonable profit. Farmers report that crop prospects are not very encouraging and truck farmers have done well thus far, as higher prices have, to some extent, offset the shortage in early crops of fruit.

Forty-three new industries were established or incorporated during the week, among which may be mentioned the Keystone Creamery Company, of Alexandria, Va., capital $60,000; large sugar refineries at New Iberia and Baton Rouge, La.; a $50,000 construction company at New Orleans, La., and the Buckley High Speed Elevator Company, capital $50,000, also at New Orleans. Brick works are to be established at Weston, W. Va.; bottling works at Chattanooga, Tenn.; canning factories at New Orleans, La., Topelo, Miss.; Corsicana, Tex., and Arch Mills, Va., and cotton compresses at Luverne Ala., and Hearne, Tex. A new cotton mill at Beaufort, S. C.; electrical plants at Ocala, Fla., West Point, Miss., and Victoria, Tex.; flour and grist mills at Wortsmin, N. C., and New Castle, Va., and fertilizer works at Abbeville, Ala. Foundries are to be built at Palatka, Fla., and Louisville, Ky., and a machine shop at San Antonio, Tex. Cotton seed oil mills will be established at Clinton, La., and Liberty, S. C., and a tobacco factory at Mt. Airy, N. C. New woodworking establishments are reported at Huntsville, Ala., Ft. White and Interlachen, Fla., Walnut Cove and Wilmington, N. C., Scranton, Miss., Erwin and Memphis, Tenn., Fredericksburg and Manchester, Va., and Sutton, W. Va.

Water works will be built at Quincy, Fla., Walhalla, S. C., Bowie, Texas, and Weston, W. Va. Among the enlargements of the week are a spring bed factory at Houston, Tex., cotton mills at Whitehall, Ga., and Newberry, S. C., and oil mills at Union, S. C., and Cuero, Tex. The new buildings reported for the week include a bank building at New Braunfels, Texas; business houses at Orlando, Fla., Valdosta, Ga., Murphy, N. C. Houston, Texas, and Bluefield, W. Va.; churches at Cloverport, Ky., and Columbus, S. C.; a $44,000 courthouse at Kames City, Tex.; a $40,000 school building at Ashland, Ky., and one to cost $42,000 at Jackson, Miss.—Tradesman, (Chattanooga, Tenn.)

The Flag Desecrated.

The American flag in front of the United States consul's office in St. Thomas, Ont., was torn down and destroyed Friday night by some members of the Queenstown Rifles, of Toronto, while under the influence of liquor. Lieutenant Colonel Smith apologized to the United States consul, George J. Willis, for the act, but Mr. Willis would not accept the apology, and notified the heads of his department at Washington and Ottawa.

The shipment of coke to the Edgar Thomson steel works plant at Braddock, Pa., has entirely stopped. Furnace "A," of the Carnegie plant, making manganese, which has been operating since the iron furnaces suspended some days ago, may close. The minor departments of the works will have to stop, now that the coke supply has ceased.

At Brooklyn, N. Y., Ex-Justice of the Peace Kenneth F. Sutherland, of Gravesend, one of McKane's henchmen, was sentenced to two years and eight months in Sing Sing prison and to pay a fine of $500. The sentence includes the sentence already imposed for misdemeanor, of one year's imprisonment and $500 fine.

The Erie forge, the Nagle furnaces and several other iron plants at Erie, Pa., have shut down, and it is expected that within a few days twenty of the various manufactories will have to close until coal can be secured. Anthracite coal is being used on freight engines of the Philadelphia and Erie road with very unsatisfactory results.

Advices from Vancouver, B. C., are to the effect that the overflow of the Frazer river is causing great destruction and loss of life. The valleys have been submerged, houses of ranchers have been swept away and fields laid in waste. Many herds of cattle and flocks of sheep have been drowned. Whole villages on the banks of the stream are floating.

The twenty-first annual commencement of the Alabama State Normal college closed Wednesday. The annual address was delivered by Chappell Cory, of Birmingham. The baccalaureate sermon was preached Sunday by Dr. E. E. Hoss, of Nashville. Twenty-seven graduates received state certificates. It was the largest class in its history. The alumnial banquet was held at night.

A good deal of excitement exists in Mobile, Ala., over the threat on the part of a number of citizens of Baldwin county to burn the quarantine plant which is located in that county, across the bay from Mobile. Extra precautions have been taken to protect the plant from any such onslaught. The threat of Baldwin's citizens is based on the fact that infested vessels are treated at the plant.

At Birmingham, Ala., Wednesday afternoon the citizens' committee, which was appointed several days ago to hold a conference with mine operators and bring about a settlement of the strike if possible, met the operators, but nothing was accomplished. The mine owners declined to make any concessions or to lower the reduction. With this in view and the 10,000-ton daily out-put of the mines, it is generally conceded that the operators have won the fight.

TROUBLE WITH MINERS.

The Situation in Missouri and Ohio is Becoming Serious.

The situation at Mine No. 6, at the Kansas and Texas Coal Company, near Macon, Mo., is serious. Tuesday night a gang of strikers assembled near the mine and threatened to drive out the negroes at work. A large force of deputy sheriffs surrounded the shaft and prevented an attack. The strikers are ugly and it is feared will set fire to the buildings. The feeling of the villagers are in sympathy with the strikers, and the sheriff finds difficulty in securing deputies to assist him in preserving order.

CALLING FOR TROOPS.

A special from Columbus, Ohio, says: Sheriff Riley, of Athens county, has appealed to Governor McKinley for troops. The strikers are preventing the moving of coal trains on the Toledo and Ohio Central railway at Gloucester, Ohio.

TROUBLE FEARED IN TENNESSEE.

The striking miners of the Oliver Springs, Tenn., district have decided to remain out with the Jellico miners until a national settlement is made. The Coal Creek miners had a mass-meeting Tuesday night. Several Jellico agitators were present and fiery speeches were made. Trouble is feared.

MONEY FOR ATLANTA.

An Appropriation of $200,000 Reported for Her Exposition.

The Atlanta exposition will get $200,000 from the government. Of this $50,000 is for the building and $150,000 for the exhibit. If the removal of the building is not practicable or if the removal and re-erection of the building are not possible within the amount of the appropriation, then the secretary of the treasury is authorized to have a building erected at Atlanta, the cost not to exceed $50,000. If the old building is removed, one-half of it is to be reserved for the government exhibit and the rest of the building will be for whatever exhibit the colored race may make. The building is to be under the control of a board of government trustees.

EXCHANGED PRISONERS

To Save the Lives of Three Men Captured by Miners.

A special from Colorado Springs, Colorado, says: Sheriff Bowers has released Russell, Mason and Todd, the three miners captured in Wilbur, in pursuance of agreement, in order to save the lives of Samuel McDonald, superintendent; Charles Robinson, fireman, and Jack Goodrue, a miner captured by the strikers in the Strong mine, after blowing up the shafthouse. The miners' hatred of McDonald is intense and they had determined to put him to death, and then execute the other prisoners, if the exchange of prisoners was not agreed to.

Storms on Lake Superior.

A heavy northwest gale raged on Lake Superior, Sunday and Monday, accompanied by snowstorms. The tug Andrew J. A Look Into the Future.

He was poor as far as having earthly possessions was concerned, though he had some salary, and the girl was worse off because she had no salary.

Yet he loved her.

Love is a roaring lion going about seeking whom he may devour.

The girl loved him also, but it was tempered by judgement and the cost of house rent, clothes, social demands and that sort.

As previously mentioned, he loved her, and in time it came to pass that he proposed to her.

"But, dear George," she urged in the negative, "you only have $1,200 a year."

This argument rather surprised him, for he had an idea that $1,200 a year was not to be sneezed at.

"Well," he exclaimed, "we can live on that, can't we?"

She took both his hands in hers and looked straight into his large, innocent eyes.

"Live on it? Of course we can, you dear boy," she murmured, "but we would look too ridiculous for anything going around without any clothes on, wouldn't we, dear?" and poor George went down all in a heap.—Detroit Free Press.

The Change of Name.

It is said that the practice of the wife's assuming the husband's name at marriage originated from a Roman custom, and became the common custom after the Roman occupation. Thus Julia and Octavia, married to Pompey and Cicero, were called by the Romans Julia of Pompey and Octavia of Cicero, and in later times married women in most European countries signed their names in the same manner, but omitting the "of."

Against this view may be mentioned that during the sixteenth, and even the beginning of the seventeenth century, the usage seems doubtful, since we see Catherine Perr so signing herself after she has been twice married, and we always hear of Lady Jane Grey (not Dudley) and Arabella Stuart (not Seymour). Some persons think that the custom originated from the Scriptural teaching that husband and wife are one. It was decided in the case of Bon vs. Smith, in the reign of Elizabeth, that a woman by marriage loses her former name and legally receives that of her husband.—Ex.

THE HERITAGE.

The rich man's son inherits lands
And miles of brick and stone and gold,
And he inherits soft, white hands,
And tender flesh that fears the cold,
Nor dares to wear a garment old;
A heritage, it seems to me,
One scarce would wish to hold in fee.

The rich man's son inherits cares;
A bank may break, the factory burn,
A breath may burst his bubble shares,
And soft, white hands could hardly earn
A living that would serve his turn:
A heritage, it seems to me,
One scarce would wish to hold in fee.

The rich man's son inherits wants,
His stomach craves for dainty fare;
With sated heart he hears the pants
Of toiling hands with brown arms bare,
And wearies in his easy-chair;
A heritage, it seems to me,
One scarce would wish to hold in fee.

What doth the poor man's son inherit?
Stout muscles and a sinewy heart,
A hardy frame, a hardier spirit,
King o' two hands, he does his part
In every useful toil and art
A heritage, it seems to me,
A king might wish to hold in fee.

What doth the poor man's son inherit?
Wishes o'erjoyed with humble things,
A rank obtained by toil-won merit,
Content that from employment springs,
A heart that in its labor sings;
A heritage, it seems to me,
A king might wish to hold in fee.

What doth the poor man's son inherit?
A patience learned of being poor;
Courage, if sorrow come, to bear it,
A fellowship that is sure
To make the outcast bless his door;
A heritage, it seems to me,
A king might wish to hold in fee.

O rich man's son, there is a toll
That with all others level stands!
Large charity doth never soil,
But only whiten, soft, white hands—
This is the best crop from thy lands;
A heritage, it seems to me,
A king might wish to hold in fee.

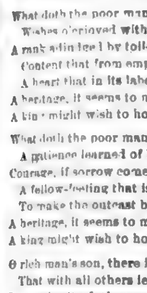
O poor man's son, scorn not thy state!
There is worse weariness than thine,
In merely being rich and great;
Toil only gives the soul to shine,
And makes rest fragrant and benign;
A heritage, it seems to me,
Worth being poor to hold in fee.

Both, heirs to some six feet of sod,
Are equal in the earth at last;
Both, children of the same dear God,
Prosaitle to your heirship vast
By record of a well-filled past;
A heritage, it seems to me,
Well worth a life to hold in fee.

—James Russell Lowell.

HENRI BONYNGE.

BY WILL S. REYNOLDS.



THE pulsating, rhythmic strains of Audrian's dreamy "Frou-Frou" greeted my ears as I approached my apartment on that Friday night. I mention this circumstance because I knew of no one in the house who could play the piano, and especially with such skilled and delicate touch. There the instrument had stood in the little parlor of a suite of three rooms, as though it were in a state of trance awaiting some magnetic hand to awaken it to animation.

The other room to which this parlor belonged in common with mine had been vacant; and this was my instinctive solution of the problem—a new boarder had installed himself during the day. There is always curious speculation about the personality of those with whom we are compelled to enter into social juxtaposition, and while I was agreeably impressed with the sound of the new lodger I yet had dreaded possibilities respecting the sight. Some very stupid, homely people are found among musicians, and one would not like a surfeit of melody without any seasoning of the other social qualities that render existence bearable.

The parlor was the one avenue to the two rooms, and through it I was compelled to pass. I entered as was my wont, and the music ceased.

"I beg your pardon, sir, but my room is adjacent, and the intrusion is one of necessity," I said.

"Then you are my neighbor?" he replied, in a voice of low, rich cadence. "My name is Henri Bonynge," offering me his hand.

"And mine is Frank Sherman. I hope we will be friends."

I was fairly delighted with his appearance and manners, which manifested such a signature and stamp of virtue that I took for granted what years of examination are often necessary to unfold. We were instant and close friends.

He was the antipode to me in physique, for I was tall, fleshy—almost embonpoint—and dark, while he was rather petit—not quite five four, of equipose tissue, and decidedly blonde in complexion, and his eyes were of the deepest blue.

I invited him to my private room that first evening, explaining that long years of bachelorhood had made it a receptacle of odd and easy furnishings not found in the conventional boarding-house room, and as he entered, his hands and voice were raised in delight as he exclaimed:

"Oh! you are an artist! How glad I am. I have always thought that I could like to be an artist, or if I were a woman that I would like to marry one. And a violin! You play then, too? Ah, we shall have duet soirees!"

"And what is your vocation?" I enquired, for there was no possibility of learning what it was through visual evidence, as in my case.

"I, Mr. Sherman, am one of that nomadic tribe who know not what an hour may bring forth. If my menu of to-day comprehends nightingales' tongues and brains of humming birds, to-morrow I may subsist on such plebeian diet as ham and eggs. I have no regular occupation, although I am quite sure of myself in music. Do you think I can find a 'clientele,' as a lawyer would say?"

"In New York you can find anything but the 'lost bone' of the megatherium," I answered. "But as you know, the times are very much out of joint commercially, and a mere newspaper advertisement or a sign-board might not attract to your coffers as much as a punched shekel. Have you letters?"

"Alas!" he said, with a sigh, "then the door of the 'Four Hundred' has no ear for 'Open, Wheat,' 'Open, Barley,' but hears only the magic word of 'Sesame.' I have no certificates of entree."

"Can you not get them?"

"I know no one who knows any one. In the mad revel of Chicago society during the fair, in which I lived those months, no valuable acquisition to my social store was made, and in expectation of the inertia which follows the activity of such splendid enterprises, I took an impromptu leave of the 'wild woolly West' and came East; and here I am, without a tag of credence."

"But your antecedents? You lived previously to the World's Fair."

"Yes—only Minerva sprang into full being. But for reasons which I cannot now disclose there hangs a veil back of my advent in Chicago which hides all my past. Let it be sufficient for you to know, Mr. Sherman, that I am one who stands neither outlawed, excommunicated, nor infamous."

How could I believe otherwise of this fair, ingenuous young person, who seemed to have no other art than a spontaneous flow of natural charm. If there was a mystery in his life I was strongly impressed that it was not of a criminal kind.

"The prospects are not very flattering, Mr. Bonynge," I assured him, "but what can be done shall be done. My own influence is yours."

My social ramifications were great in consequence of a long residence in a polite profession, but an extended inquiry elicited no encouragement for my neighbor's exchequer. Neither was he idle, for one day I was at the office of a publication on Sixteenth street, and there, among a cosmopolitan jam of applicants for a book keeping position, was poor Henri, who, with every one of the hungry-pursed human melange, was hopeful of obtaining the service. Alas for the hearts of the ninety-and-nine who went out into the street with despair emphasized!

I ensconced myself behind a newspaper and watched the grinding of the mill. The faces were a little whiter and harder as they passed through, and when Henri filed into place and stood there expectantly I heard the examiner say, "Your work is correct in all but the superfluous journalizing. You give 'cash' both a debt and credit, whereas the balance should be given. Next!" Alas, for Bonynge! For no one else, of course. He reminded me of Frankenstein, although his craving for sympathy was not in vain. I joined him on the street and locked arms with him. Tears were in his eyes.

"I have missed you at the table," I ventured; "is this, then, the reason?"

"I am very poor, Mr. Sherman."

"And hungry? Almighty Father, tell me not so!"

"I was driven into one of these places to-day," and he indicated a saloon where free lunches were obtainable.

I pressed his arm a little more sympathetically and led him along in silence to our rooms.

"Now," I commenced, with commercial stoicism and monitorial gravity, "I have a work for you to do. I am going to paint Cleopatra and her asylam, and I want you to pose for me in the dramatic persons of the queen, Charmion and Iris. This work will give you a competence equal to your immediate wants at least, and if the contract is sealed I will pay in advance," and with this I pressed some money into his palm.

"I cannot accept this," he protested, with tears of gratitude welling into the soft reservoirs of liquid light like sunshine pouring into a fountain; "it is charity, for you conceived the painting to help me."

"No, I didn't. The motive is purely mercenary. I want to hang the picture by a golden cord in some millionaire's gallery; my name shall be on the corner in immortal pigment. Sentiment—pooh! But if you are not willing to work, even though the kind is not ambitious, I suppose I can engage another model."

"No—not that. But you want women."

"Certainly—and a muscular, militant Antony, and any number of cosmopolitan bourgeoisie, sans-culottes, caitiffs and such, so to name them."

"But how could I personate a woman—a black-eyed gypsy of sinuous grace?"

"I don't want an Egyptian. Cleopatra was a Macedonian. Probably she descended from Menelaus. I dare say her skin was as fair as yours."

"But my physique?"

"As feminine as the Milo. I want an ample waist; and then your outlines are not at all unlike a woman of classical symmetry."

Henri assisted in the study of the action, taken entirely from Plutarch, and with the aid of historical descriptions and illustrations and the good offices of some histrionic friends we were enabled to get together the wardrobe and trappings necessary for the composition and the preliminary work. We improvised a window, over the ledge of which Henri—or Cleopatra, rather—was to hang, and one morning I commenced a bold charcoal study of the siren queen. She was represented in the act of pulling on the rope, with her two maids, lifting the blood-stained, dying Roman up to her retreat. The beautiful features, for which she was so celebrated, were distorted in the effort, and altogether the action and personality were as striking and masterful as any historical painter could desire.

The charm of Henri's arms, exposed by the flowing, unconfined drapery of the three different characters superb physical opulence, was marvelously beautiful; and with the artificial hair streaming around his shoulders, not even an artist or a showman would suspect him of being other than a very attractive young woman.

But there came a day when Henri did not report for duty. And several days went by, and a week, and yet no Henri. There was no ostensible reason in my knowledge for his absence, and, besides, his effects had not been removed from his room. Then it was palpable that something was wrong, for his moral integrity was an armor against the seductive influences that beset the unwary, and I was preparing to make a search for him when a letter arrived and cleared away the mystery. Here is what it contained:

DEAR MR. SHERMAN—I find in law that there is a nice distinction 'twixt Tweedledum and Tweedledee, after all. I do not pretend to know anything about the gender of the two characters, or whether they have any gender; but I do know that either Tweedledum or Tweedledee has got on the wrong clothes, and according to the law and the sublime philosophy of Herr Diogenes Teufelsdroch the vestment makes all the difference in the world. If Tweedledee is ever so much of a lady, and is ever so anxious to get on in life, following perfectly honorable pursuits, she shall not discard the habiliments of her sex and don others in which the struggle is diminished. So says the omniscient and omnipotent law.

To summarize, I was suspected and arrested, and here I am in duress. If, like a gallant knight of old, you will rescue me from this castle, I solemnly asseverate that I shall wear skirts till the crash of doom, and all the while remain your debtor.

HENRIETTA BONYNGE.

It is not very probable that you would have done in this case what I did. The Indian who was delighted because every one did not think with him and covet his squaw had just cause for rejoicing. In the evolution of events and circumstances I married Henrietta Bonynge, and I love to think of her now as my wife model and model wife.—New York Advertiser.

A Tragic Duel.

"A duel with the most tragic denouement of any in history occurred in the eastern part of my State about thirty years ago," said Major H. L. Kirk, of Vicksburg, Miss., at the Laclede. "The full story would occupy two or three columns, but briefly it is this: A young man named Gion visited Colonel Benson, an old friend of the family. During his stay there a very valuable watch, which had been in the Benson family for many years, disappeared. The Colonel charged Gion with the theft. The boy flew into a furious rage and challenged Benson to fight a duel. Because of the young man's youth the Colonel declined to accept. Then two of Gion's elder brothers took a hand in the row. This drew in Colonel Benson's eldest son.

"A duel was arranged between the eldest Gion and Colonel Benson, with the second son of the Gion house and the Colonel's son as seconds. At the first fire both principals fell, mortally wounded. The seconds then faced each other, as a result of which young Benson killed Gion.

"The young scamp who had caused all the trouble inherited the Gion estate after his brothers were killed. Ten years afterward, while on his deathbed, he sent for Benson, who had slain his brother. He told Benson that he had stolen the watch, as accused by the Colonel, and gave him directions how to find it where it had lain buried behind Benson's stable all those years. The scoundrel was, in fact, a thief, but when charged with the theft of the watch was too proud to acknowledge it, and in his indignation caused the almost total extermination of two families.

"This is a true story, though it sounds like fiction. Any old Mississippian will substantiate it, because it was the sensation of the day in the South a quarter of a century ago."—St. Louis Republic.

The Two Magnetic Poles.

Close investigation of the phenomena of magnetism has proven that the north and south magnetic poles are neither identical with the geographical poles, but that they are in the neighborhood of the earth's axis of rotation. In the case of the north magnetic pole the exact location is well-known—at ninety-seven degrees west longitude and 70½ degrees north latitude. The location of the south magnetic pole is not known to a certainty, but it is believed to be near 150 degrees east longitude and seventy-five degrees south latitude.—St. Louis Republic.

A Misnamed Rose.

The common tube rose is an excellent illustration of a popular misnomer. The plant is not a rose at all and has no connection with the rose family. Its name is a corruption. The French gardeners always call it plante tuberense, or tuber plant, and the latter part of the name was corrupted by ignorant persons into tube rose. The similarity of sound no doubt led to the change of name and consequent mistake, similar instances having often occurred.—Chicago Herald.

SUMMARY OF NEWS.

CONDENSATION OF INTEREST-ING OCCURRENCES

Which Happen From Day to Day Throughout the Busy World.

Pennsylvania mine operators have decided to employ negro labor in their fight against the miners. Two hundred colored miners left Birmingham, Ala., Monday in special cars for Johnsonburg, Pa. More are to follow.

It is reported that the village of Yahaulica, Mexico, was visited by a terrible storm a few days ago. A number of the adobe and frame residences and store buildings were blown away and ten persons killed and fifteen wounded.

After a long meeting of the coal miners of Alliance, Ohio, they decided to accept the operators' terms of $1.05 for mining and return to work. Three large mines near the city limits will be started by this decision and a famine will be averted.

The Ohio Central railroad discontinued its entire freight service Tuesday from lack of fuel, and within three days will have to stop passenger traffic, if no coal can be had. The Lake Shore road has laid off nine freights on three divisions, and is burning cord wood and old ties in freight locomotives.

Fifteen business houses and twenty residences in Ottumwa, Ia., were destroyed by fire Sunday. Five blocks are a mass of blackened ruins. For four hours the fire raged fiercely. The loss is estimated at $225,000, and the insurance about one-third. A spark from a locomotive is supposed to have started the blaze.

One hundred and seventy-five negroes were landed at Scottdale, Pa., Tuesday evening and sent to the Standard and Central works of the Frick Coke Company. Most of them were accompanied by their families. Some of the labor leaders boarded the train and tried to induce them to join the strike. This they refused to do.

Commander Kelly and his industrial army arrived at St. Genevieve, Mo., and were provided with a day's rations by the mayor, under instructions from the city council. Kelly claimed to have 1,200 men in his boats. The flotilla landed five miles below the city. Kelley has about perfected arrangements for a tow up the Ohio river to Wheeling, W. Va.

A New York special says: The Richmond and Terminal reorganization plan is expected to be declared operative within a few weeks. All the principal securities essential to the plan have been deposited in sufficient quantities to permit the committee to go ahead. Outside properties are now being dealt with and negotiations are pending which may bring into the plan a number of securities which are at present outside.

A private dispatch from Ridgeway, Elk county, Pa., states that Sheriff Elliott had deputized 150 men from Ridgeway and the surrounding towns to protect the men who will attempt to go to work in Hall, Knul & Co.'s mines at Shawmut. Resistance is expected from the striking miners who have been reinforced by 800 men from contiguous regions. Bloodshed is feared. The miners are well armed and desperate.

A London cable dispatch says: The formation of a French cabinet with three ministers—Poincare, Décasse and Hanotaux—avowedly hostile to Great Britain, excites grave apprehensions in English ministerial circles. The record of Hanotaux, the new French minister of foreign affairs, places him in the front rank as a combatant of English occupation of Egypt and generally an enemy of England wherever the latter comes into competing contact with France.

A great drought in the far western part of Nebraska is reported. The farmers have been unable to raise a crop or obtain water for stock. As a consequence hundreds of farms in Lincoln and adjoining counties are being deserted by their tenants, who are moving eastward in wagons. No rain has fallen in weeks, and all vegetation is parched. Other portions of the state fare very much better, but in many places the small grain is a failure.

The strike at Cripple Creek Col., has been settled. A conference was held and at it Governor Waite announced that he was authorized to act for the miners. Only one point caused serious complications, the allowance of lunch time, the miners demanding thirty minutes. The article of agreement, as adopted, provide that the miners shall work eight hours, with twenty minutes for luncheon; that they be paid the rate of $3 a day and that the mine owners shall not discriminate against either union or non-union men.

F. A. Coffin, P. B. Coffin and Albert S. Reed, the convicted bank looters, were arraigned in court at Indianapolis Tuesday for sentence. Francis Coffin got ten years and Percival Coffin five years, while Reed, who was merely a tool of the Coffins, was released on suspended sentence, mercy being shown in his case. The three men are accused, as officers of the Indianapolis Cabinet company, with aiding Theodore P. Haughey in wrecking the Indianapolis National bank, of which the latter was president.

The voters of Oregon elected their entire state ticket Tuesday—two members of congress, one supreme court judge and full county and municipal tickets. Owing to the great extent of the flood it will be a week or more before the full returns are received. Thirty-one hundred and seventy-six names on the ballot. It is safe to say that the republicans have elected the entire ticket. For the past eight years, two terms, Pennoyer, populist, had been governor. The rest of the ticket, except the attorney general, has been republican.

AGAINST REPEAL.

AND BANKERS MUST PAY TAX ON CIRCULATING MEDIUM.

The Vote Was 102 to 170—Brawley's Bill Also Defeated.

By a vote of 102 to 170 the house Wednesday afternoon voted down the bill unconditionally repealing the state bank tax. The majority against the bill was 68. Its defeat was expected, having been predicted for several days. It was due to the fact that the northern democrats abandoned the plank of the democratic platform. Amos Cummings, of New York, was one of a half dozen northern democrats who voted for the bill. The republicans and populists voted solidly against it.

The debate closed at 2:10 o'clock, and a vote was taken on the Cox amendment to repeal the 10 per cent. tax outright. The vote was announced as yeas 102, nays 170. The announcement was received with slight applause.

BRAWLEY'S BILL FAILS.

The substitute of the committee on banking and currency for the original Brawley bill, suspending the operation of the 10 per cent tax as to the issues of certificates, etc., by clearing houses and other organizations last year, merely changing the verbiage so as to make it more explicit, was also defeated on a viva voce vote. Then the original bill was lost. This was the end of the ten days' debate and a result that occasioned some surprise, and the announcement was received amid much confusion and applause.

GROWTH OF THE SOUTH.

The Industrial Situation as Reported for the Past Week.

The review of the industrial situation in the south for the past week shows that there is no noticeable improvement in conditions. The coal strike has seriously disturbed the general situation, and miners and operators still seem far from a settlement, but no serious trouble has yet occurred, but at times it seemed imminent. As yet no industries have closed on account of scarcity of coal. The lumber market shows a little improvement.

Thirty-one new industries were established or incorporated during the week, among which may be mentioned the London National Brick, Paint and Manufacturing Company, of Lynchburg, Va., capital $100,000, the West Virginia Artificial Stone Company, Fairmount, Va., capital $100,000; the Big Birch River Lumber, Coal and Oil Company, Sutton W. Va., capital $100,000; the G. A. Ducker Manufacturing Company, San Antonio, Tex., capital $50,000, and an electric lighting plant at Paris, Tenn., capital $40,000. Brick works are to be established at Broadway, Va.; bottling works at Terrell, Texas; electric plants at Lexington, Ky., and Water Valley, Miss.; a corn and flouring mill at Ronda, N. C., and flouring mills at Pulaski, Tenn., and Houston, Va. A plant to manufacture scales and cars will be erected at Galveston, Texas; fence works at Greenville, S. C.; a binding wood factory at Suffolk, Va.; a mess factory at Morgan City, La.; a machine shop at Cordele, Ga., and a paper mill at Baton Rouge, La.; sugar refineries at Baton Rouge and Broussard, La.; a new basting mill at Terrell, Texas, and a tobacco factory at Calhoun, La. New woodworking plants are reported at Buena Vista, Va., Bell's Depot, Tenn., Russellville, Ky., Charlotte Harbor, Fla., and Sutton, W. Va. Water works will be built at Cuthbert, Ga., Boneoverte, W. Va., and Starke, Fla.

Among the enlargements reported are a foundry and machine shop at Jeffson, Texas; oil mills at Rush Point, La., San Marcos, Texas, West Point, Ga., and West Point, Miss.; a cotton compress at Eutow, Ala.; cotton mill at Augusta, Ga., and lumber company at Bolinger, Ark.

The new buildings reported include a $20,000 church at Georgetown, Ky., a $25,000 college at West Point, Miss.; a $55,000 court house at Brazoria, Texas, and a 25,000 hospital at Knoxville, Tenn. A $3,000 sanitarium is reported at Atlanta, Ga., and a $31,000 warehouse at New Orleans, La. School buildings to cost $10,000 each will be built at Covington, Tenn., Forrest City, Ark., and Louisville, Ky.—Tradesman (Chattanooga, Tenn.)

THE CENTRAL'S EARNINGS.

The Property Make a Fine Showing Under Good Management.

The third quarterly report of the receivers of the Central railroad, covering earnings for January, February and March, 1894, has just been published. Net earnings of the Central main stem for the three months are $282,871.90; net earnings for entire system for nine months ending March 31st are $1,667,751.18. All the lines except the Chattanooga, Rome and Columbus, show net earnings for the three months. The earnings for the entire system are getting close to the $2,000,000 mark, which the receivers are attempting to earn to make a good showing before the reorganization committee.

A FATAL WRECK

In Which Eight are Killed and Fifteen or Twenty Injured.

An accident resulting in the loss of eight lives and the injury of fifteen to twenty persons, more or less seriously, occurred at Marshfield, Wis. Train No. 26, on the Wisconsin Central railway went through an open switch and was completely wrecked. The cars afterward took fire and were consumed. Four persons were taken from the wreck dead and four others are missing, supposed to have been caught in the mass of broken timbers and crushed. Among the dead are the engineer, fireman and one of the Tweedy brothers.

Battle With Miners.

One dead body, several men on the verge of the grave, a number of others seriously injured, $30,000 worth of property absolutely destroyed, and many homes made desolate was the result of an attempt made Wednesday by the miners of the Peoria district to close the mine operated by Little Bros., in Tazewell county, Ill.

Breckinridge Turned Down.

The town of Fulton, Ill., some time since invited W. C. P. Breckinridge to deliver a fourth of July oration in the town. The invitation, which was accepted, has since been withdrawn, and Colonel Breckinridge will not be called upon to make the oration.

NEWS OF THE SOUTH

BRIEFLY EPITOMIZED IN PUNGENT PARAGRAPHS

Chronicling Events of Special Interest to Our Readers.

George H. Donnell, of Mississippi, has been appointed chief clerk of the census bureau at $2,500 per annum. James H. Wardle, of New York, whom Donnell succeeds, has been transferred to the pension office.

All the miners in the Coal Creek district who joined the strike for the second time last week returned to work Monday morning. The Jellico miners, however, are still out, and propose to stay out until a national settlement is made.

A Jackson, Miss., special says: The railroad commission in session in that city has taken under consideration the annual assessment of telegraph, express, railroad and sleeping car companies within the state. It is believed that the existing rates will not be disturbed.

A chapter of the Railway Employes' Protective Association has been organized at Montgomery, Ala., with a membership of several hundred. This is the second chapter organized in Alabama. The first is at Birmingham. The national constitution and the by-laws of the state organization of Georgia were adopted, with some local additions. The organizers will next direct their attention to the South Georgia and Florida cities.

A rousing meeting of Hamilton county, Tenn., populists was held in Chattanooga Saturday and endorsed Colonel Mimms, of Nashville, for governor and chose delegates to the third district congressional convention. Frank Dickey, of Monroe county, who made the race in 1892; ex-Governor Sherwood, of Franklin county, and others are mentioned to make the race for congress. Judge R. C. McRee was named for chancellor.

A dispatch from Purvis, Miss., says: There are at present hiding in the bushes around the little interior village of Columbia, about eighty white-caps, all armed to the teeth. They are said to be holding consultations among themselves, endeavoring to decide the best method to pursue in order to rid themselves of prosecution at the special term of court. The sheriff has been furnished with the names of about 250 of this lawless band.

A decision has been rendered in the federal court at Chattanooga, Tenn., involving $2,000,000. The style of the consolidated causes was the Central Trust Company, of New York, and Ferdinand Schumacher et al. vs. the East Tennessee Land Company, of Harriman, Tenn., and the contest was upon the application of Philip S. Mason, of Knoxville, for the removal of A. A. Hopkins and W. H. Russell, as receivers. The petition was granted.

The steamer of J. O'Connel with Frye's commonweal army arrived at Parkersburg, W. Va., Sunday morning. The city officials supplied the army with provisions, but refused to permit them to land. The leaders said that the contract with the steamer was to land the army at Marietta, where they would embark and go overland to Pittsburg. The boat, however, landed the army three miles above Parkersburg. The army sent a committee back to Parkersburg asking permission to return, but this was refused.

Fire at the Laconia car works at Laconia, New Hampshire, burned over $100,000 worth of property; insurance, $50,000. The car company's loss includes three large buildings in the passenger car department, their entire malleable iron foundry plant, with patterns, etc., and two small dwelling houses. A large refrigerator building and office owned by the Swift Beef Company is a total loss. The fire started in the paint shop in the car works. There are indications of incendiarism.

James Plunkett and J. F. Glover, two white men, charged with counterfeiting and passing counterfeit dollars, were given a preliminary hearing at Savannah, Ga., Tuesday and sent to jail. George Johnson, a negro, was the only witness against them. According to his story they had at the time he met them more than 300 counterfeit dollars, some of which he brought into Savannah. The negro's character has been proven bad, however, and his story is believed to be a concoction to shield himself and some comrades.

The Houston, Tex., Post, whose crop report last season proved to be accurate as to acreage and yield, will publish the first report of the crop of 1894. The reports are from every cotton growing county in Texas and are full and complete. With scarcely an exception there is general increase in acreage, aggregating, on a conservative estimate, at least 10 per cent, some of the largest cotton producing counties in the state showing an increase of 25 per cent. In one county where no cotton was raised last year 10,000 acres are under cultivation this year.

Servian Cabinet Goes Under.

A cable dispatch from Sofia says: The resignation of M. Stambuloff's ministry was due entirely to personal friction between the several members. M. Giekoff has declined to undertake the reconstruction of the cabinet and has advised Prince Ferdinand to summon some representative of the opposition for that purpose. The change in ministry will not affect the foreign relations of the country.

Heavy Loss By Fire.

The city of St. Johns, N. B., suffered from another fire Sunday morning, the total loss being estimated at $250,000.

BECAUSE WE LOVE.

Sweetheart of mine, since we were wed
The second summer now is here,
And love grows stronger every year.
We are so happy, sweet, I said:
Why is it? And she answered low,
Because we love each other so.

Oft have I heard the moaning dove
Call her lost mate from out the wood
She suffered, felt, and understood;
For she was filled with grief and love
Such sorrow may we never know,
Because we love each other so.

A Novel Engine.

A most curious invention is on exhibition in Alton, Ill., the results of some investigations into mechanics made by Charles F. Sparks, of the Sparks Milling Company, who is a fine machinist. It is known as the "revolver engine," and is a high speed machine, compact in form and of great power. In appearance it resembles the cylinder of a revolver, with the spindle, or piston, running through the center just as does the pin on which the cylinder of a revolver turns. At one end of the cylinder is bolted a plate in which are perforations, one for each chamber, and these perforations admit the steam at an angle which forces the cylinder to revolve, while at the other end is one perforation in the shell, which covers all, which allows the steam to escape. At the first mentioned end, where the revolving piston merges from the cylinder, is attached the connection from which the power is taken, while the other end of the piston controls by means of cog gearing the governor. This is all there is to the engine, and to say that it runs with a "whiz" is putting it mildly. An eight-horse power engine of this make has recently been put into the packing and refrigerating house of Louer Brothers to run the dynamo which furnishes them with electric lights, and gives the finest satisfaction, while the Bingham Machine Company's new making one of two-horse power, which will be placed in a locker of the ginny yonder Glad Tidings to run a dynamo for lighting the [illegible]

COMMISSIONER OF AGRICULTURE,
HECTOR D. LANE,

We welcome Mr. Chappel Cory back to the editorial staff of the Age-Herald. He is one of the truest men ever reared on Southern soil; a man who loves his state and serves her truly.

If the Democrats in Chilton County will only organize their forces and make suitable use of the material at hand it will be comparatively an easy matter to win the fight. Whenever the principles and practices of the Democratic party are properly taught victory is always assured.

P. G. Bowman, the political agitator, fills a felons cell, having on the night of the 12th inst., in a bar in Birmingham, shot and killed in cold blood young Tom Jeffers. Bowman had previously insulted and knocked down the aged father of the young man, who went in search of Bowman to demand an apology for his action, and was killed as he entered the bar.

The Democratic tariff reformers are beginning to see victory just ahead. Republicans and a few high tariff Democrats have obstructed legislation about as long as they can. Cotton bagging was on Monday last put on the free list. Thus inch by inch Democrats are redeeming their pledges and proving themselves to be the friends of the people. The markets of the world are now open to the farmer so that high priced bagging is henceforth an impossibility.

Since the nomination of Hon. W. C. Oates for Governor of Alabama, personal preference has been laid aside and harmony is fully restored to the Democratic household. It is the sublime purpose of every white man in Alabama, to stand by, with that courage which is known only to Southern manhood, that friend, the Democratic party that stood so faithfully by him in those times that tried men's souls, that rescued him from negro domination, restored to him his proud Caucassion color, and that while he cherishes with a holy affection his manhood, that friendly sentinel who has for so long watched at the gates of his life, liberty, and pursuit of happiness and has so long held in abeyance the enemies of virtue, intelligence and white supremacy.

The striking miners in Alabama have reached the danger line. In order, if possible, to create a coal panic and thus carry their point they are burning and blowing up railroad bridges on the lines running through the mineral district. They care neither for life nor property. They have a right to quit work if they wish, but when they interfere with the person or property of others, then the law must compel them to cease. Alabama is no place for such anarchists, and when Kolb and Bowman pander to their prejudices and seek to encourage their deeds of lawlessness they lose friends among law-abiding people. The so-called reformers in their desperation after votes are sneering at Governor Jones and his "tin soldiers" crying out to the people "no danger," yet in the face of all such claims lives are taken and property is being destroyed, all of which lawlessness is traceable directly to the striking miners. Gov. Jones has acted wisely and will if possible prevent any serious bloodshed, but he needs the influence of every law-abiding man in Alabama. This is no political matter, the very good order and life of our people are threatened and as citizens we must each do our duty.

Moral and Political Cowardice.

North Alabamian.

Among the followers of Kolb there are some worthy, clever men, who, when confronted by the damaging and unimpeachable testimony as to their leader's bad character, admit it, but justify their support of him by saying that they are engaged in a great reform movement, and it is not material who leads it. This argument is as damaging to their intelligence as their votes for Kolb will be to their honesty. With just as much consistency they could support W. C. P. Breckinridge as the leader of reform on the issue of Social Purity.

The Supreme Court Reports of this state cannot be made the source of what the Kolbites call "campaign lies," and the man who denies that Kolb defrauded Smith, the Eutaula carpenter, out of the cost of building him a house, and a weak, ignorant old farmer out of a much larger sum which was due him for a farm sold to Kolb, does so in the face of the 58th Volume of Alabama Reports and puts himself down on a level with a disgraced man, whose elevation to the high office of Governor would be a crime and disgrace to our State.

Nor are the above the only charges which should disqualify Kolb from holding any office or prevent honest truthful men from voting for him. Major Gorman, a well-known ex-Confederate soldier of Birmingham, entered actively on the canvass in Kolb's behalf two years ago, and probably did more effective work for him than any one of his friends. He had never seen the proof of the charges against Kolb until the close of the canvass in Tuskaloosa county, when one night at the hotel in Tuskaloosa, some one thrust a paper under the door of the room in which he and Kolb were staying, containing Charley Lane's famous rabbit or skunk story, with Capt. Guice's exposure of Kolb in the celebrated cotton case. Gorman then told him that he had heard enough of these charges and he, Kolb, must explain them, as he had always claimed he could do. "My dearest earthly friend, Gorman," said he, "as God is my witness I never had anything to do with that cotton transaction; my dead partner was the man." Gorman believed him and continued to canvass with him until a few days later, when a letter from Kolb appeared in the Age-Herald admitting that he and not his dead partner, was the man who falsified the cotton weights, and alleging as his excuse, that he only did it to catch his merchants in Savannah whom he suspected of cheating, and yet Capt. Guice testifies that he only got his money back by threatening Kolb with the penitentiary. On seeing Kolb's admission, Major Gorman repudiated him and went back and stumped Tuskaloosa for Jones, telling the people that he had unwittingly told him lies, and that he had returned to take back all he had said to them in Kolb's favor. He had vouched for Kolb as an honest and truthful man, but he had found that he was neither. We got these statements from the lips of Major Gorman in Montgomery and believe them to be literally and exactly true.

Now, then, gentlemen of the opposition what say you? Can you afford to risk your own private reputations by any kind of endorsement of this man?

If the moral obliquity of Kolb does not deter you from his support, how about voting for a subsidized tool of that arch enemy of the South, and of everything Democratic, Geo. F. Hoar?

No true Southern man, nor any one having one drop of Jeffersonian or any other kind of Democratic blood in their veins, will for one instant think of doing so. Read the cold, naked, shameless letter from Hoar, published in this issue, and if you think of burning the bridge behind you, do it boldly, and don't deceive yourself, alone, like the fellow who dyes his hair. No very acute powers of discrimination are needed to demonstrate the fact, that politics, morality and religion are debauched whenever you knowingly vote for dishonest or untruthful men.

The downcast look and narrow furtive glances of the fellow who claims to be a Democrat, and yet says he will vote for Kolb, indicates very clearly that he is conscious-stricken, but hasn't got the manhood either to confess his mistake and renew his allegiance to his party, or to come out boldly and say that he is a Rad. If he is a married man, ten to one his wife has no respect for him—knowing that she has far more sense, backbone and principle than the weak-kneed creature to whom she is unfortunately tied. Most white men have personal and family pride enough to make them desirous of leaving an honorable record of their lives to their children, and when any are known to be indifferent in this particular, it remains for a good wife to save her children from the influence and example of a wavering, wishy-washy, characterless father. Be a man of courage, if nothing else. A go-between is despised by everybody, and there will be few mourners at his funeral. He will be as little missed as an old balky horse—worth more after death than before. You can't serve two masters in politics any more than in religion, and there are only two between which to choose.—Choose ye this day whom ye will serve. Will it be your arch old enemy the Republican party of Hoar and Kolb, or the grand old Democratic party which rescued you and your family from the horrors of Hayti and San Domingo in 1874? If you are in doubt let your wife answer.

Cleveland in Georgia.

Mobile Register.

The following is a text of a telegram from Atlanta to the New Orleans Picayune of Saturday.

"The victory of Col. Oates in Alabama has created a stampede in the anti-administration forces here in Georgia that has greatly disconcerted these gentlemen, who have been so vigorously objecting to Mr. Cleveland and every thing that he has done. Up to within the last two weeks it has seemed apparent that the sentiment of Georgia was against the administration and that resolutions condemning Mr. Cleveland's position on the financial question would undoubtedly, when the convention met, be adopted, and this would have been the result but for the turn affairs took in Alabama. While it is true that a very great many Democrats in Georgia differ with Mr. Cleveland in their financial views, as they are generally accredited to him, it is also true that the Democrats of the South believe in standing to and supporting the man who they have put in power, and it is true that among the conservative members of the party there are many strong administration men. So strong has been the sentiment against the latter, however, that they have been very quiet. The splendid victory won in Alabama has had a magic effect upon them and as soon as the news came that Oates had won Cleveland men seemed to spring up in every nook and corner of the State. They were quiet before, they are aggressive now, and the conservative element, which as differing to details, stand really strong at the back of the administration, has now come out strongly in favor of endorsing President Cleveland. Such action will undoubtedly go through the State Convention when it assembles here. The gubernatorial fight now waging has pretty clearly developed into a contest between administration and anti administration. General Evans who represents the soldier element; has in his speeches condemned the administration. Speaker Atkinson, though not agreeing with the administration's financial policy represents a more conservative element and is being supported by the administration people throughout the State. There is every reason to believe that he will be elected, and the indications now are that Judge Turner, the most prominent administration man in the State, will be elected to the Senate."

It was but a few days ago—Tuesday morning last, we think—that the Atlanta Constitution expressed its lively concern over the result of the recent primaries and actions of county conventions in Alabama. The Constitution excused the interest it took in this matter, by asserting that its Alabama circulation was larger than all the papers in Alabama combined, and that it was bound on this account to see that the "suckers" Democrats—so it styled the regular Democracy of Alabama—did not succeed in their effort to keep the State party in line with the National Democracy. The article was thoroughly impudent in thought and expression and from it one could gather but one idea, namely that the Constitution carried away by its prejudices against the President, who had selected the editor of a rival paper as one of his cabinet and advisers, was straining every nerve to humiliate and bring into disrepute the great man who heads our administration. Fortunate, the people of Alabama do not take their party gospel from the Atlanta Constitution, and their recent action on Wednesday last demonstrated that one fact. We note also that the Georgians are pretty much of the same mind. We advise the Constitution that it will have full use of its large circulation at home if it hopes to save itself from being rebuked by Georgia as it has been rebuked by Alabama.

CURES
CANCER

Keyesville, Fla. April 17th, 1894.
Messrs. Dubois and webb, Louisville, Ky.—Dear Sirs: "About eleven months ago I bought from you an Electropoise for the purpose of treating cancer. I had one of about ten years' standing, and it had reached a stage where it was making rapid progress, being about the size of a silver dollar. I knew that I had to do something or my time was about up, and you being the only party that I corresponded with that would give me any assurance of a cure, got my patronage. I am now happy to inform you that the cancer is no more, the Electropoise arrested the progress of the cancer perceptibly in about thirty-six to forty-eight hours and gradually and slowly grew less until now there is a place about the size of a pin head that is not quite healed but gradually closing up. You can use this or any part of it as a testimonial if you wish. Very truly yours M. M. Lillibridge."

D. A. Bryant, Hackneyville:—"I was badly crippled with rheumatism, also had a bad kidney trouble, I was helpless and could do no work. The Electropoise cured me and enabled me to work regularly.

Rev. W. C. Hearn, Talledega,—"For producing calm refreshing sleep and curing sciatic rheumatism the Electropoise can not be equaled.

Joseph Williams, Stevenson—"I can walk all over town and even run, whereas a few weeks ago I was a helpless cripple, the electropoise did it."

Mrs. W. P. Nelson, Sunshine.—"My recovery was wonderful. I have also tried the electropoise on several of my neighbors, for various ailments, nausea, kidney trouble of the worst form, all with the most gratifying results."

DR. G. C. OSGOOD,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE,
Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

Everyone who can spare the time should attend the Baptist rally at this place which begins to-day and closes Sunday night. Prominent speakers will be present and the occasion will be one of benefit and pleasure.

One of the most highly enjoyed picnics of the season by the little folks was the one given by Miss Blanche Foshee in the shady woods back of Mr. Jno. Goodgame's last Saturday. Misses Julia Hester and Norma Thomas chaperoned the crowd.

A serious accident occured at Ehrman mill last Saturday, as the log-engine on its out-going trip, left the track and capsized. Death was narrowly averted by some aboard the train, and others sustain painful injuries. The engine was badly damaged.

The first session in the history of the University School closed on last Wednesday, June 6th, and now those scholars who have so assiduously applied themselves during the term are at liberty to take a rest and enjoy their vacation.

Wednesday morning public reception was given at the school building; at 11:30 an oration was eloquently delivered at the court house by Mr. F. Baldwin, of Verbena, after which friends and patrons of the University were invited to attend the closing exercises at 8:00 p. m. in Mullin's Hall, and at the appointed hour the largest assembly ever seen in the hall was present.

At 8:30 sharp the curtain was drawn, and Master Arthur Johnson was the first speaker to appear upon the stage, and by his manly speech convinced the audience that he wasn't, and "Wouldn't be a Girl." A song by the wee maidens followed the speech, when Master Ed Hare delivered in detail the suffrage, afflictions and confliction of "Young America." Grandpa's Birthday was a lovely scene and was beautifully portrayed by a merry group of 2-score grandchildren. Little Miss Bessie Merritt especially showed her affections for grandpa, and played her part to perfection, while the songs by the different little girls were beautifully sung.

The direction given to Strasburg by Mr. Jesse Ray digressed, somewhat from the course of a straight and narrow path, and included all the by-ways.

"Before and Behind the Scenes," was played by Misses Bradley, Rasberry, Messrs. Massey and Pinkard. The piece was illustrative of the affectionate husband and wife in public and the querulous words of praise received in private.

Rum's Work," was among the best plays of the evening, and the slave to the wine cup was well represented by Mr. Will Logan.

"The Troubles of a Tramp," was a comic play and was skillfully played by the actors.

The time and perfection with which each lad and maiden acquitted themselves in the calisthenics drill showed the pains their teacher had taken in them, and brought down the house in the loudest encomium during the evening exercise.

The recitation by Miss Blanche Foshee was perfectly and pathetically recited.

The Cadet Picnic was the closing scence, in which the entire school participated, presenting a beautiful picture.

The Clanton String Band honored the occasion with excellent music.

Each scholar acquitted himself creditably and praiseworthy, during the entertainment, and reflected upon their teachers showers of words in extolment. After the close of the exercise Prof. McMorries stepped upon the stage, and in a brief and most appreciative manner thanked the friends and patrons of the University for the assistance and co-operation given him during the past year. He said that he felt that the efforts on his part had been amply repaid, and that the encouragement he had received caused him to entertain brilliant hopes for the University in the future and would animate him to greater efforts for the upbuilding of his school than ever before. Entire satisfaction has been given by Prof. McMorries, wife and son; and that at last our people are united upon the subject of a good school, can appreciate one, and good, earnest, hard-working teachers in the cause, is a fact that should be most highly commended.

Col. Oates, while on his way back to Washington stopped over in Atlanta and while there he was interviewed on the political situation:

Yes, I did say that the money power had the government by the leg, and I say it again; but the responsibility for that state of affairs belongs to the republican party, not to Mr. Cleveland."

The speaker was Col. William C. Oates, member of congress and nominee of the Alabama Democracy for the governorship of that state.

"Yes," he continued, "I did say it and while the words were not Mr. Cleveland's—I have been quoted as saying they were—the sentiment was his."

"I have talked a good deal with Mr. Cleveland," continued Col. Oates, "and in discussing the financial situation and the condition of the treasury, he has gone so far as to say, in strong language that is characteristic of the man, that the New York banks have such control of the situation, that he, the president didn't know what to do."

Recuring to the financial question at the suggestion of an interviewer, Col. Oates said.

"I do not agree with Mr. Cleveland on all phases of the money question. He is in favor of bimetalism only after international agreement. I disagree withhim therefore I believe that we can have the free coinage of gold and silver, maintaining the two dollars at a parity, independent of the rest of the world. I wrote the silver plank in the platform we adopted at Montgomery, which says: 'While there are differences of opinion among in matters of detail, we all believe in the free coinage of silver whenever it can be done consistently with the maintenance of a sound and safe currency.'

"I believe, as I have always said, continued Col. Oates, "that Mr. Cleveland is a friend to silver. I know he is for he told me so. The mistake that he has made is that he has kept his views to himself and has not let the people know just where he stood and where he now stands. I don't think that he should have vetoed the seinorage bill, and I voted to pass that bill over his veto; not that I consider that the bill makes much difference in the money situation, but because I believed its passage and approval by the President would have gone a long way towards reconciling the differences in our party at the South. He has said that he favored internal agreement, but in my opinion he has not gone sufficiently into details concerning his position on the financial question to suit the people and therein has been a good deal of the opposition to him. What is or is not good for his party has no influence whatever on him; he does just as he thinks is right and lets no other consideration affect his actions."

A MIRACLE IN MISSOURI.

THE ACHIEVEMENTS OF MEDICAL SCIENCE FAR MORE WONDERFUL THAN THE MAGIC OF THE EAST.

The Remarkable Experience of Past Master Woodson, of Panama, Mo.—For Ten Years a Cripple—To-Day A Well and Hearty Man.

(From the Kansas City Times.)

The people of Rich Hill, Mo., and vicinity have recently been startled by a seeming miracle of healing. For years one of the best known men in Bates and Vernon counties has been Mark M. Woodson, now post master of Panama, and brother of ex-State inspector of Mines, C. C. Woodson, of this city. The people of Rich Hill, where he formerly resided, and of his present home, remember well the bent form, misshapen almost from the semblance of man, which has painfully bowed its head half to earth and labored snail-like across the walks season after season, and when one day last month it straightened to its full height, threw away the heavy butt of cane which for years had been its only support from total helplessness, and walked erect, firmly, unhesitatingly about the two cities, people looked and wondered. The story of the remarkable case has become the marvel of the two counties. Exactly as Mr. Woodson told it to a Times reporter, it is here published:

"For ten years I have suffered the torments of the damned and have been a useless invalid; to-day I am a well and hearty man, free from almost every touch of pain. I don't think man ever suffered more acute and constant agony than I have since 1884. The rheumatism started then in my right knee, and after weeks of suffering in bed I was at last relieved sufficiently to arise, but it was only to get about on crutches for five years, the ailment having settled in the joint. Despite constant treatment of the most eminent physicians the rheumatism grew worse, and for the last four years I have been compelled to go about bent half toward the ground. In the winter of 1890-91, after the rheumatism had settled into its most chronic form, I went to Kansas City upon advice of my brother, and for six weeks I was treated in one of the largest and best known dispensaries of that city, but without the slightest improvement. Before I came home I received a strong galvanic battery, this I used for months with the same result. In August, 1892, I went to St. Louis, and there conferred with the widely known Dr. Mudd of hospital practice fame, and Dr. Kale of the city hospital. None of them would take my case with any hope of affording me more than temporary relief, and so I came home, weak, doubled with pain, helpless and despondent.

"About this time my attention was called to the account of a remarkable cure by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People of locomotor ataxia, rheumatism and paralysis. I ordered some of the pills as an experiment. When I began to take them, the rheumatism had developed into a phase of paralysis; my leg from the thigh down was cold all the time and could not be kept warm. In a short time the pills were gone and so was the cane. I was able to attend to the duties of my office, to get about as a well and strong man. I was free from pain and I could enjoy a sound and restful night's sleep, something I had not known for ten years. To-day am practically, and, I firmly believe, permanently cured of my terrible and agonizing ailment. No magician of the Far East ever wrought the miracle with his wand that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills did for me."

To verify the story beyond all question or doubt Mr. Woodson made the following affidavit:

STATE OF MISSOURI, } ss.
COUNTY OF BATES, }

I, M. M. Woodson, being duly sworn on my oath, state that the following statements are true and correct as I verily believe.

M. M. WOODSON.

About Bad Roads.

An exchange indulges in the following sage observation, which we believe will receive hearty endorsement most any spring: "Bad roads lead to profanity; they make men swear. Bad roads lead to intemperance; men think it is necessary to fortify the inner man with a number of drinks to enable them to stand a long journey through the mud. Bad roads lead to cruelty; the kindest hearted driver often has to stimulate his team with the lash. Bad roads lead to poverty; the wear and tear on wagons, harness and animals knock of a large per cent of profit."

CONGRESSIONAL.

DAILY PROCEEDINGS OF BOTH HOUSE AND SENATE.

The Discussion of Important Measures Briefly Epitomized.

In the house, Friday, Mr. Strauss, of New York, offered a joint resolution on the extradition treaty with Russia, and it was referred to the committee on foreign affairs. After a call of committees for reports, Mr. Enloe, of Tennessee, antagonized Mr. Springer's motion to take up the bank tax bill, by a motion to consider bills on the private calendar. The vote on a division was, yeas 60, noes 93. Mr. Reed demanded a vote by yeas and nays. The motion was defeated, and the house proceeded to consider the bank tax bill. Mr. Wheeler, of Alabama, was entitled to the floor, but relinquished it in favor of Mr. Brosius, of Pennsylvania, a member of the committee on banking and currency, announcing that he would finish his own speech at a later period.

The house went into committee of the whole at Saturday's session to further consider the bill to repeal the state bank tax act, and Mr. Islar, of South Carolina, continued his remarks begun Friday in favor of the repeal.

The house renewed consideration of the bill to repeal the state bank tax act at Monday's session, the first speaker being Mr. Dassell, who sustained the constitutionality of the law. Mr. Holman gave notice that he would, on Tuesday, call up the Indian appropriation bill for consideration.

In the house, Tuesday, the committee on rules reported an order limiting debate on the bill to repeal the state bank tax to Wednesday's session, the vote on the amendments and passage of the bill to be taken immediately upon meeting. General leave to print remarks within a period of ten days is given. Mr. Reed said that he desired to call attention to the frequent use of this method of closing debate in the house with nearly one hundred majority, a method so at variance with the good old methods we used to revere. But he expressed his satisfaction at the manifestation of a desire on the part of the democrats to reach an opportunity to repudiate another plank of their platform. For, if ever there was a platform that deserved stigmatizing in the house of its friends, it was the platform on which the democrats believed they were returned to power. Mr. Catchings, responding to Mr. Reed, said that he acknowledged with regret that the probabilities were that the repeal of the tax would not be adopted. But he desired to say to him and the gentlemen on the republican side that the time would soon come when currency of this country in volume sufficient to do the business of the country would be issued by some other system of banks than that now in existence. The financiel thought of the country was turning, he said, to the necessity for relief in this direction. The resolution was agreed to and the substitute of the committee on banking and currency for the original Brawley bill and the amendment of Mr. Cox, of Tennessee, to repeal the tax law outright, were formally laid before the house for consideration.

The bill to repeal the bank tax act was taken up in the house at 12:30 Wednesday, Mr. Turner, of Georgia, having fifteen minutes in which to speak in favor of the repeal and there being an hour and a quarter for argument against repeal. Mr. Meiklejohn, republican, of Nebraska, speaking of the probable conditions under which state bank issues would be made in case the system was rehabilitated, called attention to a bank law passed by the Georgia legislature last December, in expectation of the repeal of the state bank tax. That law, he said, authorized a bank with one one-quarter of its capital in national bonds, one-quarter in state, county or municipal bonds of the state and one-half in currency, to issue, upon the deposit of the bonds with the state treasury, notes the amount of three times the security. The subject was further discussed by Mr. Bingham, republican, of Pennsylvania, Mr. Hall, democrat, of Missouri, Mr. Robinson, republican, of Pennsylvania, and Mr. Cockran, democrat, of New York. The debate closed at 2:30 and the vote taken, resulting in 102 yeas; 170 nays, a majority against repeal of 68 votes.

THE SENATE.

In the senate, Friday, the resolution offered by Mr. Call went over till Saturday for the appointment of a select committee of five senators to investigate the subject of the organized efforts of corporations to control the elections of state legislators and members of congress and whether corrupt means, such as bribery by free transportation and the subsidizing of newspapers, has been resorted to and whether such acts are consistent with the preservation of the republic of the United States and the rights and liberties of the people. At 10:40 the tariff bill was laid before the senate, the sugar schedule being the pending question, and Mr. Manderson proceeded to speak upon it.

In the senate, Saturday Mr. Hill called up his resolution, directing the special committee to investigate the charges of bribery, senatorial speculation and the influence of the sugar trust in the framing of the sugar schedule, to throw open its doors while testimony was being taken. He took the floor in support of the resolution. He argued that the terms of the resolution under which the special committee was appointed neither authorized nor refused authority for secret sessions. The senate made laws in the interest of the public. Why should not the committees investigate in the eyes of the public? The discussion was further continued by Messrs. Gray, Lodge, Allen and Hill. Then Mr. Gordon, of Georgia, asked unanimous consent that the resolution be voted on without further debate. Mr. Dolph objected and argued in favor of bringing the contumacious witnesses before the senate and punishing them for contempt. Then Mr. Gordon renewed his suggestion, and Washburn objected. The resolution went over without action.

The first business done by the senate Monday was the passage of a joint resolution appropriating $10,000 for the expenses of the inspection and investigation ordered by the senate. The tariff bill was taken up, and the amendments to paragraph 158, offered by the finance committee, changing the time when the repeal of the sugar bounty is to take effect from July 1st, 1894, to June 1st, 1895, was agreed to. Subsequently by unanimous consent, that action was reconsidered and the amendment is still remain open. Mr. Allison took the floor and argued against the repeal of the sugar bounty and against the repeal of the sugar on the dutiable list.

The tariff bill was taken up in the senate Tuesday, the question being on Mr. Jones' amendment to the sugar schedule, postponing its going into effect from July 1, 1894, to July 1, 1895. At 1 p. m., the discussion was interrupted by the vice president with the declaration that the hour had arrived for taking a vote on the amendment offered by Mr. Jones, of Arkansas, postponing the repeal of the sugar bounty provision from July 1, 1894, to July 1, 1895. The vote was taken by yeas and nays, and the amendment was agreed to; yeas 34, nays 31. Mr. Peffer, of Arkansas, voted with the republicans. Mr. Manderson offered an amendment to continue the sugar bounty in full force and effect until July 1, 1895. It was rejected; yeas 32, nays 40.

In the senate, Wednesday, the tariff bill was taken up at 10:30, the question being on the tobacco schedule. Considerable discussion was had on each paragraph and some changes were made. The next schedule (G) "agricultural products and provisions," was then taken up.

The wheat crop of Dallas county, Texas, is now being harvested. It will sum up 600,000 bushels more than last year. The commercial value is 400,000. This is the finest crop produced in forty years.

The Kansas republican state convention, in session at Topeka, Wednesday, nominated Congressman E. N. Morrill for governor and W. A. Johnson, of Minneapolis, for associate justice of the supreme court.

The Mississippi railroad commission completed its schedule of assessments of the railroad, sleeping car, telegraph and express companies, but it has not given its conclusion to the public. It is believed, however, that there has been no material change from the schedule of last year anywhere along the long.

The commencement exercises at the Greensboro, N. C., Female college were formally opened Wednesday morning by the baccalaureate sermon by Bishop Fitzgerald, of Atlanta. The speaker took for his text, "Her price is far above rubies." The bishop devoted a great deal of his time to a protest against woman's suffrage.

Owing to the scarcity of coal from the great coal strike, the Mobile and Ohio railroad shops at Jackson, Tenn., have laid off thirty-five men. Two or three trains have also been taken off. The Jackson waterworks are mixing wood and coal. The Illinois Central railroad is hauling its coal stowed along the southern divisions to the Chicago division. Factories are finding it difficult to get coal.

The National tube works at McKeesport, Pa., were surrounded by a crowd of at least 5,000 strikers and sympathizers Wednesday night. The men were nervous and anxious, but in no way desperate. No trouble is looked for unless an attempt is made to start the works. All trains are closely watched by the strikers for deputies, but as yet no deputies have arrived on the scene.

A Memphis dispatch says: The railroad war rages with increased violence. It has broken out in another spot and now Memphis consignors get the benefit of an extensive cut. The Louisville and Nashville in Memphis notified shippers that there will in a few days be put into effect a sweeping reduction in freight rates from all Ohio points and Memphis to the southwest territory.

Governor Tillman, of South Carolina, was interviewed Wednesday on his return from New York. He said that dispensaries and high license will be the issue in the fall campaign in South Carolina. The question will be settled by democratic primaries in August. "I will not be a candidate for governor but will be in the race for Senator Butler's seat," said the governor, "and I expect to win."

William Barr, of Terre Haute, Ind., one of the oldest and best known of Vandalia engineers, was instantly killed by striking coal miners. Barr was bringing west a special train of sixteen coal cars. Since the strike trainmen have been compelled to dodge rocks thrown at them by miners on almost every run. When the train was between Harmony and Knightsville the engineer and fireman were made the target for a number of rocks thrown by a group of strikers. Barr had just dodged one rock and was in the act of rising when he was struck and instantly killed.

BIG STEEL PLANT

To Cost a Million Dollars to be Built at Bessemer, Ala.

A Montgomery special says: The stockholders of the Bessemer, Ala., Land Company at their annual meeting have resolved to build a million-dollar steel plant, with a capacity of 300 tons daily, and giving employment to 1,000 men. The company proposes to put up a half million in cash and to raise a half million on thirty year bonds. The plant will be owned wholly by the Bessemer company and no outside parties will be asked to subscribe for stock. H. F. DeBardeleben, the prime developer of the industrial region of Alabama, has been elected president of the company and will devote all of his time and his splendid capacity to making the steel mill a success. A special committee, consisting of DeBardeleben, David Roberts and A. T. Smythe, of Charleston, S. C., has been appointed to superintend the erection of the mill. They will go to work on the details without delay.

NATIONAL CAPITAL.

NEWS AND GOSSIP OF WASHINGTON CITY.

Brief Notes Concerning the Business of Our Government.

The president Monday sent to the senate the nomination of Charles Nellson, of Maryland, to be second assistant postmaster general, vice J. Lowrie Bell, resigned.

Mrs. Cleveland, accompanied by her two children, a nurse and maid, left Washington Wednesday morning in a special car over the Pennsylvania railroad for Gray Gables, Mass.

The democratic managers are becoming impatient at the time being consumed by the republicans in the discussion of the metal schedule and are beginning to talk among themselves of the advisability of prolonging the hours of debate.

District Attorney Birney concluded to lay the matter of the two correspondents who refused to answer questions asked them by the sugar investigating committee before the grand jury. Mr. Birney said he did not expect the indictment to be made out in less than ten days and it will take nearly that length of time to prepare the document.

A Washington special says: Second Assistant Postmaster General Lowrie Bell has tendered his resignation to the president through the postmaster general, to take effect at the end of the present fiscal year, June 30th, in order to accept the position of general traffic manager of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, with headquarters at New York.

Orders have been cabled to the flagship Baltimore, of the Asiatic squadron, to proceed with all possible dispatch to the coast of Corea and take whatever measures are necessary for the protection of American interests. An official note of thanks will be sent to the King of Corea for his timely warning of the rebellion of some of his subjects, which is said to be directed against Americans.

Mr. Houk, republican, of Tennessee, has introduced in the house a bill appropriating $196,000 for necessary and special facilities on trunk lines from Toledo, O., via Cincinnati, Knoxville, Chattanooga and Atlanta to New Orleans. The bill provides that no part of the appropriation shall be expended unless the postmaster general shall deem it necessary in order to promote the interest of the postal service.

The senate, Wednesday, authorized the appointment of a special committee to investigate the prevailing distress that is said to exist throughout the country and make such report thereon as seems best. This is the outgrowth of the numerous petitions presented by Senators Peffer and Allen. The vice president appointed the following senators to serve as members of the special committee: Vilas, chairman; Smith, Blackburn, Gallinger and Patton.

Strong pressure has been brought to bear upon the president within the past week to secure the removal of Civil Service Commissioner Lyman. While the objections to Mr. Lyman in the past have originated principally, although not entirely, with the opponents of the civil service, the recent efforts against him have come from the friends of the reform. It is understood that the president has given a qualified consent to Mr. Lyman's removal.

The claim for $15,000,000 filed against the Stanford estate by Attorney General Olney, as a preliminary step to enforce the government's claim against the original holders of the Central Pacific grant, has awakened much interest in San Francisco. It is now learned that the government's claim was presented on May 26th, but that an attempt was made to keep the proceeding secret, in order that the financial operations of the estate need not be embarrassed. The late Senator Stanford's estate was recently appraised at $17,000,000. Since the appraisement heavy obligations have been met, and it is stated now that the enforcement of the government claim would practically wipe out the estate.

The Atlanta Exposition Bill.

The bill appropriating $200,000 for a government exhibit at the Atlanta exposition was favorably reported Monday by the appropriation committee, but not without strong opposition on the part of nearly half of those present. The supporters of the bill were Messrs. Livingston, of Georgia; Coombs, of New York; O'Neill, of Massachusetts; Dingley, of Maine, and Cannon, of Illinois. The negative vote was cast by Messrs. Sayers, of Texas, chairman of the committee; Brookshire, of Indiana; Williams, of Illinois, and Washington, of Tennessee—all democrats. The opposition to the appropriation was based upon several considerations, briefly these: That the present is a period of great financial depression, and that the utmost economy should be used in the expenditure of public money; that the time is inopportune, coming, as it did, so closely after the World's Fair at Chicago; that each of the quartet in opposition was opposed to governmental aid for such purposes; and finally, that the means to defray expenses were too much in prospective and not sufficiently in hand to justify the belief that it would prove a success. Reference is made in this connection to the estimated receipts which were submitted by the committee which visited Washington several weeks ago. It is understood that, had the full committee been present the affirmative vote would have been materially increased. A minority report embracing the foregoing objection will be filed.

Captured by Commonwealers.

A southbound freight train on the Southern Pacific was captured below the town of Pixley, Tulare county, Col., Saturday night by 175 industrials, who stopped the train by placing obstructions on the track. The Pixley authorities were notified and early Sunday morning a posse arrived at the scene. They forced the industrials to leave the train. The men cursed of officers and declared they would yet ride out of the country.

How to Check a Runaway Horse.

As soon as the driver sees the disposition to run in the horse he is driving, let him begin the rapid jerking first on one line and then on the other, not gently but with such force as to bring the bridle-bit from one side to the other through the horse's mouth. This new motion so confuses the animal that all other fear is taken away. From many years' driving I have never found this method to fail on the most refractory horse. Of course, you should never drive any horse without the best of strong leather, that will stand any strain you need to put on it.—Farm and Fireside.

Fill in with icing, which should be fairly stiff, smooth over the top, stand in a cool oven, and when set carefully remove the paper.—Baker's Helper.

LIFE'S BITTER SWEET.

Tell me your joy, that I may tune my lite
To echo the glad music of your own,
The changing melody, the many strife
Of harmonies blent in one full sweet tone.
So shall the faithful shadow of my night
Heighten your happy radiance of delight.

Tell me your sorrow, that I may disdain
Mirth and rejoicing, banish all relief,
Save the sad ecstasy, the cruel pain
Of being one with you, dear heart, in grief.
You did deny me love—have you no woe,
No pain, to share with one who loves you so?

THE SHEIK'S DAUGHTER.

BY GENERAL BUTULER.

THE word Algeria conjures up in my mind's eye a vision of untamable lions and tigers, ruthlessly pursued and slain by modern Nimrods, "mighty hunters before the Lord"—in fact, to any one of an imaginative temperament, the name seems to suggest a series of adventures before which the most thrilling of "boys' stories" fade into insignificance.

As a matter of fact, however, the premiums paid by the French Government for the capture of these animals, and the truth that many of the natives are provided with the most improved fire-arms, have combined to make the animals extremely rare, so that hunting exploits of this nature are not only exciting, but have become a little "out of the common run."

I have always been passionately fond of hunting, and having been forced by an attack of inflammatory rheumatism to winter at Blidah, I longed, as soon as my health would be re-established, to enjoy the excitement of hunting large game. Thanks to my position as a general in the Imperial Russian Army, as well as my prominent social prestige in Europe, and perhaps also to the fact that I was well endowed with this world's goods, I found it easy to obtain the protection and assistance of the French colonial office, and in February, 1890, I started on my expedition to Schaihi, in order to hunt in the mountains south of El-Gattar, where I had heard that several tigers had lately been seen.

At Schaihi, I received from the Arabian foreign office an escort and two spahis, together with a letter of introduction to Sheik Sidi Mustapha, who had the reputation of being one of the best hunters between the Serff and Ain-Chehra, two of the larger rivers that water the province.

Although we (my military escort consisting of a corporal and three troopers) started early in the morning, it was not until the following afternoon that we at last reached the narrow upward path that leads to the ridge of rocky mountain, sparsely town with juniper trees, where we hoped to make our first stop.

I was riding on ahead with the corporal, and in spite of the intense heat, from which my puggaree could not protect my neck, I was too ardent a sportsman not to enjoy the recitals of the officer, respecting some of the lions killed in these mountains.

Just as he was telling me of Sidi Mustapha's last exploit in vanquishing a lioness, he suddenly reined in his brown Berber steed, to await the advance of some natives, who had appeared from behind the rocks. In front rode two young Arabs, carrying their long muskets athwart their saddles.

They were followed by a tall, distinguished looking man, whose sharply cut features were marked by an unusual degree of intelligence. A full black beard and piercing dark eyes completed a figure of remarkably imposing demeanor. His lofty bearing was heightened by his picturesque costume, which consisted of a scarlet under-dress, richly embroidered with gold, a white burnouse, and headcloth shaped like a turban.

"That is Sheik Sidi Mustapha," explained the corporal, turning to me. "He seems to have come to bid your excellency welcome to Beni Gallah."

Immediately put spurs to my horse, and rode toward the chief to thank him for his attention in coming to meet me. I greeted him by shaking hands with Western warmth, and handed him the eulogistic letter to the Bureau Arabe.

"You could not have come at a more apropos time," he observed, cordially. "A tiger is just now in this neighborhood; he stole another of my sheep last night."

"Do you know where the beast is hiding?" I asked, eagerly.

"He has his lair in an impenetrable thicket, not far from our camping-place. His hours are irregular, but from his tracks, he must be an old fellow," said the sheik, with immovable gravity. "His movements are uncertain. One day he will come forth to drink in the evening, and the next day come down from some other direction to devour the sheep in open daylight."

Whilst the sheik spoke French with difficulty, his deportment to me was most friendly. He evidently saw in me the Russian general, not one of the oppressors of his people, but simply a soldier of the White Czar, who had come to help him rid the mountains of this scourge. We rode up a small rocky path, on the right side of which was a steep precipice. Some distance further on, a mountain torrent gushed across the road. The chief pulled rein at this point, with this remark:

"Many a good shot I've wasted here, Bu-Raskul; see if there are any fresh tracks."

The Arab proceeded to carry out the order with the rapidity of lightning. For a moment his sharp eyes, that resembled those of a bird of prey, roamed round; then he brought the exciting information:

"The tiger has been here since we passed!"

Sidi Mustapha who seldom lost his self-possession, sprang from his horse. Of course, I was immediately at his side. In the sand and along the side of the stream were the unmistakably fresh traces of a tiger's recent passage; inside some of the tracks, there were still drops of water. This latter was conclusive of proof that the animal had been there only a few minutes ago, as the sun would have dried up these drops very quickly.

"Probably the beast is still in the neighborhood," ventured the corporal.

"Will you wait for him? Since he was driven from his lair by a forest fire, he probably has not slacked his thirst, and will return," remarked the shiek. "But whether he will return at this spot or not, is written in the stars."

I should have preferred standing my ground and having the bushes beaten for the tiger, as I did not wish my hunting prowess doubted; but as there was nothing to be gained by remaining in a broiling sun for an indefinite period, I gladly accepted the sheik's invitation to accompany him to his home; or rather, I accepted his hospitality as far as meals were concerned, but suggested pitching my tents, to accommodate myself and escort, opposite Sidi Mustapha's quarters. When we reached the latter, I found it to be a terrace-formed building, which somewhat resembled one of Constantine's Arabian country-houses.

I followed my host into a large apartment, the whitewashed walls of which were hung with the skins of tigers, lions, badgers and wild-cats, and here he immediately unfolded his plan of attack, generously abdicating to me the honor of leading the chase.

While we were conversing, messengers entered with the information that the tiger had not the previous night visited his customary drinking haunt. Under these circumstances, Sidi Mustapha advised that we should wait till sunset and then repair to the spot where we had seen the animal's tracks, and hide ourselves behind some rocks. He offered to accompany me and stand by me, in case the tiger should prove too formidable a beast for me. I told him, however, that my servant, who would be with me, was an experienced hunter, and had saved my life by several successful shots when I was in the clutches of beasts of prey.

"Sid-Ab-Allah! how I would love to accompany you, and put a bullet into the sneaking thief!" exclaimed the shiek. "But I will go with you anyhow to-morrow."

The sun was still high in the heavens when I started with my servant, under the guidance of Bu-Raskul. Like all Arabs of the lower class he carried a long Arabian musket and a perfect arsenal of weapons in his belt. He had no intention of taking part in the attack, but (this was said with a cheerful communicativeness born from the hope of backsheesh—fee) that he would only conduct "His Excellency" to the spot, and would then go to meet the sheik's daughter, who was expected back that day from Thigistis.

"I thought the women of your race were not allowed to leave their house," I remarked, my thoughts absorbed by the idea of sport rather than of feminine charms.

"Why not?" he replied, quickly, "Veiled and in the company of trusty servants our women travel just as yours do. She has given her French companion leave of absence for a short time to go and see her family, and is just returning after conducting her to the nearest French station."

I was astonished at this explanation and involuntarily asked:

"So the sheik has conformed to the usages and civilization of the West?"

"He loves his daughter above everything earthly—but what good can come of accepting the Frankish customs? Instead of working in the house, as women ought to do, Fatme studies music and reads Frankish books. She is a fine girl, and Allah alone knows how much good she has done among our people; but she is wilder than a man, and wanders over the hills chasing jackals, and that we think is unbecoming to a woman."

This last remark was made with an air of imperturbable gravity.

"How old is she?" I inquired, impulsively.

"Hardly seventeen, your excellency, but she seems much older in intelligence and disposition. Here we are at last!"

We concealed ourselves behind a number of rocks, and I can truthfully say that I felt no fear at meeting one of the fiercest beasts of prey—nothing but a feeling of excitement at the idea of the approaching conflict.

We could not have found a more convenient hiding place. A few paces from us was the mountain stream, where the footsteps of the tiger were still visible. On the right was the road to Thigistis, while on the left the thick bushes probably hid the animal's lair. "Bu-Raskul, with many wishes for my good luck, which were probably accentuated by the liberal backsheesh I had presented to him, left us, and took the road to Schaihi.

"I fancy the tiger will appear from the thicket," I whispered to my attendant as we loaded our rifles and placed them in readiness on the first rock.

The sun slowly sank, and I almost began to fear that Mr. Tiger had no intention of showing himself. But even my absorption in that question could not distract my attention from the glories of an Arabian sunset, with its reddish, fawn-colored tints, half shaded by the clouds that already appeared to rise from the valley below. All the hues of the rainbow seemed to have blended in that lovely gloaming. At the same time, my reminiscences of home were awakened by the bizarre shape of some of the rocks nearby, which reminded me of the Caucasus, where, as a young officer, I had so frequently kept lonely vigil.

After sunset the mountains became fully alive. The horrible noises, made by wild animals, and nerve-rending cries of the hyenas, combined to made night hideous; but I could only remember that this was the favorite time for the tiger to start on his nightly pillage. Every movement, every sound, was therefore of the utmost significance, and with feverish impatience we waited the approach of our enemy—our nerves and senses being strained to the highest possible tension.

Suddenly I seemed to notice a shadow approaching from the left, and although I had never seen a tiger in a state of freedom, I at once surmised whence it came, for the stealthy, cat-like tread was unmistakable. The animal stood still, and looked about with glaring, luminous eyes; then scenting no danger, advanced to the stream within thirty paces of my ambush. His head was hidden by a projecting rock, but I could see the movements of his tail, as he appeared to listen eagerly to sounds coming from the Thigistis road. Had he moved but a couple of feet forwards, his fate would have been certain, for my gun was aimed straight at the place where I calculated his head must be. But the animal did not move. My arms were tired holding the gun in one position, and the tiger and the rock seemed to be merging more and more into one gray, indistinguishable mass. Just as I was about to drop my rifle, the animal, by a number of bounds, sprang to the edge of the water. I immediately aimed, but the beast dropped his head rapidly towards the water, and began to drink eagerly. I tried my utmost to aim at one of his eyes, but in vain. Either it was too dark—yet my eyesight is very good—or the animal's head was too low in the water to allow a shot to take effect.

Anger and impatience were beginning to master me, especially as I now heard sounds in the distance, which I feared would frighten the animal away. Suddenly the tiger's head rose from the water, and I fired. Unfortunately the bullet went too high. At that instant I heard the sound of bells from the Schaihi road. I knew that (although the fear lest my prey should escape me had made my aim uncertain) the shot had taken effect. But where and how? The smoke of the powder hid everything from my sight. Then a breath of air cleared the atmosphere sufficiently to allow my seeing the tiger lying on the ground, evidently scenting the highway, whence the noise was now very audible.

Again a shot re-echoed through the mountains, and throwing aside my rifle I grasped that of my servant. But a wild scamper in the bushes warned me that neither of my bullets had mortally wounded my adversary, and that he had taken flight. Before I could see through the smoke I heard a sound that filled me with horror—a shriek of deadly terror, followed by the stamping and snorting of a horse, two shots, and a sound of crunching, as though the tiger were already engaged in a ghastly meal.

For a moment the blood seemed to freeze in my veins; then, following a sudden impulse, I sprang from my hiding-place and rushed to the spot whence the sound proceeded. As I did so, another shot re-echoed through the still summer night, succeeded by a triumphant cry, that seemed to my excited fancy like the screech of an enraged eagle.

I never ran so fast in my life as I did to the spot, where a romantic but fantastic picture met my view. An Arabian woman stood swinging the long musket of her country in her right hand. Her white burnouse hung in tatters, and the veil had slipped from her face, which was one of extraordinary beauty. With her left hand she pointed to the body of the tiger, that lay in the agonies of death, athwart the body of a horse, which was still kicking vigorously, whilst Bu-Raskul knelt at the foot of his young mistress, his musket ready to fire, in case the animal should make a final effort to attack them. Two Arabian riders were just emerging from a gulch.

Much as I was impressed by the extreme loveliness of the young girl—whom I at once surmised to be the daughter of the sheik—I could not help thinking of the unpleasant resemblance which she bore, at that moment, to the avenging Judith.

Bu-Raskul stepped forward, and explained that the tiger had thrown itself on the horse of Sidi Mustapha's daughter. The shots of both Arabs missed fire; then Fatme, tearing her clothing loose from the beast's clutches, seized Bu-Raskul's weapon, and discharged it in the tiger's ear.

I turned to the brave girl, who had stepped to the level ground, and, introducing myself, inquired if she were not wounded.

"I do not know," she replied, haughtily. "In any case, Sida Mustapha's daughter knows how to bear pain."

"But you are bleeding!" I cried, pointing to the blood that fell from her white throat.

She involuntarily raised her hand to her neck, and apparently discovered, for the first time, that her yashmak had been torn away.

"Leave me, if you value your life!" she cried, commandingly. No man has ever seen the daughter of Sidi Mustapha unveiled, and you are aware that I know how to defend myself, even if my companions are cowards!"

I could almost have forgiven the scorn and anger of her voice for the sake of gazing longer into those magnificent, flashing eyes, but Bu-Raskul, who had carefully kept his face turned from his young mistress, quietly implored me to retire for a few moments. This I did, until Bu-Raskul approached me with the announcement that Fatme's wound was a very slight one, and that she was now ready to greet her father's guest.

I found the Arabian girl standing by the side of the tiger. Instead of replying to my greeting, she pointed to the animal, whose fur had been pierced by her bullet.

"You shot better than I," was my gallant remark.

"Yes, I am proud to have killed the destroyer of our flocks."

I could not help smiling as I reflected that this Diana had the failing of a great many other sportsmen and women, that of arrogating to themselves the credit of giving the coup de grace to an animal already half dead. I saw that my first bullet had struck in the shoulder, my second in the hip. Somewhat nettled, I observed:

"It is unfortunate that you should have passed at that precise moment; a few minutes later, and you would have found the animal dead."

"Or torn to pieces to-morrow by jackals. All praise to Allah, who permitted me to arrive in time to secure this lovely skin for my apartment."

According to Russian custom this skin belonged, by all the laws of the chase, to me—I who had fired the first mortal shot. My politeness was perhaps overcome by my passionate love of the sport, as I remarked dryly:

"Your noble father will decide that question."

Inwardly, I resolved to move heaven and earth to get the animal's skin.

Fatme simply answered in a contemptuous tone, "Good-night, general."

I had stooped for a moment over the dead body of the tiger, but at these words I looked round and saw Fatme, who had mounted one of the Arab's horses, galloping away at full speed.

A few minutes later the sheik arrived with some of his people; he was delighted at the escape of his daughter, whom he had met en route. Bu-Raskul was entrusted with the task of bringing the dead beast, and we returned to the camp.

I slept little that night, and dreamt continuously of being pursued by wild animals, or threatened with murder by Arabs. And as I arose early next day I saw Fatme, accompanied by a female servant, slip out of her apartment, and passing through the court-yard, enter a thickly planted garden, by way of a small door in the wall that surrounded the sheik's residence.

Shortly afterwards Sidi Mustapha came to inform me that he had ordered the skin to be brought to me. But the wild beauty of his daughter had so impressed me, that in spite of being somewhat nettled by her manner, I was undecided whether to accept the trophy or gallantly to hand it to the fair Fatme.

I accompanied the sheik on an expedition into the mountains. Wearied by the heat and exercise, I returned at noontime, and threw myself on my bed. At that moment the corporal entered to tell me that the sheik's daughter had been in my tent for a few moments, during my absence, to have a farewell look at the tiger's skin that had meanwhile been brought by the sheik's servant.

I laughed at this exhibition of woman's curiosity (whatever their color or nationality, their distinguishing characteristic) and ordered the corporal not to let me be disturbed. I composed myself to rest. But with one bound I sprang to my feet. It seemed as though something had been moving under my body. Throwing aside the coverlet I saw a small, black snake, hardly a foot long, emerge with quivering tongue. It was an Algerian species of snake, whose bite means almost instantaneous death. I rushed from the tent, calling to my Russian attendant, but the corporal was there before him, and with one slash of his sabre cleft the snake in two.

I stood outside of the tent as though petrified, for through the half open door of the sheik's garden I saw the mocking, fiendishly beautiful face of Fatme, who seemed to be awaiting the outcome of her horrible revenge.

An hour later, after a few farewell words to the sheik, I was on my way back to Schaihi, taking the tiger skin with me. I would not leave it to the fiend who could not forgive me for killing it, and for seeing her unveiled. —Home and Country.

Mineral Oil and Infection.

It has been noticed that workmen engaged in mineral oil works have been particularly exempt from infectious diseases rife in the neighborhood. This is remarkably illustrated by a case in point. A very violent, fatal epidemic of typhoid fever occurred in the district, and, while most of the inhabitants were stricken, the oil-workers were exempt; some cases of cholera also occurred, but timely interference, and the destruction of the bedding and clothing, with thorough cleansing with oil, removed every trace, and the disease spread no further.—New York Dispatch.

Confederate Generals.

There were nineteen Lieutenant-Generals in the Confederate Army, and of these all are dead save four—Wade Hampton, Joseph Wheeler, James Longstreet and John B. Gordon. Of the eight full Generals, Albert Sidney Johnston, Leonidas Polk and Stonewall Jackson were killed in battle, while Robert E. Lee, Braxton Bragg, E. Kirby Smith, Beauregard and Samuel Cooper have died since the close of the war.—Memphis Appeal-Avalanche.

The Chesapeake, Ohio and Southwestern shops at Paducah, Ky., have shut down, throwing over three hundred men out of work. Eight trains have been taken off one end of the road and six off the other. Scarcity of coal and falling off of business is the cause.

According to news received at Guthrie, O. T., from the Seminole country, deputy United States marshals of the Fort Smith court have had a fierce fight with Winchesters with a band of horse thieves. It is reported that one of the marshals was seriously wounded and John Fletcher and Harry Newsomb killed.

While this work was going on another slide came down, killing two trainmen and seriously injuring two section hands.

The funeral services over the remains of Cyrus Field took place at New York Tuesday morning in the Church of the Incarnation, at Twenty-fifth street and Madison avenue. The Rev. Dr. Brooks officiated. The remains were taken by special train to North Adams, Mass., where they will be interred in the family plot.

The consolidation of three national banks of Deadwood, S. Failure to make money and the possession of considerable and almost worthless security are assigned as the causes of the closing of the two institutions.

Fire raged in the lumber district of Dubuque, Ia., Saturday afternoon, from 6 to 11 o'clock, destroying 35,000,000 feet of lumber and entailing a loss of $500,000. At one time the fire threatened the entire manufacturing district of the city and help was asked from Galena, Free Port, Clinton and several other neighboring towns. The fire started from sparks from a locomotive.

A special from Uniontown, Pa., says: A battle between seven armed deputies and a mob of three hundred strikers occurred Sunday morning at 9 o'clock, at Lemont, No. 8 works of the McClure Coke company. One striker, a Slav, was killed instantly, and two other Slav strikers were fatally wounded. The deputies were surrounded and fired upon by the strikers before they shot.

The Eastern Telegraph Company of London has received a cable message from Hong Kong, China, saying that the native population is leaving the city by thousands on account of the plague. It is estimated that 10,000 have already fled and 1,500 deaths have occurred. Several Europeans have been attacked by the plague. The number of deaths is estimated to be 100 per day.

Reports from points west of Helena, Mont., on the Northern Pacific and Union Pacific railways, received Sunday indicate a bad condition of affairs owing to high water. Immense damage has been done on both roads and they are great sufferers. No mail comes in or goes out. All perishable freight and express arriving at Tekoa, for Coeur D'Alfe is anctioned off. The entire valley is a vast sea. No such high water has ever before been experienced there. Many houses are entirely submerged and tops of large trees can only be seen.

REPORTS AT CONSOLIDATION.

Delegates of Labor Organizations Hold a Joint Conference.

The joint conference between the heads of the Knights of Labor and American Federation of Labor, which is confidently expected will cement the two great labor organizations with bonds of lasting friendship and include all other great labor organizations, such as the various railway organizations, the Farmers' Alliance and other bodies not in strict accord with the Knights and federation, began at St. Louis, Mo., Monday morning.

The conference was called to order by General Master Workman Sovereign. The organizations represented are the Knights of Labor, American Federation of Labor, Brotherhood of Engineers, Firemen and Brakemen, Federation of Railway Trainmen, Order of Railway Conductors and Farmers' Alliance.

The details of the conference were not given out, but it is learned from a reliable source that the speakers do not favor amalgamation of the different trades and labor organizations. They advocated, however, harmonious union and concerted action in all matters concerning their mutual benefit and for the purpose of the protection of labor against capital. It believes that the conference will agree that all labor organizations shall bind themselves to an agreement as outlined above.

OUT OF JAIL.

Commanders Coxey, Browne and Jones Released from Prison.

Coxey, Browne and Jones, the leaders of the commonweal, were released from jail at Washington Sunday morning. No demonstration attended their departure. They shook hands with the deputy warden and watch officers, thanked them for their considerate treatment and entered a carriage, driven by Oklahoma Sam, drawn by four commonweal horses. At the district line the wealers from the camp were drawn up in line to receive the distinguished party. They unhitched the horses and themselves hauled the leaders to the camp. Coxey and Browne spoke during the afternoon. Coxey said it now looked as though the men might extend their stay at the capital into the winter. He said he was going to make an address on the 4th of July at Knoxville, Ky., for which he would be paid $250. He also had other engagements to speak during the present month. A census of the camp Saturday showed 584 men present. In speaking of his chances for election to congress, Mr. Coxey said that he was not acquainted with the situation of affairs in the Massillon district, as he had not been at home for about three months. Advices received from friends there, however, indicated that he would be successful.

MARRIED A NEGRO.

Culmination of a Love Affair Which Began at Saratoga.

Jennie Mayo, of Middlesex, Vt., was married to Thomas Strong, of Castleton, Vt. The bride is a well known young society woman of Middlesex, and the groom is a negro porter at the American house at Saratoga. The marriage ceremony was performed by the pastor of the African Methodist Episcopal church, and was witnessed by half a dozen people. Last summer Miss Mayo and her mother went to Saratoga and registered at Congress hall. Miss Mayo, who is about twenty-four years old, became acquainted with Strong and soon the affection between them ripened into love. About a month ago Strong returned to Saratoga for the season. Miss Mayo had been kept apprised of his movements. The two met in Saratoga and were married. The marriage certificate is signed by Mrs. L. Van Dyke and Miss May Wineberry. Four years ago Strong's sister ran away with a white man and married him.

TO EXECUTE HIMSELF.

Cronin Will Hang on a New and Improved Gallows.

A dispatch from Hartford, Conn., says: Warden Woodbridge, of the Connecticut state prison, has placed in the new execution house an improved gallows, by which a condemned man becomes his own executioner. By stepping on the drop he starts a flow of water. The weight of the water finally releases the spring which holds the drop. Jack Cronin has been sentenced to die by this machine on August 2d. At the session of the state board of charities, Dr. A. W. Tracy, president of the board, presented his written protest against the hanging of Cronin by Warden Woodbridge's new contrivance. Dr. Tracy argues that it is illegal, because the law cannot compel a man to be his own executioner or a suicide. The law, he says, requires that an officer charged with executing the sentence shall perform his duty and not shift any part of it to the victim.

Turpin Goes Free at Last.

At Lebanon, Tenn., Saturday, Captain E. B. Turpin was acquitted of the charge of murder. He was indicted for killing William Carter at Gallatin about two years ago, and on account of prejudice against him was given a change of venue to Lebanon. This was the fourth trial. He was convicted the first time, but secured a new trial, and on the other two cases the jury was unable to agree. The jury was out this time thirty-six hours. Turpin is a wealthy man and his victim was also a man of prominence.

CONGRESSIONAL.

DAILY PROCEEDINGS OF BOTH HOUSE AND SENATE.

The Discussion of Important Measures Briefly Epitomized.

In the house, Friday, the bill passed defining and establishing units of electrical measurements. The house then went into committee of the whole to consider a resolution reported Thursday providing for temporary arrangements to improve the sanitary condition of the house wing of the capitol.

The house, at 12:30 Saturday, in committee of the whole, resumed consideration of the Indian appropriation bill.

In the house, Monday, all efforts to consider bills by unanimous consent failed. A resolution, introduced by Mr. Baily, of Texas, was favorably reported by the committee on printing and agreed to, authorizing the printing of 6,000 copies of a compilation of all messages, proclamations and inaugural addresses of presidents of the United States from 1789 to 1894, inclusive.

The first hour and a half in the house Tuesday was taken up by an effort to pass the bill appropriating $100,000 of funds in the treasury belonging to the estates of deceased colored soldiers for the construction of a national home for disabled and infirm colored people in the District of Columbia. The motion by Mr. Cannon was amended by Mr. Sayers, making the costs of maintenance a charge upon the revenues of the district, received 59 affirmative votes and 87 negatives, whereupon the yeas and nays were ordered. The vote resulted yeas 118, nays 107. On the question of passing the bill the house divided in its favor 102 to 89. Mr. DeArmond suggested no quorum. The yeas and nays were ordered, yeas 147, nays 52.

The house, Wednesday, passed a bill to amend the act constituting circuit courts of appeals so as to permit appeals to be taken from their judgments appointing receivers without accompanying injunctions. The Indian appropriation bill was then taken up in committee of the whole.

THE SENATE.

In the senate Friday morning the Hoar resolution as to relinquishing the government claim against the Standford estate, was, after discussion, laid on the table, yeas 24, nays 9. The tariff bill was then taken up. At the suggestion of Mr. Washburn, of Minnesota, it was agreed that further discussion of the agricultural schedule shall be under the five minutes rule and Mr. Harris gave notice that, when that schedule is disposed of, he would ask that the same rule be applied to the three succeeding schedules until the wool schedule is reached.

In the senate, Saturday, the house bill to supply the deficiency in the grant of public lands to the state of Mississippi for the use of the state university, was passed. At 10:30 o'clock the tariff bill was taken up. Mr. Gallinger's amendment to increase the duty on hay from $2 to $3 a ton provoked a discussion which, at the close, became rather excited. Mr. Vest, in an angry tone, accused the republicans of trying to kill the bill by delay. He said that if he had his way and that if the democratic senators would remain in the chamber, he would insist on sitting until 9 or 10 o'clock at night, and when Platt admitted that the republicans would defer the bill if they could, he exclaimed, "Then do it like men, and do not assassinate it by parliamentary technicalities and by delay."

At 10:30 Monday the tariff bill was taken up in the senate, the question being on the first paragraph of the spirits and wine schedule. Great progress was made during the session. The entire spirit schedule was disposed of with the slightest possible talk, and the cotton schedule was also quickly disposed of.

At 10:30 Tuesday the tariff bill was taken up in the senate, and nearly the entire day was occupied in long-winded set speeches.

At 10:30 Wednesday the tariff bill was taken up and Mr. Sherman made an argument against the proposition to put wool on the free list.

Hurrah for OATES!

If our readers really desire to know just what position Col. Oates holds on the educational question they can learn best by reading his speech which we this week publish. Republican sheets may garble his utterances and thus mislead some, but those who desire to know only the truth will go to the best source for their information.

The great coal strike in Penn. is about over. From 15,000 to 20,000 miners in the Pittsburg district have returned to work. So have others in Ohio. On Monday there was a great mass meeting of miners at Adamsville, Ala. They voted to go on with the strike. Speakers urged their members not to resort to violence. The conglomerate ticket of Kolb was endorsed. Before going to press we learn of efforts being made to burn and blow up other bridges.

Large numbers of good men who followed the fortunes of Kolb two years ago are returning to the Democratic fold. Coosa County has been one of his strongholds, but every week of late numbers of men write letters to the Advocate telling why they have dropped Kolb. We are reliably informed that one hundred and sixty of the wanderers of that county have openly renounced their allegiance to the arch disturber of the peace. No doubt there are scores of others who will vote against him who have as yet said nothing about it. In Clay County, the home of Manning, his strongest supporters are said to be leaving him. Hon. Mr. Simmons came out publicly before a great audience the other day and acknowledged his wrong, and said that henceforth he was in his father's house to remain. The work of disintegration is going forward at a handsome gait. Even populites are demanding of their leaders to unite in joint discussions with Democratic leaders. The people are anxious to know the truth and these discussions will cause thousands of benighted ones to come home. The days of the demagogue are numbered, and hence forth the people want sound food, no mere declamations and appeals to the passions and prejudices, but reason. It was a severe shock to many good men of the opposition when they learned two years ago, that Kolb's chief helper was a man given to drink, whose speeches were filled with profanity and whose pockets were loaded with deadly weapons. But many of them felt that may be such a man was needed in order to beat the organized. But the climax was reached when that same man a week ago, while under the influence of liquor, beat a helpless old man and afterwards, as at present appears the testimony, shot and killed in cold blood an inoffensive boy. People who believe in the upholding of law, and in carrying elections by peaceable methods will not longer allow themselves to remain in such company. The condition of the times demands that every sensible and honest man do his best to preserve that good name which our State bears.

COLONEL OATES ON EDUCATION.

On Monday last in the house of representatives Col. W. C. Oates, the Democratic nominee for governor of Alabama obtained the floor and and spoke as follows:

Mr. Speaker, each State of the union has its own system of public school education. The United States has none.

In 1880 and 1887 a bill introduced into the Senate by Mr. Blair of New Hampshire was very elaborately discussed in that body and and also in the House of Representatives, but it was ultimately defeated in the Senate and never came to a vote in the House.

The bill proposed that through a period of ten years about $80,000,000 from the federal treasury should be distributed among the States according to their illiterate population, but that no State should receive its share unless it should raise by taxation of its people and expend on its public schools the proceeding year as much as its share on the population basis would entitle it to; and failing therein it should receive nothing or only a proportionate amount. This was intended to force states to tax their people, and in the case of Alabama it would have required a taxation of more than $5,000,000 for the State to have obtained her share.

The States were also required by the bill to make reports to the Secretary of the Interior of all of their public schools, their operations, acts and doings before such State should be allowed its quota of the money, and the federal government through such secretary, was made the judge whether it had complied.

The measure was objectionable to me because of its contralizing provisions and tendency to destroy the sovereignty and independence of the States and make their public school system subservient to the dictation of the federal government. The States had already been shorn of considerable part of their reserve or rightful powers by the legislation of congress.

The bill under discussion here to-day to repeal the tax of ten per cent on State bank circulation illustrates plainly what I say. That law is a usurpation of the rights of the States to have a system of banking of their own or not, as they choose, and which, if now in existence, would prevent the cry of distress from the scarcity of money in some of the States of the union.

Another objection I had to the Blair bill was that it was unconstitutional which of itself was sufficient reason for any honest man to have voted against it.

I have always been in favor of a liberal State public school system, but no state within my knowledge ever maintained a system in which was taught branches of education higher than the primaries which embraces spelling, reading, writing, arithmetic, grammar and geography. The Blair bill proposes to compell the States—by denying to them any share in the appropriation if they did not comply—to extend their system up into the classics, and hence the pertinency of my remarks upon that subject.

I never was opposed to the higher education, and always believed that if farmers or other people desired to educate their children above a good English education, which is obtained in our public schools, they should pay for it themselves, and not require the people at large to be taxed for that purpose. The taxes of the people are heavy enough without imposing such an additional burden for the benefit of individuals. People should not expect from the public schools of the State more than a fair English education for their children. When they seek a higher one, let the good old Democratic doctrine apply, of every tub standing on its bottom.

On the 26th of February, 1887, the bill to establish agricultural experiment stations in the several States for the benefit of the farmers was on its passage, and I submitted some remarks in favor of the bill. Some Senators and Representatives contended that if the Blair bill was unconstitutional, that the one under consideration was opened to the same objection. To meet that I made a distinction between the two cases and hence discussed the constitutional question at considerable length.

When speaking of the Blair bill and as incidental thereto I indulged in a remark, which during the late contest in my State for the Democratic nomination for Governor some newspapers, which were highly prejudiced against me, in order to accomplish my defeat, quoted and misconstrued so as to make it appear that I meant just what I never intended to say. Since my nomination the same newspapers are advocating my election, which shows that they did not consider so serious an objection as their former commentaries thereon indicated.

Now, the Populist and supporters of Capt. Kolb for Governor are distributing throughout the state upon the subject with villianously false constructions of my language and meaning, for the purpose of misleading the farmers and voters, as to prejudice them against me and make them vote for Kolb. It is a favorite scheme of the demagogue to deceive the farmers and laboring men, because they think that they are too ignorant to catch him at it, but in this he is much mistaken. They are too intelligent to be thus imposed upon by the demagogue however artful he may be. They will soon learn the facts and that is all that I desire. I have the utmost confidence in the people arriving at a correct conclusion when they know the facts in any given case.

It is claimed in the circular that I "put the farmer's son and the negro boy on the same plane," This is also intended to mislead and prejudice the reader. Under our State Constitution and laws the same benefits were, when extended to the children within the educational age without regard to color except that separate schools shall be provided for the races. Under these laws the negro boy is entitled to the same benefits from the State treasury that the white boy receives, except that a negro boy must attend a school of his own color.

The circular also says that when I made that speech "there was no proposition to tax the people of the State millions of dollars, as he would have them believe." This Statement is absolutely false, as every one at all familiar with the Blair bill knows, and as I have already explained. This is within keeping with the general purpose of the circus. It assumes that because I opposed the Blair bill and gave expression to some plain facts by way of argument and illustration of my position as to the extent to which the people should be taxed to maintain the public schools of the State, that I was therefore opposed to the education of the farmer's sons, when I never said anything of the kind.

My argument plainly was that the Blair bill should not be passed because it would double the taxes of the people in Alabama to furnish a plethora of money to give a classical education to all the white and black children of the State, and that, too, at the expense of State autonomy and a violated constitution.

The remark quoted and complained of is as follows:

"It is not the duty nor is it to the interest of the State to education its entire population beyond the primaries. That is quite as far as 90 per cent. of the negro children are capable of going. Universal experience teaches that if a boy, without regard to his color, be educated beyond this point he declines ever to work another day in in the sun. A higher education may do for New England, whose laboring people are chiefly engaged in manufacturing, but how would it do in Alabama, where 75 per cent of the people are engaged in agriculture?"

Now why didn't they quote the next sentence in the speech, which is a follows:

"Sir, in my State, and I believe in all the other States of the Union, there is a system of public schools open from three to five months each year to all the children, in which every one can learn to read and write and obtain a sufficient knowledge of arithmetic and grammar for the ordinary pursuits of life.

I never advocated any restriction upon the parent from educating his son and daughter in Latin, Greek and the higher mathamatics, but I maintain that the State should not tax the people to educate all the children beyond the primary branches of reading, writing, arithmetic, grammar and geography, and no state of the Union has ever gone further than this.

I said when a boy, white or black is educated beyond these branches he would never work in the sun another day, but I never denied the right of his parents to educate him beyond this point, but maintained that he should do so, if he saw proper, out of his own private means, and not tax the people therefor. Whoever saw a young man who was a Latin and Greek scholar, and well up in the higher mathematics laboring in the fields under a burning summer sun. No man has ever seen it, and never will. The boy will try some other business, and that is his right. But should all the people State be taxed to give him this classical education?

No. I say give the poor and the rich alike a good primary education at public expense, and if parents want their children to have a classical education let them pay for that themselves. In New England many people educated above the primaries work in the factories and if their states see proper by general taxation of their own people to give the children classical educations, I have no objection. That is their business, and I believe that every State should control its system of public schools.

I never advocated any appropriation by congress for such purpose, though an effort has been made to make it appear so. Such an inference is ridiculous. Alabama is not prepared, in the present circumstances of the people, if the policy were admissible, to more largely increase their burdens for public schools than is warranted in the declaration of the Democratic platform adopted at Montgomery on the 23rd day of last month, which I heartily support, and which is as follows:

"We pledge our party to the maintenance of a system of free public schools and to increase the appropriations for that purpose whenever the financial condition of the State will permit."

I had the speech from which the quotation was made printed in phamphlet and distributed it among the voters of my district. Since that time I have been nominated by the Democratic convention of my district three times by acclamation and elected to congress by the people, and notwithstanding the general distribution of the speech no one found any fault with it until this year, when those who opposed me searched the records for weeks with magnifying glasses to try to discover something in my thirteen years' record in the house amenable to criticism.

It seems that all they found in my acts and speeches during this length of time which they thought could be used to my injury was this one paragraph which I have referred to. The people of the district I represent in congress are as intelligent as those of any other district in the State, and they are as soundly Democratic. Is it not passing strange that if I were guilty of the wrong alleged that none of them discovered it? Captain Kolb, the nominee of the so-called Jeffersonian and populite organization, and who is my competitor for governor, was one of my constituents.

I sent him directly a copy of the speech and in the election the next year he was my supporter. If he now disapproves of that speech or anything in it, it is entirely attributable to present circumstance and not that he found fault with it at that time, as he was then silent upon the subject. The use made of the extract is small, unmanly, and contemptable and demagogical one, as every intelligent person can at once see.

Though the VIEW got its information from a reliable source, that the Thornton House had closed for the summer, it was proven to be a mistake, and we take pleasure in making the correction.

Correspondents should remember that we are always glad to hear from their respective neighborhoods, and also that it is necessary to "boil down" their news, for lack of space occasionally.

Mr. John Milford, of west Chilton, presented to the VIEW the first cotton blossoms of the season Monday. He reports the first on the 11th inst., but having no business here didn't bring them sooner.

On next Thursday night, June 28th inst., public installation of the officers elected for ensuing year by the Clanton Lodge, No. 423, will take place at the Methodist Church. Everyone is requested to be present.

An enclosure is badly needed around the public well, and it should have one. Horses—and distempered ones at that—make a horse-trough out of the well-bucket, and it is dangerous for anyone to use the water.

Since draining the pond no sickness has been reported worth mentioning, and we are glad to again boast of the healthfulness of our town. If your health is bad or you need rest and recreation Clanton is the place for you.

The members of the loafing club who have branded and discharged in disgrace—as deserters—those members of the club who joined the "fools of occupancy," are still hanging on to their organization with such persistency that there is no doubt but what they would make patriotic subjects should they enlist in Coxy's army.

We would be glad to hear from the farmers occasionally as to how they are prospering, managing their farms, etc. If you know a good thing, tell some one else, and thus enlighten your neighbor on the subject. If your talent as a farmer has enabled you to make a discovery, why do not secrete it, but make it public that it may be of use to your fellow-man.

Mr. L. C. Popwell has purchased a bicycle.

A good rain would greatly help this section.

A musicale was given at Dr. J. S. Johnson's last Wednesday night in honor of Miss Mamie Johnson, of Lily.

Mr. W. P. White, a prominent citizen of Lily, was in Clanton Monday. He reports the farmers needing rain badly.

Alex Shelton is confined to his bunk this week but has the proper attention and supply of physic to pull him through and put him on his feet again.

The young people of Clanton are requested to meet at the Baptist Church to-night. Rev. J. G. Lowrey expects to organize a Young People's Christian Association.

The court house has not yet received the coat of paint suggested by the last grand jury, and it appears that that jury's recommendation has received little commendation or even consideration. As we are not to build a court house now, and as this is the county site, we fully agree with the late grand jury in their suggestion.

Died, on last Wednesday, Mr. Bill Marcus, of Clanton. Though he had been complaining for a few days prior to his death, no such sad outcome was expected by his friends. He had been a resident of this place for only a short time, having moved his family here from Jumbo, at which place his remains were returned for interment. Profound sympathy is felt for his bereaved family.

Death has claimed another of our old citizens, Mrs. Bussy, of Strasburg. While on a visit to relatives in Deatsville was taken sick and after lingering three days passed away. She was the mother of Mrs. J. Bice who but recently died. Her aged and heart-broken husband has our deepest sympathies. In his deep bereavment may he fully realize the comforts of divine grace.

The Baptist Rally at this place last week proved to be an interesting and beneficial meeting. A large number of brethren attended among whom were Rev. J. M. McCord, of East Lake, Rev. G. S. Anderson, of Auburn, Rev. W. B. Crumpton, of Marion, Rev. G. R. Caldwell, of Deatsville, Rev. E. F. Baber, Dr. Geo. B. Eager and E. L. Jones, of Montgomery. The various discussions by these expounders of the word of God were able and went to strengthen the church, and sustain the Christian in faith and duty. Rev. Dr. Eager delivered an excellent sermon Friday night to a large congregation, and Rev. W. B. Crumpton an address Sunday morning on Missions. The meeting was brought to a close Sunday night, after three days duration; and the good done the people of Clanton is inestimable.

"Whisperings," in the Russell Registers whispers in the following rymth a "Freedom of the Press":—

Around her waist I put my arms,
It felt as soft as cake;
"Oh, dear," says she, "what liberty
You printer men do take!"
"Why, yes Sal, my dear old gal,—"
(I squeezed her some I guess,)
"Can you say naught, my chick, against
The "Freedom of the Press?"

I kissed her some, I did by gum—
She colored like a beat;
Upon my living soul, she looked
Almost too good to eat!
I gave her another buss, and then
Says she: "I must confess
I rather, sorter, kinder like
The freedom of the press."

Democracy Will Never Die.

Forth to the fight ye Democrats,
Mighty in truth and right,
Stand by the grand old party,
Work for it day and night.

Drive back the treacherous traitors
Who have entered our ranks by night,
Bring discord and division,
Fight them with all your might.

Down with the enemies arrategem
Down with the Captain's plea,
Leading this band of traitors
Through the ranks of Democracy.

Vote for the one-armed hero
Of Chicamauga fame,
Now fighting for pure Democracy;
Make his a Governor's name.

Lift up the blood-red banner,
Shout the battle cry,
Till echo answers echo,
"Democracy never die."

Chronicling Events of Special Interest to Our Readers.

Hon. W. C. Oates, nominee of the democratic party for governor of Alabama, will begin an immediate and vigorous campaign.

The miners at Wheeling Creek, O., are very angry about the result of the compromise settlement of the strike and reiterate their declaration that they will not stand by it.

A Jackson, Miss., special says: Hon. W. H. Simms, of Columbus, Miss., first assistant secretary of the interior, delivered the annual address at Millsaps college Tuesday to a highly appreciative audience.

The Columia, S. C., mills, manufacturing cotton duck fabrics, began operations Monday. This mill is located on the Columbia canal. It has 30,000 spindles, and its machinery is run entirely by electricity generated by water power.

The prohibitionists of Tennessee held their convention at Nashville Wednesday to nominate candidates for governor and the supreme bench. The indications are that they will endorse the populists' candidate for the governorship, A. L. Mimms, who is a prohibitionist.

A Montgomery, Ala., dispatch says: Judge Bruce has appointed Judge Asa E. Stratton United States commissioner at Montgomery, and he has been formally sworn in. Judge Stratton is a republican, but he enjoys the confidence of the community, and the appointment gives general satisfaction.

S. C. Griffith a prominent young business man of Tampa, Fla., was struck on the temple Tuesday by a baseball and soon died from the effects of the blow. His skull was fractured. Griffith was at the bat when the ball struck him. The pitcher has not been arrested as it was purely accidental.

The Texas state republican league club convention convened at Fort Worth Tuesday. Delegates were present from all over the state. A full state ticket will be put in the field. The republican state executive committee decided to hold a republican convention on Tuesday, August 27th, at Dallas.

Upon the application of Josiah G. Harvey et al., and the Baltimore Guarantee Company, Judge Simonton, of the United States circuit court for the Richmond, Va., district, has placed the Richmond and Manchester Railroad Company and the Richmond Railway and Electric Company in the hands of a receiver.

The tax payers of Chattanooga and Hamilton county, Tenn., are agitating the question of reducing the tax assessments, both in the city and county. A number of petitions are now being circulated, and largely signed. The petitions state that real estate values and revenues have shrunk 40 per cent in Chattanooga in the last two years, and a corresponding reduction in the tax assessment is, therefore, asked for.

Suit has been brought in the chancery court at Nashville, Tenn., against the executors of the estate of John Schardt, defaulting cashier of the Merchant's bank and the Guarantee Company of North America, to recover the amount of Schardt's bond, $30,000. Receiver Blackmore, of the Commercial National bank, has also sued the guarantee company for $25,000, the amount of Frank Porterfield's bond.

Rev. W. J. Trimble, one of the leading Presbyterian pastors at Chattanooga, Tenn., surprised his congregation Sunday by preaching a bitter A. P. A. attack on the Catholic church. His subject was specifically the relation of the A. P. A. and the Catholic church on social, moral and political conditions. He closed by saying that the Catholics could not escape the conflict which was hourly growing nearer.

A dispatch from Purvis, Miss., says: There are at present hiding in the bushes around the little interior village of Columbia, about eighty whitecaps, all armed to the teeth. They are said to be holding consultations among themselves, endeavoring to decide the best method to pursue in order to rid themselves of prosecution at the special term of court. The sheriff has been furnished with the names of about 250 of this lawless band.

The United States Car Company at Anniston, Ala., has been successfully reorganized and the company is now the owner of all the properties formerly belonging to the United States Rolling Stock Company. The attorney for the company states that the deed to the new company had just been recorded in Calhoun, Morgan, Etowah and Cherokee counties and been sent off to be recorded in Ohio and Illinois. The amount involved in the sale is several million dollars.

Information comes from Tallahassee that the supreme court of Florida will review the injunction which Judge Call, granted the Duval county Athletic Club in January last, restraining the sheriff from interfering with the Corbett-Mitchell prize fight. It is understood that Governor Mitchell is behind the case, as he is convinced that Judge Call's decision was contrary to law and he wants the supreme court to finally pass upon the question of the legality of prize fighting in Florida.

At Chattanooga, Tenn., Saturday, Judge Key solved the vexed question of the East Tennessee Land Company receivership by appointing ex-Postmaster General Thomas L. James, of New York, and Boyd Ewing, of Chattanooga, receivers, vice Hopkins and Russell removed. Gen. James is an expresident of the company. The new receivers are acceptable to all factions among the stockholders and will take charge July 1st. Nearly two million dollars has been invested by this company in and about Harriman, Tenn.

The opinion of the lawyers of Savannah, Ga., is that there is no way in which the decision of the court of appeals sustaining Justice Jackson's decision with regard to the Southwestern railroad's indebtedness on the tripartite bonds can be carried to the United States supreme court. As to the effect on the stock, the brokers say that the buyers of Southwestern, in their opinion, had discounted the affirmation of Justice Jackson's decision by the court of appeals, and that they were too shrewd to buy on the supposition that it would be overruled.

NATIONAL CAPITAL.

NEWS AND GOSSIP OF WASHINGTON CITY.

Brief Notes Concerning the Business of Our Government.

H. O. Havemeyer, President of the American Sugar Refining Company, appeared before the senatorial investigation committee Tuesday.

A Birmingham special says: A cloud of mystery hangs over Alabama for the first time. The torch was applied to another railroad trestle Monday night by a band of vandals, whose acts of incendiarism are being so frequent as to spread alarm throughout the district.

Senator Gordon has introduced the Atlanta exposition bill in the senate and it has been referred to the committee on education and labor. Senators Gordon and Walsh will urge the committee to act upon it at once and both are sanguine that it will be attached to the sundry civil bill by the senate.

The senate spent all of Tuesday in long-winded set speeches. The weather is intensely warm at Washington and the senate chamber was of the temperature of a bakeoven. In consequence very few senators remained inside. The hot weather, more than anything else, is making both sides become anxious to get through with the tariff work. They cannot stand eight hours of solid hard work daily during this kind of weather.

Trap Bills Against Newspaper Men.

The grand jury has decided to return a true bill against John S. Shriver, Washington correspondent of the New York Mail and Express, and E. J. Edwards, of New York, correspondent of the Philadelphia Press, for refusing to give the sources of their information to the senatorial investigating committee, in regard to statements about the sugar trust and democratic senators, and the United States district attorney is engaged in preparing the indictments. He has notified Shriver and Edwards to appear before the criminal courts on Saturday to answer to the indictments, and give bail or go to jail.

The Gold Reserve.

The engagement of $1,000,000 in gold for export from New York Tuesday reduces the gold reserve in the treasury to $68,400,000. When Secretary Carlisle on January 7th last issued his circular letter inviting bids for $50,000,000 of bonds, the gold reserve stood at $68,971,000. The "ten days" treasury statement issued Monday shows that the receipts from customs at New York so far this month have aggregated only $1,605,035, an amount less than for any ten days since 1892, or prior years for ten years back, it is believed, and less by $1,000,000 for the corresponding period of June, 1893. Of this amount only 0.1 per cent was paid in gold and 86.8 per cent in silver certificates. So far this month the expenditures have exceeded the receipts by $2,200,000 and for the fiscal year, $73,200,000.

Their Pay Stopped.

Judge Maddox, of Georgia, who is a member of the Indian committee, was before the house for the first time Tuesday in the capacity of a leader. For several hours he had charge of the Indian appropriation bill and succeeded in cutting from it the appropriation for the Indian commission. That consists of nine members who draw salaries of $5,000 each and have proven of no use whatever for several years. Judge Maddox declared that it was an obstacle instead of a benefit. It was constantly trying to inject theories where common sense should prevail. Indian inspectors, he said, now performed the identical service which the commission is required to perform, and the fund appropriated to the commission is principally spent in maintaining an office and paying the salaries of men who have absolutely nothing to do. By a large majority the house sustained Judge Maddox and struck the clause from the bill.

Precipitated Over a Burial Site for Senator Vance's Body.

A dispatch from Asheville, N. C., says: The widow of Senator Zebulon B. Vance came to Asheville Wednesday and had the body of the senator removed from the Vance family plot in the cemetery, where it was originally buried to a plot she had bought the day the senator was buried. Chas. M. Vance, son of the senator, and his private secretary during his life, arrived in Asheville Saturday, had the body again disinterred and reburied in the family plot.

Young Vance declares that it was his father's dying request that his body should be buried in this plot, which the senator had bought and beautified during his life, and that his wife's body (young Vance's mother) should be placed beside him.

Vance says that he is determined that his father's wishes shall be obeyed if the law has to be invoked in order to carry them out.

The plot of ground to which Mrs. Vance had the senator's body removed is a hill top, the most beautiful and commanding spot in the cemetery, and her object in placing the senator's body was the fitness of the site for the erection of a great monument to the senator's memory by the people of the state.

Mrs. Vance is a Catholic, and when it was found that the senator was dying a priest was about to perform the last sacrament, when Charles N. Vance interferred. Senator Vance was a Protestant, and, it is said, had requested that none of the rites of the Catholic church be allowed over him.

Young Vance said he would permit his father's body to be removed to the plot secured by Mrs. Vance provided his first wife's body be placed beside the senator's, but this Mrs. Vance declined to agree to.

At a mass meeting of miners of Oglesby, Peru and La Salle, Ohio, it was resolved to accept nothing less than last year's prices. Resolutions were also adopted denouncing the Columbus delegates and demanding the resignation of President McBride and others who were parties to the compromise agreement.

All miners in Coal Creek and Briceville districts resumed work Wednesday. This includes the black diamond, operated mines, which worked but very few men since the strike began. The miners returned to work at the old scale. A great number of objectionable miners were discharged. It is believed now that the strike is at an end.

The following ticket has been nominated by the Kansas prohibitionists in convention at Emporia: Governor, I. O. Pickering, of Olathe; lieutenant governor, H. G. Doughart, of Hiawatha; secretary of state, J. M. Howard, of Wichita; associate justice, Judge Silver, of Topeka; auditor, J. P. Perkins, of Columbus; steasurer, James Murray, of Baldwin; attorney general, M. V. Vanbennett, of Cherokee.

A freight train on the Wabash railroad and also one on the Mobile and Ohio railroad was held up at Mount Olive, Ill., early Wednesday morning, by alleged coal mine strikers and a number of cars loaded with vegetables and provisions were looted. A funny feature of the hold-up was that in the caboose of the Wabash train three detectives were enjoying a sound sleep while the cars were being robbed.

In the supreme court, at Tallahassee, Fla., Attorney General Lamar has had a motion entered on the docket for the advancement of the case of N. B. Broward vs. the Duval Athletic Club. After ten day's notice the appellees (the club), on motion of Mr. Lamar, the court will take the matter under advisement. This is a suit to test the validity of Judge Call's decision granting an injunction restraining Sheriff Broward from interferring with the Corbett-Mitchell fight at Jacksonville last January.

A Chicago dispatch says: A coalition of the American Railway Union and the Knights of Labor was effected at Wednesday's session of the first annual convention of the railway union. The first steps were taken toward an offensive and defensive alliance of these two great labor organizations, with an effective strength of 350,000, each founded upon the principles of including in its membership laboring men of all classes. Opposed to this great confederation of laboring men are the American Federation of Labor, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, the Brotherhood of Firemen and all kindred orders working on the class organization basis.

THREATS AGAINST ENGINEERS.

Striking Miners in Alabama Make a New Move.

A Birmingham, Ala., special says: Not satisfied with the results from burning bridges and attempting to stop coal traffic, the striking miners have made another move, by which they hope to gain the support of railroad engineers. Notices have been sent to the engineers on the Kansas City, Memphis and Birmingham railroad, notifying them not to haul any more "scab" coal at the peril of their lives. These letters are very threatening and are signed "One Thousand Miners." The miners think that by intimidation they can bring on a strike of the locomotive engineers and thereby carry their strike, as this is a last resort.

Held Up by Robbers.

At Fort Gibson, I. T., two masked men held up H. C. Cox, agent of the Missouri Pacific railroad, and A. M. Hensley, the operator. The robbers appeared at the ticket window an hour after the night express had passed, and covering the men with their Winchesters, ordered the door opened. The safe was open and most of the money on the table. After taking over $600 they took a gold watch and chain from Hensley. A posse was immediately sent in pursuit.

MINING DEVELOPMENT.

Agreed Upon by Miners and Operators—Wages Established.

A special from Columbus, O., says: The report of the scale committee was adopted unanimously by the conference of miners and operators at 10 o'clock Monday night, and the conference adjourned sine die. The following is the full agreement resolution:

"Resolved that we agree that the rates for mining 2,000 pounds of lump coal shall be as follows: Pittsburg thin vein, 69 cents; thick vein, 56 cents; Hocking Valley, 60 cents; Indiana bituminous, 60 cents; Indianna block, 70 cents; Streator, Ill., summer, 62½ cents; Streator, winter, 70 cents; Willimington, summer 77½ cents; Wilmington, winter, 85 cents; LaSalle, Ill., and Spring Valley, summer, 72½ cents; LaSalle and Spring Valley, winter, 80 cents. Other sections in the northern Illinois field at prices relative to the above. Coal in Pittsburg, direct going east to tide water, shall pay the same mining prices as that paid by the Pennsylvania Gas and Westmoreland Coal Company. This scale of prices shall be in effect and bind both parties thereto beginning June 18, 1894, and continuing until the first day of May, 1895, subject to the following provisions: Provided that the above named scale of prices for the Pittsburg district shall be generally recognized and observed.

"It is further provided that operators and miners shall co-operate in their efforts to secure a general observance of said prices named for said district, and if during the period covered by this agreement a general recognition of the prices herein named for said district cannot be secured, either party to this agreement may call a meeting of the joint board of arbitration to meet at such time and place as those having authority may elect; and said joint board, when so called, shall meet and determine, if able, whether the agreement has been sufficiently respected and complied with to warrant its continuance to the date named herein. If the board is unable to agree, the members thereof shall select a disinterested man whose decision shall be final. If it shall be found and decided by prices above provided that it is being substantially respected it shall remain in force and bind both parties thereto for the period stipulated herein; and, if found and decided by same prices not to be so generally observed as to warrant its continuance, it shall be abrogated, and both parties thereto absolved from contract obligations herein set forth. When miners desire, they shall be permitted to elect and place on the table check weighmen of their own choice. Wages shall be paid on above scale semi-monthly. All balances due on pay day shall be paid in cash. An interstate board of arbitration and conciliation, consisting of four operators and four miners, shall consider and determine upon any inequity complanied of as between the different fields named in the above schedule of prices."

Telegrams received from the centers of Ohio show that the miners are extremely indignant over the compromise settlement of the strike and there may be an organized movement led by President A. A. Adams in resistance to the order to go to work. State officials are afraid now that the miners will be more difficult to control than before.

TRADE NOTES.

Business of the Past Week as Reviewed by Dun & Co.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s review of trade for the past week says: "The outlook for business seems a little better on the whole, though the change is not great. Moreover, it is impossible to distinguish between the mere replacement or orders canceled for want of fuel or other causes, and the new business for which works are anxiously looking. That cancellations have been heavy is certain, and it is not entirely clear that orders of equal magnitude have gone to other works that are able to fill them. Through the agency of strikes the interruption of industry and commerce increases every week. Hence, it is somewhat encouraging that the decrease in payments through clearing houses is but 24.8 per cent for the first week of June, 27.2 at New York, but only 19.4 elsewhere. The decrease in comparison with 1892 is about 90 per cent. With only 2,937 coke oven working and 14,676 idle, with the Cambria discharging half its force, seven out of nine of the Carnegie furnaces at Bessemer out of blast, the production and manufacture of iron and steel are smaller than at any other time for years. While it is believed that deferred work will cause heavy production after the strike terminates, the demand for product is at present much below general expectation even at the east. Other industries have been less affected, but many of textile mills, even in New England, have now been closed for lack of fuel or of orders, besides other concerns in great numbers between the Atlantic and the Mississippi river.

"The market for goods is dull and weak, with further reductions in price, and stocks visible accumulating. The banks here continue to receive from the interior about as much money as they lose by gold exports, though the crop-moving season is close at hand. Customs receipts are again 36 per cent. less than a year ago, and internal revenue 23 per cent. less for the week. Exports of domestic products have been exceeding last year's a little.

"The returns of failures are still encouraging, 216 in the United States for the week, against 322 last year, and 40 in Canada, against 27 last year. The liabilities in all failures reported in the month of May were $18,305,357, about $5,420,000 at the east, $4,500,000 at the south and $3,400,000 at the west. Of the aggregate, $5,165,025 was of manufacturing, and $6,688,499 of trading concerns."

A Fatal Collision.

A head end collision occurred between a Georgia Pacific Passenger and freight train near Nickajack, which resulted in the death of three men and the wounding of four. The ill-fated trains were the outgoing freight No. 24, which left Atlanta at 7:40 p. m., and the inbound passenger No. 53, due in Atlanta at 8:40. The accident is said to be the result of the engineer of the freight forgetting the schedule of the passenger train.

Remarkable Growth of a New Industry.

A history of the cottonseed-oil industry of the south was one of the principal features of a recent issue of the Manufacturers' Record of Baltimore, and we extract therefrom the following particulars:

"In 1880 there were forty cottonseed mills, with an aggregate capital of $8,500,000. There are now 300 mills, having a combined capital of about $30,000,000. At present about 1,500,000 tons of seed are annually used by the mills, yielding to the farmers about $18,000,000 a year for a product which, until recently, was regarded as a waste material. The total output is about 1,500,000 barrels, or 60,000,000 gallons of oil, 500,000 tons of cottonseed meal, 750,000 tons of hulls and 30,000,000 pounds of linters, the aggregate value of which will average about $30,000,000. The demand for oil is steadily expanding, and only about one-third of the total cottonseed crop is now consumed by the mills, there is practically unlimited room for the growth of this business. Ten years ago the hulls were burned by the mills as a fuel as no other use could be found for them. Investigation proved that they made excellent fodder, and last year about 400,000 head of cattle were fattened for the market on cotton-seed hulls, while 100,000 milch cows were fed on the same material."

Much of the cotton oil is consumed in the shape of salad oil, the article making an excellent substitute for olive oil. Purchasing the salad oil that bears foreign labels will not always insure the consumer against being deceived, as large quantities of the cotton oil are annually exported to Italy and France, there to be mixed with olive oil and labeled as the pure product.

A Potato Preserving Process.

To avoid the germinating or "sprouting" of stored potatoes, M. Schribaux has devised the plan of immersing them for ten or twelve hours in water, to which has been added from one to two per cent of commercial sulphuric acid, then rinsing and drying. The skin of the potato protects the interior from the action of the acid, while the delicate germs in the eye are destroyed. The process seems to have proven highly satisfactory. In the case of a few specimens of Richter's Imperator potato a remarkable result has been noticed, the trested buds having been made incapable of developing externally, but retaining sufficient vitality to cause them in the course of time to become transformed into small potatoes inside of the original tuber. The exhausted parent patatoes containing their plump progeny formed a curious exhibit at a recent meeting of the Botanical Society of France.—Ex.

Artificial Ice.

In the manufacture of artificial ice one ton of coal is required to produce from five to ten tons of ice, according to the quality of the machine used. Very little waste occurs and the artificial is made more cheaply than the ordinary lake or river ice can be harvested and stored. Artificial ice is practically free from impurities.

The present condition of the times affords the object lesson that money does not constitute wealth.

Do You Wish the Finest Bread and Cake?

It is conceded that the Royal Baking Powder is the purest and strongest of all the baking powders.

The purest baking powder makes the finest, sweetest, most delicious food. The strongest baking powder makes the lightest food.

That baking powder which is both purest and strongest makes the most digestible and wholesome food.

Why should not every housekeeper avail herself of the baking powder which will give her the best food with the least trouble?

Avoid all baking powders sold with a gift or prize, or at a lower price than the Royal, as they invariably contain alum, lime or sulphuric acid, and render the food unwholesome.

Certain protection from alum baking powders can be had by declining to accept any substitute for the Royal, which is absolutely pure.

Measuring Brickwork.

The Boston Journal of Commerce gives the following: Ordinary bricks are about eight inches in length, and, with a mortar joint, about half that in width, so that each brick on the flat will give a horizontal surface of about thirty-two square inches, or four and a half bricks will cover one square foot. As ordinarily laid there are nine courses to every twenty-four inches, or four and a half to the foot; four and a half courses, with four and a half bricks to the course, will give twenty and one-fourth bricks to the cubic foot. Waste, cutting and close joints will easily require an allowance of twenty-one bricks per cubic foot, which will be found a very convenient figure for estimating the number of bricks required for a wall of given height and thickness, as is thus becomes unnecessary to find the cubic contents of the wall, but merely to multiply its face area, or the product of its length and height in feet by seven-fourths of its thickness in inches, which, as the thickness is always some multiple of four inches, is a very simple process.

The Sunflower.

Few persons appreciate the value and profit of this common flower. By many it is regarded a nuisance, and yet its cultivation will pay largely more than cotton and grown at much less cost. An acre of land planted about twenty inches apart will yield an average of eighty bushels of seed, the oil from which will produce about 150 gallons. The oil cake is a valuable food for live stock. The oil is said to be equal to olive oil, is superior to linseed oil for painting in spreading and drying qualities. The stalks having long, strong fibers make superior paper. The green leaves are very nutritious as stock food and the young flower cups very palatable to man. Machinery for expressing the oil is easily obtainable and inexpensive. Bees have a perfect "bonanza" in a sunflower patch, and the seed is very valuable for poultry as an egg producer. The sunflower is independent of weather and persists in growing under the most unfavorable conditions.

The luscious bivalve is evidently Maryland's oyster, concludes the New York Advertiser. Of the 35,000,000 bushels of oysters produced in the world each year nearly 30,000,000 bushels are natives of the United States, and more than 11,000,000 bushels come from Maryland waters. The value of Maryland's annual product is nearly $6,000,000, that of the United States about $16,600,000, and that of the rest of the world a little more than $12,500,000.

While the regular army service does not seem to be very popular in Great Britain just now, the volunteer service, corresponding in general lines to our national guard, seems to be especially so. The returns for last year show the number of enrollments to have been greater than in any year, with one exception, since the organization of the force. There were 227,741 enrollments, of which 219,111 are returned as efficients. This number of efficients has only been exceeded three times.

The Boston School Committee is discussing the advisability of discarding sloping writing in public schools in favor of vertical writing. The Boston Transcript says: "If the children naturally learn to sit erect when using the vertical writing and naturally get into very bad positions, straining the eyes and twisting the spine, when they use the sloping system, it goes without saying that the question of relative merit is very easily decided. We understand that Cambridge has discarded the sloping system, and advocates the use of the upright. To obtain a position in many of our public record offices, indeed we might say in all of them, it is a perquisite that vertical writing be acquired. Let any person apply at the Registry of Deeds for a position as copyist, and show as a sample of handwriting, the most beautiful sloping copper-plate hand, and he or she will be immediately met with the remark, 'We cannot use that style of handwriting on the books. You must write the upright record hand.' Why then do we not teach in our public schools something that can be used?"

AFOOT.

Comes the lure of green things growing,
Comes the call of waters flowing—
And the wayfarer desire
Moves and wakes and would be going.

Hark the migrant hosts of June
Marching nearer noon by noon!
Hark the gossip of the grasses
Bivouacked beneath the moon!

Long the quest and far the ending
When my wayfarer is wending—
When desire is once afoot,
Doom behind and dream attending.

In his ears the phantom chime
Of incommunicable rhyme,
He shall chase the fleeting camp-fires
Of the Bedouins of Time.

Farer by uncharted ways,
Dumb as death to plaint or praise,
Unreturning he shall journey,
Fellow to the nights and days;

Till upon the outer bar
Stilled the moaning currents are,
Till the flame achieves the zenith
Till the moth attains the star,

Till through laughter and through tears
Fair the final peace appears,
And about the watered pastures
Sink to sleep the nomad years!

A MUCH NEEDED LESSON.

BY GODFREY QUORLES.

COULD Paul Williams have known the misfortune that was to befall him scarcely an hour later, perhaps he would not have walked as jauntily down the steps of the Porter House and out into the Main street of Johnsport, the lumber metropolis of Pennsylvania, on that pleasant September morning five years ago. He was dressed with the utmost neatness, almost with foppishness, a high hat sat rakishly on his head, his shoes were polished to the last degree of brightness, a large ring glittered from one of the fingers of his left hand, and in the other he carried a small walking stick, which he now and then twirled through the air in a dandyish manner. Pausing before a bookstore, something seemed to catch his eye and he entered. From the papers and magazines on the counters he selected those which pleased him most, and nodding to the clerk, said carelessly:

"Just charge these."

The person addressed did as he was bidden, but a troubled look came into his face as he wrote down the several items, and he at last said:

"Mr. Williams your bill is getting quite large. Can't you settle soon?"

"Yes, sir, of course I can. If you don't think me good for a few dollars, why, I will take my trade elsewhere."

And then before the astonished clerk could reply he was gone. When he had gone about a mile he turned sharply and entered the lumber district of the city which extends for several miles along the river banks. A few moments later he paused at the office of one of the largest mills, where he was bookkeeper. He found all the members of the firm, with one exception, assembled within, but as this was no unusual circumstance he nodded to each one, went to a closet and hung up his coat and hat, and swinging himself upon a high stool was about to commence the work of the day, when he was interrupted by the elder member of the firm, who, after a slight cough, as if to clear his throat, said:

"Mr. Williams, one moment, please."

Thinking that what he was to hear had something to do with the business of the firm the young man turned from his desk, pen in hand, and said:

"What is it, sir?"

"Mr. Williams," with another slight cough, "we have decided, owing to matters of which you are probably as well aware as we, that we will not need you any longer. As soon as you can secure employment elsewhere we shall expect you to resign your position with us."

"I really don't—don't understand you," was the reply. "Have you discovered any errors in the books?"

"None at all—none at all. We would be perfectly willing to endorse a certificate of your honesty and proficiency as an accountant. What I refer to is an entirely different thing. The fact is that we have found that you are heavily indebted in various parts of the city, much more than we desire any one in our employ to be. Several firms where you have had considerable accounts standing for some time have applied to us to secure them. This we cannot do, and so from prudential reasons—nothing else—we have decided to let you go."

"I think that this thing has—has been exaggerated," stammered the young man. "But as you may have other reasons for wishing to discharge me, I will go at once."

"You are wholly mistaken—wholly mistaken. We have none but the kindest of feelings toward you, and should not have taken this step had we not thought it best for all concerned. We had not expected you to leave until you could find some other position fully as good, but you can do as you choose," said the lumberman, seemingly glad to get rid of a disagreeable task. "Come this afternoon and we will have a settlement," he continued, as the young man, who had put on his hat and coat, was leaving the office.

And then Paul Williams, feeling as people always do who have met with the penalty of their indiscretion, that he had been dealt with unjustly, walked away.

His features were working and his lips quivering from chagrin and disappointment. Almost unconsciously he bent his steps toward a distant hill, whereon lay the city cemetery, and half an hour later he was walking up the hill with long, sweeping strides, totally indifferent to the fact that the dust of the road was destroying the polish of his shapely shoes which that very morning he had put on with so much care. Flinging himself upon the first bench he came to, he tried for a time to control his feelings, but at last he burst into tears.

Paul Williams was a man of five and twenty, and for four years he had held the position from which he had now been so suddenly dismissed. He was the son of a widow, who had been able to give him a good education, and who, dying, left him a small legacy. Though he had no habits which could have been called really bad, he unfortunately possessed traits of character which kept him from succeeding as his friends had just reason to expect. He was one of the members of a band of young men who, though not really dissipated, had formed the dangerous habit of spending money as fast or faster than they earned it. His pride had again laid a trap for him, and always wishing not to appear small, he spent his money freely on the most trivial things. Some two years before the time of which we write he had begun to pay his attentions to a young lady who was now his betrothed; and wishing most of all not to appear mean in the eyes of the woman he loved, he had often made her presents and spent money upon her when she would have respected him just as much, perhaps more, if he had kept his purse closed.

But though in this way he had spent nearly all of the legacy left him by his mother, the young man might not have come to grief had it not been for another habit more seductive and infinitely more dangerous than all the others—the practice of running into debt heedlessly and without thought. It had always been a failing with him, but within a year it had grown stronger than ever. His credit, borrowing the common phrase, was good, and when anything in shop or store caught his fancy he would order it done up, and telling them to charge it, would take it away with him. In this manner he had made bills which, could he have known their proportions, would have made him tremble.

All these things presented themselves to Paul Williams in their true light for the first time, as he sat alone in the silent cemetery. After a time he came to feel that the action of his employers, harsh as it might seem, was not without cause; and then, though what he was to do in the future seemed a blank, he began to lay plans to extricate himself from a bad matter with an independence and self-reliance at which he himself was surprised. First of all he would draw what money he had in bank, and as far as possible pay what he owed; and then he would go away from Johnsport and try to find something to do which would enable him to pay the rest. Acting upon this resolve he drew out his note book and noted the names of his creditors; the list was a long one, and with each succeeding name his face grew graver. But when his task was finished he shut the book with a determined air, and thrusting it into his pocket arose from his seat and walked rapidly away. Two hours later Paul Williams sat in his room with a package of bills, on each of which was the ominous letters "Dr." on one hand and on the other a roll of bank notes. All told he was in debt seven hundred dollars! Three times he went over the figures in a bewildered way, only to find each time that he had made no mistake. Then he turned and counted the bills before him; there was less than four hundred dollars, a little more than half what he owed. But he felt resolved to do the best he could and act the part of a man. So, after a hasty dinner, he once more sallied out on the street, and visiting each of his creditors paid what he owed them until not a dollar remained in his pocket. Three things now remained for him to do: to see his late employers and obtain a settlement; to call upon his betrothed and tell her all that had happened and all that might happen; and then to leave Johnsport and go he knew not where. On visiting the office of Dodge & Co. he found but one member of the firm in, a son of the man with whom he talked in the morning, not present at that time.

"Paul," he said, as he handed him a check, "I am sorry about this thing. It's a wretched business from beginning to end, and if I could have had my way about it, old boy, it would not have happened. As soon as I learned the steps the governor had taken, I wired a friend up in Wisconsin, who wrote me some time since that he wanted a good bookkeeper, that if the place was not already filled I could find a capital man for him. I have just received an answer which says: 'Let him come at once.' So if you want to go you are not out all around. What say you?"

"I will go at once, to-night," was the prompt reply. During the next hour the two men sat and talked over the particulars of the place in question, young Dodge imparting to his friend that the man's name was Reade, that he was a native of Pennsylvania, "a royal fellow, and a deucedly successful business man." After which Paul arose, and grasping his friend's hand, thanked him in a husky voice for the kind turn he had given him when he most needed friends.

"Don't mention it; that's nothing, old fellow. Just brace up and face the music, and all will come out right. Keep a stiff upper lip, and let me hear from you now and then."

Paul's hardest task still lay before him, to see his imbeaded wife, and to tell her all. The young man told his story openly and frankly, omitting nothing and concealing nothing. He told her of the opportunities that lay before him and of the sacrifices he was determined to make until he had paid every cent; but there would be a stain upon his name, and if she wished she was free to break the engagement between them at once. But if he had thought that she would take such a step he was destined to be happily disappointed, for her reply was:

"Paul, although I have feared for a long time that something like this was going to happen, I don't want to be free from you, because—because I love you. Go away, do the best you can, and come what may, know that there is one who trusts you and is waiting for you."

When the evening train for the West pulled out of Johnsport it was with mingled feelings of sorrow, remorse and hope that Paul gazed upon the lights of the town as they steadily faded from sight. The events of the day had followed each other so swiftly that it all seemed a dream. As the iron horse put mile after mile behind him the consequences which were certain to follower his hasty departure came up blackly before him, and he half regretted that he had not remained. By and by, however, his spirits began to revive, his plans for the future took distinct form in his mind, and it was with a comparatively light heart that he stepped into the streets of the young and growing town of the Northwest. Much to his surprise he found his future employer, Mr. Reade, waiting at the depot to welcome him, and as he grasped the hand extended him, and looking into the frank, open face, he felt that he was to have dealings with a just and generous man.

"Dodge telegraphed me when to expect you," said Mr. Reade, noting the young man's embarrassment. "My business is such that I will want you to make your home with me, and both my wife and I will do all in our power to make you welcome."

The next morning, with a determination to please and to speedily win the confidence of his employer, Paul entered upon his new duties.

In a few days there came a letter from Annie Hummel, urging him to persevere in the course he had undertaken, and not to mind what others said. He did persevere, and in a short time won the respect and confidence of his employer. His salary was not as large as it had been formerly, but every month nearly all of it went to pay the debts he had left behind him in the East. When a year had passed he had paid everything and was beginning to save. Besides, he had dropped all of his foppish airs and habits, and became in every way more manly and independent. One day near the close of his second year the young bookkeeper and his employer were talking together, when the latter said:

"Paul, I am thinking of taking in a partner. My business is growing so fast that it needs two to attend to it, and I want some one that thoroughly understands it. Have you been able to save much since you came out here? You must, for you haven't any expensive habits."

At first the young man blushed and seemed slightly confused, but recovering himself he told his employer in a few words how he had come to leave Johnsport, and in what way the most of his money had been spent since that time.

"This is a surprise to me," was the reply; "yet I am not sorry to hear it, for it shows that you have the right stuff in you."

A long talk followed, at the end of which the two men had come to a better understanding and were stronger friends than before. Not long after it was made known that Mr. Reade had found a partner, and the new firm bore the name of Reade & Williams. During the next two years they were strikingly successful, and this fact, at the end of the time mentioned, led the junior member of the firm to take a flying trip to Johnsport, where the object of his visit was made evident by the announcement of his marriage.

Paul Williams is now the master of a pleasant home and far on the road to wealth; but he has not forgotten the bitter experience of the past, and often affirms that never, never again will he be the debtor of any one.

Navigating the Air.

According to some of the most important investigations, the air-ship of the nearest future will require the sustaining power of gas to make it of the best practical utility. A study of the flight of birds is likely to furnish all needful hints on the controlling power, but, thus far, science has not developed force enough to keep the ship up and propel it at the same time. Once the weight question is settled, and there will be little difficulty in handling the aerial ship. It seems a pity that some Government does not take up the subject, encourage inventors, supply materials and furnish means to perfect some machine of this sort. With the stimulus of prizes or the promise of reward by Government recognition, there would be a speedy and no doubt absolutely practical solution of this much-discussed problem.—New York Ledger.

Dangers of Celluloid.

A clergyman writing to the London Standard comments upon the dangers of the highly glazed, washable celluloid collars, which have come into such general use of late. In the particular case mentioned by the clergyman, a boy's collar became ignited by a spark, and, burning with the utmost explosive violence, characteristic of dilatire-cellulose in the open air, so injured the lad that he soon died.

A Pittsburg, Pa., special says: The settlement of the great soft coal miners' strike and the return to work Monday of 15,000 of the 20,000 miners in this district, has given an impetus to all kinds of business, and the situation is more hopeful than at any time for many months.

The attitude of the United Mine Workers in the sixth district of Ohio, is encouraging. Nearly 2,500 people found work in the mines in different parts of Ohio valley Monday. Others, about half of the miners in the district, will await the result of the second conference at Columbus.

District President Thomas McGregor, of the United Mine Workers' Association, held a conference with the committee of miners at Rich Hill, Mo. The operators hold out but little inducement toward a settlement of the strike. A large number of miners, however, are ready to resume work at old prices.

Twenty-five more men were arrested at Mount Olive, Ill., Tuesday and taken to Springfield, which makes altogether fifty-one of the strikers that have been arrested. The militia and the deputy United States marshals are still at Mount Olive, and will remain until all of the parties that can be found have been taken.

The presidents of the leading banks of New York City met Tuesday afternoon to discuss the question of supplying gold for export. The treasury gold reserve has run down to $66,984,446, the lowest point since the bond sale. The banks have about concluded to come to the assistance of the government in the matter.

One thousand men were thrown out of work through the closing down of the Mount Clare repair shops of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad Monday morning. No previous notice had been given to the men. The action is said to be general business depression supplemented by the coal strike. The close down will be for two weeks or more.

A special from Springfield, Ill., says: Adjutant General Orendorff has ordered Colonel Colby, of the Seventh regiment at Chicago, to assemble his command at once and proceed to Mount Olive by special train on the Wabash. It is understood that no rioting has occurred, but these precautions are being taken because of the wholesale arrests that are to be made of the striking miners.

The consolidation of three national banks of Deadwood, S. D., has been made, the Merchants' National and the Deadwood National turned their assets and deposits over to the First National and closed their doors. Failure to make money and the possession of considerable and almost worthless security are assigned as the causes of the closing of the two institutions.

A cable dispatch from Berlin says: It is reported that Sir Edward Malet, British ambassador, has sent his resignation to his government in London, stating as the reason for his wish to retire that it is impossible for him to successfully represent the interest of England at the court of the kaiser, since, owing to recent acts of the British cabinet, the confidence of the emperor has been lost.

A special from Perry, O. T., says that one Sanders, a member of the Dalton gang, was convicted there of horse stealing and sentenced to five years in the penitentiary. He says he was with the Dalton gang for five years, and that Bill Dalton, who was reported killed near Ardmore, I. T., is still alive. He declares the report that he was killed was sent by a deputy marshal to get the $25,000 reward.

A special from Scottdale, Pa., says: The situation in the coke region continues peaceable, and all the men are still holding out. The importation of negroes is gradually breaking the strike. Several carloads of negroes arrived Tuesday and at the same time a large number of foreigners took their departures. The Slavs and Hungarians have become disgusted at the long idleness, and many of them are leaving the regions never to return.

Nearly all of the trammer and timber men at the New Port, Pabst and Aurora mines, Mich., and large numbers at Norrie have joined the strike. Only a small number of miners are at work at the East Norrie. Over 500 men at the Norrie mine joined the strikers Tuesday afternoon. A Chattanooga special says: It is now feared that the addition to the Chickamauga National park, known as the Sherman earthworks park, on Missionary ridge, will be dropped, as the owners of the property and the park commissioners cannot agree about the price to be paid. Two juries of appraisement have set a valuation on the land, the awards of neither being satisfactory. General H. V. Boynton, of the park commission, stated that he believed the government would now drop the matter. It was intended to expend $260,000 on the project and the park on the ridge would have been a most valuable addition to Chattanooga's historical points.

The people of Coopers expect to have a basket dinner and general celebration 4th day of July. Let the chairman of our executive committee arrange with the State Executive Committee at once and we can have speaking at Coopers and other points in Chilton County on that day. And why should we not properly observe the 4th of July? That day represents great things for the United States and the youth of this country should be told over and over about it. If requests are sent at once to Col. Tompkins speakers will be furnished each community so desirsiring. Let no delay be made.

From the beginning of Kolb's campaigning he and his speakers have pandered to the anarchistic element among the voters. When among the miners, the foreigners, of north Alabama, he and his have spoken such words as to make them believe that he above all others loves the stranger within our gates, and that he would with the stroke of his pen take out all the convicts from the mines and turn that work over to those foreigners. When among that crowd Governor Jones and the military have been terribly denounced, and why? Simply because those men whose character for turbulence has made them notorious throughout the United States, hate law, and because they welcome as a friend everyone who will aid them in breaking up and tearing down all law. The VIEW welcomes to Alabama every industrious and law abiding citizen, no matter from whence he comes, but the quicker Alabama shall be rid of that class whose every dollar goes into the treasury of the saloon keeper and and whose Sabbaths are spent in drunkenness and debauchery the better it will be for our common country. The recent strike has demonstrated the character of men our authorities have to deal with. They have not hesitated to apply the midnight torch and the dynamite to the property of other people. Neither has the life of any man been safe when he dared to go about his daily work contrary to their orders. Nothing but the promptness of the Governor in moving soldiers into that territory has prevented untold bloodshed and destruction. Yet Kolb, Bowman and 3rd party papers denounce him for this very act. Cry out the people's money is being squandered; which is better to spend a little money in the protection of life, liberty and the property of our citizens as well as for the protection of the good name of the State, or to allow this dangerous crowd, who will not work and who deny others that privilege to sack and burn at their will and to murder the hand full of guards which the country authorities would furnish? It is high time that sober men and law abiding people shake off the spell which Kolb has thrown around them. He does not discuss principles, his only cry is that he has been imposed upon, and his only effort is to embitter the people against one another. Suppose that he should be elected Governor by the votes of the striking miners, would he then turn his hand to check them in their madness? They have assurances that he will not. But while he is protecting them away goes the interests of others. His own folly and weakness is becoming more apparent every day and as men begin to reason his following decreases more rapidly.

Skipping the Question.

Presumably the convict question is not an issue in this campaign outside of Jefferson county. It ought not to be here. The question has been disposed of in a way that ought to satisfy every reasonable and sincere mind. Still the enemies of the Democratic party are undertaking to make it appear that the party has not kept faith in getting convicts away from this county, and that the only thing needed to promptly remove them is the election of Capt. Kolb as Governor.

The real status of the case is this: The Democratic party stands pledged to the removal of the convicts as rapidly as it can consistently be done with the financial condition of the State and the welfare of the convicts themselves. The last legislature was confronted by a deficit in the revenues and it was impossible to appropriate sufficient money to provide new quarters and employment all at once and to maintain the convicts in idleness. A law was therefore enacted that the revenues from the convict hire should go to providing a place where the State could work its convicts on its own account. This revenue is being steadily appropriated to the purpose. Land has been bought and buildings are being constructed as fast as the money comes in. The change in the system is being made just as fast as it can be done without disorder, tumult and disaster.

In his speech to the merchants on Monday night Colonel John, who is one of the commissioners in charge of this matter, made the statement that already at Spig ner's, the location of the new penitentiary, are assembled between 350 to 400 State convicts, who would otherwise be in Pratt Mines. Thus, while no convicts have yet been taken out of the mines by the new law, nearly or quite 400 have been kept from going. In not a great while, at the present rate of preparation, Jefferson county will be relieved, the State will have lost nothing and a vexed question will have been happily settled.

Contrast this conservative and happy method of settlement with the radical and reckless promise which have from the beginning been made by the followers of Captain Kolb. He declares his purpose regardless of the condition of the treasury and whether there is a place to which the man can be taken, to arbitrarily cancel the leases and ship the convicts out by the first train. Where to? The walls will not hold them.

The fact is, Captain Kolb and his supporters are talking through their hats, or else he would be guilty of an actual crime in suddenly and without preparation changing a great system in a way to cost the people hundreds of thousands of dollars of tax money and to work untold suffering to the convicts themselves.—Age-Herald.

Never has a cause weakened faster than that led by Reuben Kolb. Two years ago this genius was able to keep followers from attending political speakings where Democrats were to join in the discussions. This year the people are asserting their manhood and are clamoring for the privilege of a free and full discussion, but Kolb & Skaggs & Co. are sending out circulars saying "don't you do it. We don't mind hearing both sides discussed, but they will abuse us, don't go." What miserable cowardice and weakness are betrayed by such a cry! But the surest sign of weakness lies in the fact that Kolb skipped his appointments in Alabama and went to New York. Actually to Wall Street Republicans and poured into their ears a wail of woe, and made promises which if he could fulfill would turn Alabama over to the Republicans. Indeed, almost, in so many words he promised that if Republicans would help by furnishing money that he would see not only that he was elected Governor, but that in the November Congressional elections Republican Congressmen would be elected. No man with faith in the strength of his cause would be guilty of such a course. Southern Democrats have accepted help from Northern Democrats; but this is the first time in the history of the country when men claiming to be Jeffersonian Democrats have openly appealed to Northern Republicans for money. If there remains in his following a single man believing himself a Democrat surely now he will realize the mistake he made and come home?

There is a newspaper published in Dadeville, called the Tallapoosa New Era. It is a Kolb-Populite sheet and the name of J. P. Oliver, Sr., appears as editor. His name also appears in the paper as the candidate of the Kolb combine for Superintendent of Education in Alabama. The paper under such circumstances ought to state things fairly and squarely. We must presume that when it does not do so, it is due to ignorance and an ignorant man is not the one for the head of the educational department. In its issue of this week will be found this article:

A true copy of the thirteenth article in the Jones platform:

"We favor the passage of such election laws as will better secure the government of the State in the hands of intelligent and virtuous, and that will enable every elector to cast his ballot secretly and without fear or restraint."

Following is the legislation sought to enforce this demand—the celebrated Pettus bill, which passed the lower House of Representatives by a vote of 50 to 46. Kolb men all voting against it."

"No person otherwise qualified shall be permited to vote at any election in this State unless he is able to read and write the English language or has served as a sailor, soldier or marine in the late war between the United States, or if he resides in a city or town, owns property to the value of $250, or if he resides outside of a city or town and owns forty acres of land."

Here is the distinct statement that this passed the House by a vote of 50 to 46. If the editor of the New Era had examined the record he would have found that it was defeated by a vote of 22 yeas and 70 nays. If there had not been a Populite or Kolb vote cast it would have been defeated because a majority of the Democrats voted in the negative. We wonder if the candidate who edits the New Era will let his readers have the facts in this case.—Montgomery Advertiser.

Then and Now!

About four years ago when Kolb was holding on to the office of Commissioner of Agriculture, in defiance of law and the will of the people, Mr. Robert Cloud, a well known Republican of this place, stopped the editor of this paper on the street and informed him that he had just heard a very damaging charge made against Kolb. He asked us if we knew Frank Knight. "No," was the reply, "who is he?" "Why he is the well-known traveling salesman of the great seed house of David Landreth and Son, and I have been getting my seed from him for fifteen or twenty years." This was accompanied by a strong endorsement of Mr. Knight as a gentleman and man of veracity. Mr. Cloud then stated that on the day before, Knight, whist filling his annual order for seed told him that he had failed to sell Kolb any seed for the State whilst in Montgomery a few days previously. "Why?" asked Mr. Cloud. "Simply," said Knight, "because I would not consent to give Kolb my private check for $500 to make a deal with. He offered to buy $2,800 worth of seed if I would give him the above amount to do it," According to Cloud Mr. Knight also stated that Kolb tried very hard to get him to telegraph to his house for permission to make the deal.

Mr. Cloud's indignation and disgust on this occasion was very great. Now we are informed that he is an enthusiastic supporter of Kolb. Has Mr. Cloud changed his opinion of Mr. Knight or of Mr. Kolb.—North Alabamian.

All over the State the Republicans of the deepest dye are the principle leaders for Kolb. In Colbert County, for instance, Judge Steele, an old-timer, is their nominee for the legislature. In their county Convention Steele, Jackson and Cloud, all Republican leaders, accepted the chief seats and fixed up the States. These are the men who have been the enemies of white supremacy for years and now because a fit of madness has seized some of our good people they are willing to break friendship with their old neighbors and friends and go arm in arm with such characters. Friends awake from your delusive dream ere you are lost forever to your real interests.

Pause, Ponder, Peruse!

It is a great pity that there is not some revenue on hand or some way in which the streets of Clanton might receive work and attention. They are in bad condition and it is remarkable that a sprained ankle, broken limb or other serious accidents have not been the result. But the old adage is that "where there is a will there is a way," and certainly there is one way, if the people of the town have the "will"—pull off your coat and work the streets in front of your own door—if your neighbor is too lazy to work in front of his show him that you have enterprise, "will", push and pluck enough for your town to work in front of the door of even such an unworthy as he. When you can condescend to do this, then and not till then, will the streets receive the work that they so much need. The railroad, at considerable expense, has graded with slag the road-crossing and the side-walk-crossings, and it should behoove the town to repair the side walks on each side of the R. R.

As has been mentioned before, the surroundings of the depot present the most dilapidated appearance of any spot in town, which is a sad fact. A graded and level side walk leading to the University would be quite an improvement over the present one, as well as over appearances. We understood that the shanties on several lots in close proximity to the depot—ornaments to the town twenty years ago—but eye-sores to the people of Clanton to-day were to be torn down and removed, but thus far they still adorn and bedeck the place.

There is nothing that sets a town off to more disadvantage in the eyes of the outside world than such neglect as above mentioned. A town must be attractive to attract attention, and nothing but the enterprise and public spirit of its inhabitants has ever yet made one so.

Can't you see? Then go to the Clanton Drug Store and look at the splendid assortment of spectacle for sale.

NATIONAL CAPITAL.

NEWS AND GOSSIP OF WASHINGTON CITY.

Brief Notes Concerning the Business of Our Government.

On the 20th and 21st of July examinations will be held under the auspices of the United States civil service commissioners for matrons, teachers and superintendents in the Indian schools of the country.

Senator Gordon has introduced the Atlanta exposition bill in the senate and it has been referred to the committee on education and labor. Senators Gordon and Walsh will urge the committee to act upon it at once and both are sanguine that it will be attached to the sundry civil bill by the senate.

The senatorial sugar investigation committee has decided to summon every member of the senate before it to ascertain whether he had any connection with the sugar trust men, whether he has speculated in sugar, and whether he knows anything about the efforts of the trust to secure a change in the schedule.

The lighthouse tender Maple, with President Cleveland on board, returned from her cruise down the lower Chesapeake bay and outside capes Tuesday morning. The president remained on board until the white house carriage and Private Secretary Thurber arrived, and was then driven to the executive mansion. He has been much benefitted by the trip.

The senate committee on education and labor unanimously decided to favorably report the bill providing for an appropriation of $200,000 for a government exhibit at the proposed Cotton Exposition to be held at Atlanta, Ga., in the autumn of next year, and decided to recommend that the bill be appended to the sundry civil appropriation bill as an amendment.

Coxey and Browne, of the commonweal movement, were granted a hearing by the senate committee on education and labor, Friday, to advocate their "good roads" bill. They urged the passage of the bill on the ground that, if passed, it would provide employment for the idle men of the country. The hearing was not completed, and it will be resumed on the 27th instant.

In the general deficiency bill, reported to the house Monday, an appropriation of $1,700 is made to Thomas E. Watson to pay the expenses of his contest for Major Black's seat. A similar amount is appropriated to Major Black. Both gentlemen put in an itemized account of their expenditures in obtaining evidence and in lawyer's fees to the committee on elections and that committee recommended that the appropriations committee allow them $1,700.

The Nicaragua canal bill, which will be reported to the house, has so far assumed tangibility that only one point remains to be settled. That is the question of the kind of funds to be issued by the government, and it has been discussed at great length by the sub-committee, a most important proposition being taken up which involves the coinage of silver to defray in whole or part the expenses of the work. The idea of issuing silver met with great favor from the committee-men.

Commodore Matthews, chief of the bureau of yards and docks, has returned to Washington from a trip to Port Royal, S. C., where he went to inspect the new dry dock now building there. The work was found to be of excellent quality and progressing well, so that the chief felt warranted in recommending that the time allowed for the completion of the dock, which expires the end of this month, be extended to next September, which recommendation has secured the approval of Secretary Herbert.

The testimony given by Senator Vest before the senate investigating committee telling how the finance committee had been held up by six democratic senators and forced to make the sugar schedule to suit the trust, has aroused many of the democrats of the house to a pitch where they would rather have no tariff legislation than the senate trust measure. It now seems probable that the senate will send the bill back to the house by the 1st of July. Then there will be a long and bitter fight in the conference committee.

The senate refused Monday by an almost unanimous vote to put coal on the free list. The amendment was offered by Senator Hill. He and Senator Irby, of South Carolina, were the only democrats who voted for it. The three populists, however, voted with them. Thus coal remains in the bill with a duty of 40 cents a ton on it. The senate made good progress on the bill, and the managers predict that a final vote will be reached this week. With the wool, coal, iron and sugar schedules passed over, the income tax is the only feature remaining in the bill which is expected to excite a conflict.

After more than a week's debate the house finally passed the Indian appropriation bill. This closes up the list of appropriation bills in the house with the exception of the deficiency bill. The only other important matters pending before the house unacted on are the anti-option bill, which will come up in a few days; the Cotton States and International exposition bill, which is expected to go on the sundry civil bill in the senate, and the bankruptcy bill. The house could adjourn within two weeks were it not for the delay caused by the senate. The banking and currency committee has elected Messrs. Cox of Tennessee, Cobb of Missouri, Culberson in Rome of representatives of dissident eastern churches.

A New York special says: The reorganization of the Central railroad has been agreed upon. The details are being drawn and the plan will be given to the public by Messrs. Comer and Hayes in a few days. The plan covers the whole system, and it will be complete and will restore confidence in the Central all over the country, if accepted by the parties interested in the stock and junior securities at home.

The effects of the coal strike has reached Noblesville, Ind. The Lake Erie and Western has discontinued the local freight trains. The shipment of large quantities of small fruits and vegetables to that point is stopped and grocers are in a quandary how to supply the demand. The American straw board plant stopped its ponderous machinery and enforced idleness of a large force of hands is the result.

The miners on Gogebic range, Michigan, have decided to strike. The companies refused to negotiate with committees from the unions, but are willing to hear the workmen individually as to their grievances. Should all the miners strike 3,000 men will be affected. The mine owners threaten in case of a general walkout to close down their properties indefinitely. The workmen demand an increase in pay.

For the first time there will be a socialist state ticket in the field in Ohio this year. The socialist labor party in convention at Columbus, Saturday, nominated Daniel W. Wallace, of Glouster, a coal miner for secretary of state. William Watkins, of Dayton, a high school teacher, for school commissioner and W. C. Pomeroy, of Cleveland, for member of the state board of public works. The executive committee was authorized to nominate a lawyer who would declare himself to be a socialist, for supreme judge.

GROWTH OF THE SOUTH.

The Industrial Situation as Reported for the Past Week.

The review of the industrial situation in the south for the past week shows that there is now a reasonable prospect of an early termination of the miners' strikes. The miners themselves are realizing the hopelessness of their expectations of higher wages, and that the condition of business does not permit any advances at present. The fact that the coal output has steadily continued, although in decreased proportions, has done much to convince them that they will serve their best interest by resuming work. The iron producers are preparing for increased business as soon as fuel is to be had in sufficient supply. Prices continue to be irregular, with a larger demand for some grades.

In other lines of industry there is no change of importance. The texile mills are running on full time, and the lumber manufacturers are still selling their outputs at low prices.

Thirty new industries were established or incorporated during the week, together with ten enlargements of manufactories, and eighteen important new buildings. Among the more prominent new industries of the week are: A 40,000 spindle cotton mill at Peizer, S. C.; the Petit Jean Coal Company, of Magnolia, Ark., capital $500,000; the Mingo Coal Company, of Huntington, W. Va., capital $100,000; and the Lampasas Water, Ice and Electric Company, of Lampasas, Texas, with $30,000 capital. The S E Conn Lumber Company, capital $25,000, has been chartered at Louisville, Ky.; an electrical company with $20,000 capital at Pensacola, Fla., and the Spartanburg, S. C., Hedge Fence Company has been organized, capital $15,000.

There is also reported canning factories at Angleton, Texas, and Huguenot, Va.; at $10,000 brick making plant at Glen Easton, Va., an electrical power company at Scotland Neck, N. C.; flour and grist mills at Seale, Ala., and Almond, Va., and gas works at Helena, Ark. An ice factory will be be built at Elizabethtown, Ky.; a knitting mill at Winchester, Va.; horse shoe works at Orland, Fla.; coke ovens, 50 in number, at Big Stone Gap, Va., and a tannery at New Decatur, Ala. Wood working plants are reported at Florence, Ala., Rosedale and Rosetta, Miss., Ashboro, N. C., Dyersburg, Tenn., and Lynchburg, Va.

Water works are to be built at Elizabethtown and Shelbyville, Ky. The enlargements reported for the week include brick works at Danville, Va., chemical works at Rome, Ga., iron works at Bessemer, Ala., Lowmoor and Radford, Va., a cotton mill at Atlanta, Ga., and wood working plants at Bridgeport, Ala., and Wilmington, N. C.

Among the new buildings of the week are business houses at Jasper, Fla., Kershaw, S. C., Fort Worth, Tex., and Lynchburg, Va.; churches at Jacksonville, Fla., and Weathersford, Va.; a 100-room hotel at Atlanta, Ga., and one to cost $35,000 at Charleston, S. C.; a $250,000 office building at New Orleans, La., and school buildings at Midway, Ky., and Hasks, Texas.—Tradesman, (Chattanooga, Tenn.)

SOUTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY

Is the Name of the New System Under Samuel Spencer.

The organization of the Southern Railway Company, the successor of the Richmond and Danville Railroad company, was effected at Richmond Monday by the execution and delivery of the special masters' and receivers' deeds to the new corporation, and by the execution of the articles of the association, by Messrs. Coster ter and Thomas the purchasers of the railroad, and their associates, Messrs. Spencer, Andrews, Stetson and Ewen. The deed was filed and recorded in the chancery court at 12 o'clock, noon, and the articles at 12:30 p. m.

The incorporators constituted Messrs. Spencer, Coster, Andrews, Stetson and Ewen to be directors and Samuel Spencer to be president of the new company. The general office of the new company will be in Richmond.

At the first meeting of the board of directors of the new company officers were elected. They will assume their duties on the morning of July 1st, when, pursuant to the court's orders, the properties of the Richmond and Danville Railroad Company will be turned over by the receivers to the new company.

The Southern Railway Company assumes the leases of the Atlanta and Charlotte Air-Line, the Western North Carolina railroad, the Washington, Ohio and Western railroad, the Piedmont railroad and the North Carolina railroad.

THE VANDERBILTS IN IT.

The fact that Drexel, Morgan & Co., by whom the reorganization was conducted, represent the Vanderbilts, who own large interests in the Chesapeake and Ohio, gives rise to the belief that this system and the Danville will be conducted on very friendly terms. It is believed that much of the Danville's business will hereafter go to Newport News for shipment by that company's steamers.

ALABAMA MINERS MEET.

They Pass Resolutions to Vote With the Populists.

The striking miners of Alabama have organized and, at a big meeting, passed resolutions to vote with populists in the coming elections. They decided to continue the strike and will hold another meeting on the 4th of July. The meeting was made up of strikers and all others were excluded, including newspaper men. Troops were held in readiness at Camp Forney to meet any emergency, but were not needed as the meeting passed off quietly. All the mines in the Birmingham section are well guarded.

Belva as an Attorney.

The supreme court of appeals of Virginia by vote of three to two decided to admit Mrs. Belva Lockwood, the noted woman's rights lawyer, of Washington, to the bar of the state. Last spring Mrs. Lockwood, who had some legal business at Richmond applied for license and the matter went to the appellate court.

CONGRESSIONAL.

DAILY PROCEEDINGS OF BOTH HOUSE AND SENATE.

The Discussion of Important Measures Briefly Epitomized.

In the house, Friday, a resolution was reported from the committee on rules directing the immediate consideration of the Indian appropriation bill, beginning with page 52, under the five minute rule, until 3:30 o'clock when the previous question would be considered as ordered on all pending amendments, and on the passage of the bill. The resolution was passed as amended, fixing 3:30 o'clock Saturday as the hour for closing the debate on the bill.

After ten days consideration of the measure, the house, Saturday, operating under the rule adopted Friday, finally disposed of the Indian appropriation bill substantially as reported to the house by the committee on Indian affairs. There were numerous minor amendments agreed to in the course of the debate upon the bill, but the most important, probably, was that offered by Mr. Coffeen, democrat, of Wyoming, directing the secretary of the interior to detail a special agent to negotiate with the Shoshone and Arapahoe Indians for the purchase of a portion of the Shoshone reservation in Wyoming.

The house spent the day Monday on Mr. Hatch's anti-option bill. An effort was made by its opponents to prevent its consideration, but they lost, the vote standing 122 to 81.

Tuesday morning, in the absence of Speaker Crisp, Representative Baily was appointed speaker pro tem of the house. The house proceeded in committee of the whole to the further consideration of the anti-option bill. Coombs, of New York, was the first speaker in opposition to the bill.

When the house, at 12:15 Wednesday took up the anti-option bill in committee of the whole, it was with the understanding that the debate should close with adjournment Thursday, and a vote on the bill and pending amendment be taken after the morning hour, Friday.

THE SENATE.

The tariff bill was laid before the senate Friday and Mr. Dolph took the floor and resumed the speech he was making against free wool when the senate adjourned Thursday night. Mr. Carey also spoke against putting coal on the free list, and was followed by Mr. Kyle in favor of it.

Among the business of the morning half-hour in the senate Saturday was the passage of a senate bill releasing and discharging the sureties of Osias Morgan, land office receiver in Tallahassee, Fla., from 1866 to 1870. The tariff bill was taken up at 10:30 o'clock and fair progress was made in its consideration.

No business of general interest was transacted in the morning half hour in the senate Monday. At 10:30 the tariff bill was taken up, the pending question being on the first two paragraphs of the silk schedule—298 and 299—which had been reserved on Saturday. At the request of Mr. Platt, the paragraphs went over without action until Tuesday.

The tariff bill was taken up in the senate at 10:30 o'clock Tuesday, and the free list reached at noon. No action was taken on the paragraph as to when the bill is to take effect, that question being left open. The amendment offered by Senator Jones was agreed to, adding a paragraph putting on the free list cattle, horses, sheep, or other domestic animals, that have strayed or been driven for pasturage across the border line between the United States and Mexico. Fifty paragraphs of the free list have been gone over with very little delay or friction, except in the matter of books, and the action of the finance committee on that, as on all other subjects, has prevailed.

The tariff bill was laid before the senate at 10:30 Wednesday, the pending question being paragraph 608, placing salt on the free list. Mr. Peffer moved to strike out the paragraph and put salt on the dutiable list at 5 cents per hundred pounds. The vote resulted, yeas 24, nays 33. Mr. Peffer was not sustained by his co-populists, Allen and Kyle, who voted with the democrats against his motion. So salt remains on the free list. Paragraph 641, "all sugars," having been reached, the amendment of the finance committee being to strike it out. Senator Aldrich demanded the yeas and nays, saying that he wanted to know who was in favor of free sugar and who was not. The paragraph was struck out. Yeas 33, nays 22. The senate has finished the free list part of the bill.

A PROMISE OF FULL PAY.

Mobile and Ohio Railroad Men Receive a Pleasant Notice.

President and General Manager Clarke, of the Mobile and Ohio, has addressed a circular to the engineers employed on the entire system, and to the conductors, brakemen, firemen and switchmen employed on the system south of the Ohio river, in which he notifies them that, although they accepted a reduction of 8 per cent from the 1st of May, the railroad company will not hold the engineers to the agreement which they made on May 1st, but will only ask them to accept a reduction of 4 per cent for June, July and August, after which time the full compensation agreed upon is to be restored.

To the trainmen south of the Ohio a similar restoration of one-half the reduction formerly agreed upon is made. This restoration will equalize all wage reductions with the arbitrators' finding in the case of the engineers north of the Ohio, who agreed upon a 4 per cent cut for three months.

TRADE WITHS.

Business of the Past Week as Reviewed by Dun & Co.

R. G. Dun & Co's review of trade for the past week says: "The strike of bituminous coal miners will end Monday, wherever the authority and advice of their general organization can end it, and there is little room to doubt that the coal famine will then begin to abate. Some time must elapse, however, before supplies of fuel will enable all works to resume that have no other reason for suspending production. Meanwhile, the demand for products is so slack that it seems questionable whether as many hands will find employment before the end of June as were employed in April.

"Further concessions have not enlarged the demand for cotton goods, and the recent report that production has been close to last year's, is said to be based upon returns from only the more fortunate mills. That goods are accumulating is evident, but sales have been distinctly improved with the weather.

"Exports of domestic products in May showed a decrease in all the principal classes excepting provisions, the aggregate being $37,822,712, against $45,341,443 last year, but more than $5,000,000 of the decrease in value is found to be due to the fall in prices. Exports from New York for two weeks of June have been 7 per cent larger in value than last year, while imports at New York have been 18 per cent smaller.

"Comparison of exchanges with last year alone are no longer instructive, but the daily payments through the principal clearing houses for the first half of June, have averaged $128,260,000, against $162,700,000 last year, and $171,100,000 for 1892. Owing to the fall in prices about this time last year comparatively little of the difference in the value of payments can now be attributed to the difference in prices of commodities, but it cannot be judged how much may be owing to the strikes and their consequences.

"Gold exports have diminished to $2,250,000 for the week, and sales of foreign exchange to mature about the end of July indicate some borrowing from Europe against products to be exported. A little more commercial paper from jobbers is also found by the banks, but the flood of money from the interior has not ceased, though the time for moving crops draws near.

"While business is narrow, it is comparatively free from losses by failure, for the liabilities reported in failures for the first week in June were only $2,507,228, of which $476,118 were of manufacturing and $1,872,261 of trading concerns. The aggregate liabilities thus far reported in failures in May were but $13,514,760, of which $5,146,025 were of manufacturing and $6,912,302 of trading concerns. The number of failures this week has been 232 in the United, against 316 last year, and 40 in Canada, against 34 last year."

PANAMA IN FLAMES.

The City Nearly Destroyed—Loss of Three Million Dollars.

The greatest calamity that has ever befallen Panama was a fire which started Wednesday afternoon and burned fiercely for nine hours before it was gotten under control. The flames were finally subdued after having destroyed over 300 buildings in the most thickly populated section of the city, including the prefecture and the Chinese quarters.

The loss of property amounts to nearly $3,000,000. The insurance is estimated at only about $600,000. One-third of the area of the city is devastated and 5,000 persons are rendered homeless. The fire burned nearly every building on Lastablas, Juan Ponce, Lastamas, Salisfudes and Espanadas streets. The city market was saved.

WHOLESALE SUICIDE.

Fourteen People Kill Themselves in New York in One Day.

A wave of suicide swept over New York city Wednesday.

James F. Forshay killed his little son, and then killed himself. Constant brooding over the death of his wife is supposed to be the cause. William Alters married a rich girl, quarreled about money matters and cut his throat. Seven women and five men besides the two whose names are given committed suicide. Domestic trouble and hard times are given as the causes, but it is probable that the hot weather has something to do with it.

Hemingway Pardoned.

Ex-State Treasurer, W. S. Hemingway, sentenced December 1, 1890 by the supreme court of Mississippi to a term of five years in the penitentiary for failure to turn over to his successor in office $315,621.19, was pardoned Saturday afternoon by Governor Stone. Volumes of petitions bearing the names of some 15,000 citizens, including senators and congressmen, had been presented in his behalf, and it is said that only two protests had been filed, one from a non-resident, and the other anonymous.

A New Summer Drink.

An English dairy paper tells of a new use for skim milk. After the milk has been creamed by the centrifuge, the skim milk is sterilized by heating to destroy all bacteria or germs of ferment, or other possible means of injury to its keeping. The milk is then charged with pure carbonic acid gas at a high pressure, and placed in syphon bottles, from which it can be drawn at any time. The milk so treated, it is claimed, will remain sweet indefinitely. The medical profession have taken hold of the carbonated milk and are prescribing it for persons who have not been able to digest whole milk. It is said to be very valuable and most easily digested.

Now, if the scientists will furnish some cheap and simple means by which the farmer can charge the milk with carbonic acid gas, this discovery may be made valuable. Milk as an article of human diet is not used to the extent it should be, and if some one would compile a milk cook-book showing the various ways in which milk may be made up into nutritious and appetizing dishes, it would have a great economic value.—Western Plowman.

Steelyard.

The last syllable of "steelyard" does not signify a measure, but owes its origin to the "yard," or court, in London where traders sold their steel, and which was regulated by the "Merchants of the Steelyard." In this yard, or court, there would stand some kind of balance for weighing the metal, and this meaning soon supplanted the original word.

FRATERNITY.

The moon was just rising from a bank of dense clouds as the burglar reached through the hole he had made in the back door and raised the latch. He had scarcely crossed the threshold when he started violently. "Aha!" he muttered. It was not so much his words as his manner. For an instant his eyes rested hungrily upon the glittering silverware. Then his glance wandered to the plumbers' tools that were scattered about the floor. "No," he muttered; "this is another man's job and I won't take the bread out of his mouth." Retracing his steps he was soon lost to view.—Detroit Tribune.

FATE OF A PUBLIC SPIRITED MAN.

The man who delights to impart his knowledge to strangers was riding in a street car the other day, and directly opposite to him sat a young fellow plenteously endowed with ears.

The knowledgeous man surveyed the other with deep interest for a while, and at last managed to catch his eye, when he said:

"I saw something in the paper the other day which would interest you."

"Were you speaking to me?" asked the young fellow.

"Yes," was the reply, as the speaker leaned across the aisle to get nearer to the man he was taking to. "I was saying that I saw something in the paper the other day which ought to be interesting to you, and which really ought to reconcile you to your lot in life."

"What on earth do you mean?"

By this time the attention of every one was directed to the conversation, and the answer was perfectly audible all over the car.

"Well, the paper said that large ears were a sign of generosity, and I—"

"It did, did it?" said the young man, as he rose and seized the knowledgeous man by the nose. "Much obliged for the information."

The man with the ears kept hold of the other's nose as he led him to the platform, and then, with a deft kick, propelled him into the street.

As the latter picked himself out of the dust, he said to himself:

"It isn't any use trying to benefit people. If you happen to get hold of a particularly consoling fact, the people to whom it would do the most good don't seem to want to hear it. Such is life."—Harper's Bazar.

A PUT UP JOB.

"Girls," he said dejectedly, as he sat with his head resting on his hand, "girls make me weary."

"What's the matter now?" inquired his mother.

"Well," he went on spasmodically, "I went to see that Linwood girl last night; she's been holding me off for a month; wanted me to pop, I'm sure; kept hinting every night I went there that I was staying too late; but I never took the hint; girls have a way of shying at a chap in that style; they read about it in the papers; last night I made up my mind to nail her to the mast; talked right along for I don't know how long; girl yawned two or three times, but I never let up; finally I got where I thought was the place to make the break, and was just on the point of asking her when the clock began to strike; I counted up to twelve and had no idea it was so late; clock kept on striking and I kind of gagged and had to stop for it; it didn't stop, though; girl began to snigger; clock kept right on; then I began to get warm; when the old clock had struck sixty-seven it laid down and quit; then before I had a chance to get my second wind, the old man sung out from the head of the stairs: 'Say, Lizzie, if that fellow is going to remain much longer after the clock has struck sixty-seven, he won't get home till some time next week, will he?' and I got up and left. Now, what do you think of that, mother?" and the mother got the camphor bottle and gave it to her boy.—Detroit Free Press.

The Vanishing Woman.

A juggler stepped at Madras on to the deck of a Peninsula and Oriental Company's steamer, and offered the company assembled, who were lounging about highly bored by the old method of coaling, if they would subscribe, to show them something better than common juggling. The collection, of course, was forthcoming at once; he cleared a space on the deck, and told his wife to lie down. The young woman, who may have weighed seven stone, but more probably six, lay down, and her husband placed over her a shallow, flat basket, with a handle at the back, exactly resembling the baskets used for vegetables in East Anglia and called a "frail." Then, with a light and graceful gesture, he took up the basket, and laid it down two or three feet off.

The woman had vanished, and the audible amazement seemed deeply to gratify the juggler.

Unfortunately, the writer, essentially an awkward man, in stepping back stepped on to the edge of the frail, and heard a little cry of pain. The whole thing had been a piece of superb acting. The young woman had learned to hook herself with her fingers and prehensile toes into the strong matwork forming the top of the frail, and the husband, a slight but powerful man, had learned to lift her as if he were lifting nothing but the basket. The writer, of course, said nothing about his awkwardness; the juggler, after one savage glance, said nothing either, and only two years ago the case was quoted as one of those only seen in India, and which, owing to the total absence of machinery, could not be explained away.—The Spectator

"OLD GLORY'S" DAY.

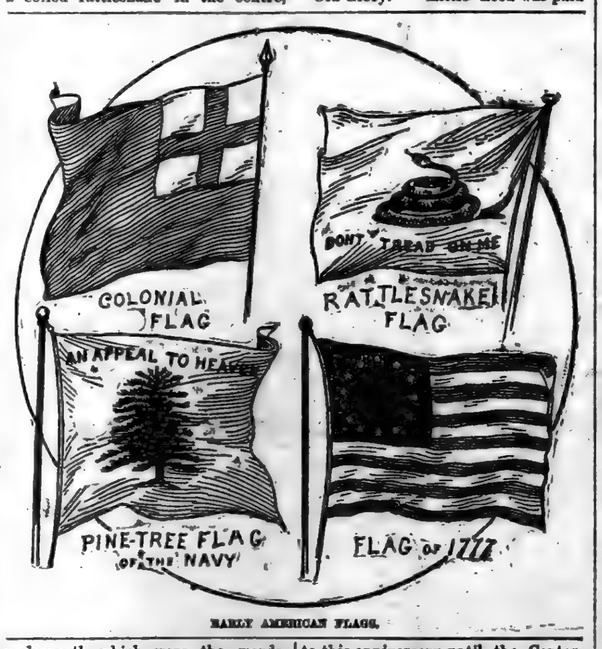
A Timely Account of the Origin of the Flag.

First Colors Used Before the "Declaration."

The Star-Spangled Banner was born June 14, 1777. The colonial flag chiefly used by the colonies of New England previous to the Revolution, was red, with a field of white crossed by a red bar from top to bottom and from right to left.

At the battle of Bunker Hill, June 17, 1775, the flag displayed by the Americans was similar to the one described, except that its color was blue, the white field with the red crossed bars remaining the same, while a pine-tree was shown in the upper corner of the field. The Pine-Tree flag of the navy, used by our ships during the early part of the Revolution, was white, with a pine-tree, and the words, "An Appeal to Heaven."

Early in the Revolutionary War the patriots showed their earnestness by using what is known in history as "The Rattlesnake flag." While it cannot be claimed that this emblem was very mystic, yet it was typical of the resolution of the Americans in their struggle for independence. The flag was yellow in color, and showed a coiled rattlesnake in the centre, underneath which were the words, "Don't Tread on Me."



EARLY AMERICAN FLAGS.

The first national flag used in 1776, before the Declaration of Independence, contained thirteen red stripes, alternating with white, signifying the thirteen colonies. The field was blue, crossed with red bars, as in the colonial flag, and crossed again diagonally by two narrow bars of white. As I have stated, the first Star Spangled Banner was unfolded to the breezes of heaven June 14, 1777. Congress was then in session in Philadelphia, and there were well-founded rumors of an invasion of the colonies by Burgoyne, from Canada. Congress appointed a committee, of which John Adams was Chairman, to examine the various designs submitted, and to report on a suitable flag for the new nation, then in the throes of its first existence. The report of the committee, made June 14, 1777, was the recommendation:

"That the flag of the thirteen United States be thirteen stripes, alternate red and white; that the union be thirteen stars, white, in a blue field, representing a new constellation."

The report was adopted unanimously, and a sample flag of silk was prepared for Congress. The number of stripes was made to correspond with the number of States, and the colors—red, white and blue—were chosen because of the distinctness with which they can be seen at a distance. Fifteen years later, the Republic of France, emerging from the Reign of Terror and tempest of blood, adopted the same colors for its flag. The pretty conceit was that the red represented the blood of the patriots, white the purity of patriotism, and blue the smiles of heaven.

The first idea of the American patriots was that a new star and a new stripe should be added to the flag for each new State admitted into the Union. May 1, 1795, Kentucky and Vermont having been admitted, Senator Bradley, of Vermont, offered a resolution, adding two stars and two stripes to the flag.

This would have answered if our Union had been content to grow slowly, but as many new States were continually knocking at the door for admission, it became apparent that at no distant day the increasing number of stripes would destroy the beauty and symmetry of the flag. The stripes were fixed forever at thirteen, the field was elongated, making it rectangular, and it was ordered that a new star should take its place in the field from the Fourth of July succeeding the birth of each new State.

The Star Spangled Banner is the most beautiful flag ever devised. As you will observe, the flag of 1777 contained a square field, in which the five-pointed stars formed an endless circle. The arrangement of the stars, as the new States were admitted, sometimes required study and skill, but it invariably retained its impressive beauty, and will always be the most striking among all the emblems of the different nations of the earth.

The new arrangement was originated in 1816, by the naval hero, Captain Reid. On April 13, 1818, "Old Glory" was hoisted over the Hall of Representatives, where it shall float through all the coming ages.

Some countries have so many anniversaries to celebrate that they lose a great deal of their significance. The boys and girls will agree that the fault of the United States lies rather in the opposite direction, and that we do not have enough of them. While I am not prepared to say this, yet I do insist that there should be one more national holiday added to the calendar; that is, the birthday of "Old Glory." Little heed was paid to this anniversary until the Centennial year, since which time the idea has steadily taken a stronger and deeper hold upon the American heart.—Blue and Gray.

A Fourth of July Episode.

American Eagle—"This is the day I celebrate."

British Lion—"Excuse my back.

Nearly a Quarrel.

"Excelsior is my motto," said the rocket.

"Oh, come off," said the punk.

"You're no match for me," retorted the sky-scraper.

"Well, if I were to light on you, where would you be?" queried the punk.

"Ah, but you don't light on me. I light on you," insinuated the rocket, with a shrug of his shoulders. And the fireworks nearly exploded with mirth.

After the "Fourth."

Full many a boy this quiet morn,
All bandaged, poulticed and forlorn,
On bed of anguish tossed
Feels numb
And blue;

He wishes he had ne'er been born
To monkey with a powder horn,
For yesterday he lost
A thumb
Or two.

The Baltimore and Ohio railroad broke the record Sunday in running 691 miles in fifteen hours and twenty-six minutes.

A London cable dispatch says: Owing to the assassination of President Carnot the French government has seized the telegraph lines. All news from France since the seizure has come over the long-distance telephone.

Monday morning the employes of the Pullman company in St. Louis, to the number of 330, went on a strike. The men claim that they struck on an order from Chicago. The company at present is making no effort to secure new men.

A dispatch received in Philadelphia from Florence, Italy, announces the death there of E. P. Fabbri, formerly a member of all the Drexel banking firms. He retired from the Drexels in 1885. He is reported to have amassed a fortune of $20,000,000.

A cable dispatch from Edinburgh, Scotland, says: The strike of Scotch coal miners began Tuesday morning, 60,000 men ceasing work. The strike has also thrown 20,000 steel workers out of employment. They are idle on account of a lack of fuel.

The strike at the Soddy coal mines, twenty miles from Chattanooga, Tenn., is broken. The miners returned to work Monday afternoon at the same old price they were getting before the strike occurred. They have been on the strike for nine weeks.

Manufacturing plants in all sections of the city of Pittsburg, Pa., some of which have been idle for months, resumed Monday with a full force of men in all departments. On the south side nearly every plant of importance is running. All this is the result of the resumption of coal mining.

A cable dispatch from Rome says: For the first time since the unification of Italy by the entrance into Rome of Victor Emanuel and his occupation of the Quirnal, the royal standard which floats over that palace was placed at half-mast, on account of the death of Carnot. This was done by express order of King Humbert.

The 150 employes of the Pullman shops, in Ludlow, Ky., were called out Monday morning by F. W. Phelan, representing the American Railway Union. A strike has been threatened for some weeks—ever since the shops in Chicago shut down. The men demand a restoration of old wages, which were some time ago cut from 10 to 33½ per cent.

The consolidation of three national banks of Deadwood, S. D., has been made, the Merchants' National and the Deadwood National turned their assets and deposits over to the First National and closed their doors. Failure to make money and the possession of considerable and almost worthless security are assigned as the causes of the closing of the two institutions.

A London cable dispatch of Sunday says: Thousands of persons have stood outside the gate at White Lodge scanning the bulletins concerning the duchess of York and her boy baby, the possible future king. Both patients are making satisfactory progress. The sovereigns of Europe have telegraphed their congratulations. The first of the dispatches came from the German emperor.

A bad wreck occurred on the Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern at Walnut creek, O., Sunday afternoon, in which three men were killed, two fatally injured and one so badly hurt that it is not thought he can recover. The men were all tramps stealing a ride. There were eleven altogether, but five had narrow escapes and two only saved their lives by jumping down a trestle fifty feet high.

At the Vermont populist state convention held at Montpelier, Tuesday, the following ticket was nominated: Governor, Thomas S. McGinnis, Jericho; lieutenant governor, Henry W. Conro, South Hero; secretary of state, A. L. Bowen, South Dorset; treasurer, Dr. Walter S. Curtis, West Randolph; auditor of accounts, Charles S. Lewis, South Reading. The convention adopted the Omaha platform as the state platform.

An immense meeting of socialists was held in Vienna, Austria, Sunday, it being estimated that fully 25,000 were present. The object of the meeting was to declare in favor of universal suffrage, for which the Austrian workingmen have been agitating for a long time. The speakers urged that the agitation be continued until the demand was conceded. It was the intention of the socialists to have a procession, but this was prevented by the police.

The tug James D. Nichols, owned by William Reeves, of New York, foundered off the Atlantic highlands shortly after 1 o'clock Sunday afternoon. The Nichols had on board a party of excursionists, numbering 68 persons, and also carried a crew of five men. As near as can be learned at this time, 48 persons were rescued by the steamer Algonquin, of the Clyde line, and the tugs Governor, Wallace B. Flint and R. J. Moran. This leaves 25 persons unaccounted for, and these have probably been drowned.

Five persons were drowned Sunday morning in the East river, about 400 feet from the Atlantic Yacht Club, at the foot of Fifty-sixth street, Brooklyn, N. Y. The drowned people, who are at present unknown, were two men, two women and a child. Another child, a girl about 9 years old, was rescued. They were all evidently Swedes or Germans. They were in an eighteen-foot catboat, and were struck by a squall that arose about 10:30 o'clock. The boat capsized, and all were thrown into the water and drowned except the 2-year-old girl.

The railway commissioner of North Carolina has completed the assessment of railway property in North Carolina. The increase in valuation is $500,000. The amount of new line put in operation during the twelve months ending June 1st is only ten miles. Fifteen miles of the track of the Jamesville and Washington railway was taken up during the year.

A Chicago special says: The strikes growing out of the Pullman boycott are spreading rapidly to every road leading out of Chicago which handles Pullman's cars, with almost the complete tie up of the Illinois Central. The American Railway Union has finally fixed a basis of dealing with the railroads which refuse to abrogate the Pullman contracts.

Work has commenced on two important new factories in Chattanooga. The masons began laying the foundations of a cotton seed oil mill at Alton Park, which will be in operation in time for the fall crop. The ground is also being surveyed for the pencil factory of the Austrian firm of Hellmuth & Co. The Austrians have made all arrangements for the immediate erection of a $40,000 plant.

A terrific rain, wind and thunder storm swept over East Tennessee Tuesday night. The storm was followed by a cloudburst on the Tennessee river, twenty miles east of Knoxville. Great damage was done to thousands of acres of crops, whole cornfields being completely demolished and fences laid low while several small houses and barns were washed away. No loss of life is reported.

TAR AND FEATHERS

Is What Colorado's Adjutant General Was Treated To.

Shortly after midnight Saturday Adjutant General Tarsney, of the Colorado state national guard, was called from his room at the Alamo hotel, at Colorado Springs, and informed that somebody at Cripple Creek wished to speak to him over the telephone, and when he appeared to answer the call he was confronted by masked men, armed with revolvers, who requested him to accompany them.

General Tarsney called for help, but was quickly clubbed into submission. Several more kidnappers appeared and carried him to the sidewalk, where two carriages under guard were in waiting. He was forced into one carriage and both carriages were then driven at a rapid rate to Austin bluffs. General Tarsney was then removed from the carriage, stripped and a coat of tar and feathers quickly administered. After tar and feathering him General Tarsney was warned against returning to the Springs.

DAZEY CONVICTED.

It is Probable That He Will Go to Join Porterfield.

At Nashville George A. Dazey was convicted of conspiracy with Frank Porterfield to defraud the Commercial National bank. A motion for a new trial and arrest of judgment was entered, however, and his sentence was withheld, he being held in the meantime on a $20,000 bond. George A. Dazey was a member of the cotton firm of Dobbins & Dazey that was rated at $500,000. J. P. Dobbins, the other member of the firm, was located at New Orleans, and they had branches all over the south.

A TRAIN LOOTED.

Masked Robbers Hold up an Express on the S., P. & W.

The Gainesville express car, train number six, on the Thomasville division of the Savannah, Florida and Western railroad, was held up between Waycross and Homerville, Ga., Tuesday morning about 2 o'clock, by masked men. After wearing a large amount of money and some valuables, they cut the engine from the train and rode to a point about one or two miles from Argyle, and got off. Before leaving the engine they opened the throttle and it went flying down the road, all the steam was exhausted

Dallas, the largest city of Texas, according to the census, and the center of the richest farming region, is about to have a waterway to the gulf by the deepening of Trinity river.

The Noel Mill Company, of Estill Springs, Tenn., has just closed contracts for 17,000 bags (equal to 21,000 barrels) of flour, to go to Liverpool, England, via Port Royal, S. C., on a steamer sailing during the first half of July.

The carefully taken census for the new city directory gives Chattanooga, including her suburbs, a population of 46,353. This is a loss of 3,426 as compared with a similar census made in 1892. Considering the great depression in business, it is considered a good showing.

A Columbia, S. C., special says: Ex-Congressman George D. Tillman will be in the race for governor. He has written a letter to a friend stating that he will enter the canvass and that he will stand on the "straight democratic platform." This will materially influence the gubernatorial campaign.

Louisville, Ky., was visited Tuesday afternoon by a severe wind and electrical storm, which lasted half an hour. Many houses were unroofed and razed and the occupants had narrow escapes. Large shade trees were blown down and several people were injured by electric wires.

A circular has been issued announcing the consolidation of all the accounting officers of the several railways composing the Plant system. The auditing officers of all these roads will be in Savannah after July 1st. C. T. Morrell has been appointed comptroller of the system, S. S. McIver auditor of receipts and H. H. McKee auditor of disbursements.

The first substantial preliminary in the building of a steel plant at Bessemer, Ala., has been completed. The city council of Bessemer has formally completed the contract to buy the waterworks from the land company, there for $125,000 of gold bonds, the condition being that the proceeds are to be expended in the erection of a steel plant to cost not less than $300,000.

The Confederate Woman's Monument Association of Richmond, Va., was formally organized at a joint meeting of the Howitzer Battery Association. A full complement of officers were elected, and were directed to secure a charter and the work of raising money for the woman's monument will be inaugurated without delay. The subscriptions already volunteered aggregate $600.

A Birmingham, Ala., dispatch of Tuesday says: At the Mabel mines, Sunday night, unknown persons hurled a dynamite bomb at the house of Benjamin Moore, a striker who recently returned to work. The bomb was aimed at a window, but struck the window sill, exploding on the outside and wrecking the building. It happened that Moore and his family were at church and no one was injured.

It is announced that the July interest on the $2,250,000 first mortgage bonds of the Carolina Central Railroad Company will not be paid on account of recent large expenditures to put the railroad in a condition to be safely and economically operated. Holders are invited to meet in the office of the Maryland Trust Company, in Baltimore, July 30th, at 12 m., to decide what action may be deemed advisable under the circumstances.

It is reported at Chattanooga, Tenn., that C. W. Lewis, the negro preacher who was recently sentenced by Judge Key, of the United States court, to eighteen years in the penitentiary for illegally procuring pensions, has been pardoned. No official confirmation can be secured, however. Lewis was the author of gigantic pension frauds and his swindling involved not less than 600 people in Tennessee, Georgia, Alabama and Missouri.

INCREASED APPROPRIATION.

Four Southern Rivers and Harbors Divided Upon.

The senate committee on commerce, considering the river and harbor bill, has decided upon an increase in the appropriation for Norfolk harbor, without agreeing upon the amount. The same is true of cumberland sound, Georgia, and of Key West, Fernandina and Charlotte harbors, and Apalachicola river, in Florida. The provisions of the house bill regarding the improvement of the Tennessee river will be so altered as to designate the uses to which the $100,000 appropriated for that stream shall be put.

A Woman to Hang.

The trial of Mrs. Lizzie Halliday for the murder of her husband and two women named Quillian, has been concluded at Monticello, N. Y., with the conviction of the prisoner. The jury found her guilty of murder in the first degree. Mrs. Halliday's only defense was a plea of insanity and that was upset by Dr. E. C. Mann, an expert. Mrs. Halliday was sentenced to be executed during the week beginning August 6, 1894.

Danger of War.

Advices from Paris are to the effect that the murder of an Italian by a frenzied crowd anywhere in France just now might be the signal for a European war. A Washington special states that the car in which Senators Brice, Morgan, Falkner, Murphy, Caffrey, Davis, Carey, Walcott and McMillian are to make their trip over the Pacific railroad is being heavily stocked with wines and liquors for the trip. The fact that there is truth in such reports constitutes one of the blots on the American government. Congressmen and Senators sent out on great business for the government making little short of a drunken lark of it. Every whiskey drinking official ought to be deposed.

President Carnot, of France, was assassinated June 24th by a young talian, an anarchist. Words of sympathy were expressed by every other government, and anarchy gets fresh denunciation. The powers of the entire world will be used to stamp out such pernicious characters.

M. Casimir—Perier was elected President of France in the place of Carnot deceased.

Those charged with the management of our offices should be above reproach in their private lives. They should ferret out and bring to justice violators without fear or favor. The public good demands that nothing short of this be done. Then when Grand Juries have investigated the charges and indictments are found nothing should be allowed to come in to thwart justice either for the State or the defendant. It is often the case that those interested in suits seek to bribe or otherwise unduly influence jurors. Such conduct cannot be too highly condemned, and it is refreshing to note that Judge Mabry, of Selma, has recently put heavy fines upon two men thus seeking to outwit the court. If solicitors, judges, and jurors can be bribed or otherwise managed then away goes many of the most cherished rights of the people.

Special correspondence from Corona to the Age-Herald says that it is generally admitted by the miners that they propose to continue on the strike until the race between Kolb and Oates is settled. All the miners who are on a strike at this place are Kolb men is settled. All of the miners who are on a strike at this point are Kolb men.

One year ago this writer took charge of the CHILTON VIEW. Under very many discouragements and embarassments he has labored. His one purpose has been to be faithful in serving the people in Chilton County and the State of Alabama. If in the discharge of what he conceived to be his duty he has wronged any man, his heart craves pardon. If his labors have added strength to the spirits of those battling for the right he rejoices in the good done. Financially the VIEW has had a hard fight to wage. It has been necessary to use money made in other lines of business to keep it afloat. This would not be necessarry if his Democratic friends would all be prompt in paying their subscriptions. From the third party officials, who regardless of price, place their advertising elsewhere we have no favors to ask. Their predictions have been that the VIEW would soon die. Well, it still lives, and here goes for another year. During this coming year he expects to give his readers better service than in the past. Since the 1st of last July many of the friends who had ceased to be subscribers to the VIEW have come back, and the list is still open. If the present subscribers will just give a little assistance the old-time prosperity will soon return to the VIEW

HOW TO VOTE.

From the law we take the following in reference to a preparation of the ballot and below we add the ballot. It will be observed that we have placed the letter X opposite the Democratic candidates.

Section 16.—Be it further inacted. That the ballots printed in accordance with the provision of this act shall contain the names of all the candidates nominated as herein before provided who have not declined. The names of all candidates for the same office shall be printed together and arranged alphabetically according to the initial letters of their surnames irrespective of party. But the order in which the titles of the several offices to be filled shall be arranged upon the ballots shall be left to the discretion of the officer charged with the printing of said ballots.

Section 20—Be it further inacted. That whenever a constitutional amendment or other public measure is submitted to a vote of the people, the substance of such amendment or other public measure shall be twice in the same language clearly indicated upon the ballot after the list of candidates followed in one case by the word, "Yes" and in another by the word "No"

Section 21.—Be it further inacted. That all ballots provided by the Judge of Probate of any county for an election shall be alike printed in plain type, in straight lines, upon plain white paper, so thick that the printing cannot be distinguished on the back, with a slim line between each name and extending sufficiently to the left of names to easily permit making before each name a cross mark (X) and in the appropriate place the words "Vote for One" (or two or other numbers, as the case may be) to indicate the number which may be elected to each office, and shall be substantially in the following form, except the order in which the several offices to be filled are stated, namel:

THE DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM.

The Democracy of Alabama in convention assembled, re affirm the principles of the Democratic party as declared in its platform adopted at Chicago in 1892, and congratulates the country upon the success of those principles in the triumphant election of Grover Cleveland, who, by his generous treatment of our people, has shown that he is the President of the whose country, knowing no North, no South, no East, no West. We recognize the wisdom and patriotism of the president, and believe in his feality to the principles of our party, and indorse his administration of the Federal Government; while some of us differ with him matters of policy, we are agreed in the belief that he is actuated by motives of the highest patriotism and by an unselfish devotion to the greatest good of the whole people.

While there are differences of opinion among us in matters of detail, we all believe in the free coinage of silver when ever it can be done consistently with the maintenance of a sound and safe currency.

We earnestly urge upon our Senators and Representatives in Congress the speedy reform of the tariff and the prompt repeal of the ten per cent. tax on the issue of state banks.

We heartily endorse the present administration of the state Government, headed by Governor Thomas G. Jones, who has so wisely and courageously his great trust, and we commend him for his impartial and fearless execution of the laws.

We pledge to the people of Alabama a continuance of the good government of our state affairs inaugurated by the election of George S. Houston in 1874.

The election law enacted at the last session of our General Assembly is in accordance with the principle upon which are based the laws regulating elections in a large majority of the states of this Union enacted with out regard to party, and was intended to obtain at the ballot box a full and free expression of the popular will; and after giving it a trial, should it fail to accomplish the end which it was intended to effect, we pledge ourselves to make such changes and alterations therein as may be necessary to effect that end.

We pledge our party to the maintenace of a system of free public schools and to increase the appropriations for that purpose whenever the financial condition of the state will permit.

We pledge our party to continue its efforts to remove all the evils of the present convict system and to pass an appropriate legislation to prevent its working injustice to any class of our people.

We extend a cordial invitation to all voters of Alabama who believe in the principles of democracy and are in favor of the maintenance of a good government, to unite with us in the election of the ticket nominated by this convention.

TIMES DEMOCRAT.

Suppose one of our Jeffersonian leaders raises 50 or 100 bales of cotton and his employes take a notion that he must pay them 75c per hundred for picking this cotton, instead of 40c which the price would only authorize him to pay and when on his refusal to pay the demand ied his employes should go on a strike and resort to arms to prevent other hands from picking at a lower price, or should burn his wagons and cripple his mules so that he could not get his cotton to market, and suppose that owing to such speeches as Mr. Skaggs is delivering this doctrine should become popular in this country, and the Sheriff could not deal with it with out bankrupting the county of Elmore, then according to Mr Skaggs it would be and outrage for the Governor to send troops here to maintain the peace.

Philander Morgan in writing to the News Reporter of Talladega says it is time as you say This Miserable one how party can never give the Negro any thing for his support and it Wouldn't if it Could. There it is, while Kolb is coding with the negro on the one side, this honest old Talladegian comes out square and says we would not give the negro anything if we could Then want the negro vote, but the rank of the Populites hat the negro with a bitter hatred.

Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
DR. G. C. OSGOOD,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE,
Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

A PROSPEROUS HOME.

Husband.—"Why, it's just a year ago tomorrow that we were married."

Wife.—"So it is; and, do you know, I am wearing the same pair of shoes that I was married in, and they are not half worn out."

Husband.—"So am I."

Wife.—"Why, how strange. Mine were made by the Hamilton-Brown Shoe Co., of St. Louis—their Ladies' Hand Sewed."

Husband.—"And mine are their Men's Hand Sewed Shoe."

"Well, let's stick to them for shoemakers for the rest of our lives, their shoes wear as finely as they look."

LOCAL BREVITIES.

Hot weather.

Watermelons are being brought in town.

Mr. John Staufield visited Birmingham last week.

Mr. Sam Catts, who has been the faithful compositor and lately local editor of the VIEW has gone to Montgomery to accept a position with the Alabama Printing Company. We regret exceedingly to part with so faithful and useful a young man, but congratulate him on securing a position where his opportunities in several respects will be better No young man ever stood better with all the people of his acquaintance than Mr. Catts and his departure is universally regretted.

Master Osmond Middleton now holds down the cases at the View and hopes by a few weeks practice to be able to present our readers with a typographically neat paper.

Mr. R. C. Middleton of Birmingham visited his parents here Sunday.

Mr. Henry Martin of Blum Springs visited relatives in Clanton last week

The petite and bewitching Miss Katie Bell who has been visiting relatives here, has returned to her home in Montgomery much to the regret of her host of little friends.

Quite an interesting game of ball was played Friday afternoon on the home grounds between the second nines of Clanton and Jemison. Both teams played well, but the "yellow stripes of Clanton" were too much for the visitors The game was very close up to the first half of the ninth inning, when S. Gullahorn went to the bat, knocked a three bagger and brought two men home. This was the saving stroke for the Clanton team. W. D. Pinckard and B. Y. McMorries for Clanton, and Langston for Jemison deserve credit for their good pitching. The spectators prepared to cheer whenever P. Chanfield went to the bat for he was sure to knock a two or three bagger.

Osmond Middleton as catcher for the Clanton team deserves special mention for his good catching, the boys are proud of him. The score stood 20 to 18 in favor of Clanton The presence of our lovely girls was an inspiration to the home boys. Mr. Durwood Fosbee deserves much credit for his excellent work on first base. Mr. Tom Gullahorn, as umpire, deserves much credit for his just and fair decisions.

Chas W. Hare.

Last Thursday evening Lewis Bankhead, a negro boy of 18 years attempted to outrage the little ten year old daughter of Mr. Jones, near Coopers. He was captured Saturday morning fully identified and then lynched. He was a consummate fiend who had made other like attempts.

Do you wear hats? W. L. Stumpf thought you did so he has them at

During the past two weeks we have had the expression of Col. B. Carroll and Frank Tillary at Blockton. They were a committee to solicit aid for the striking miners of Blockton They feel that their cause is just and believe that if they can hold out 3 weeks longer that their fight will be won.

The Southern Union Singing Convention will convene at Salem Church five miles east of Coopers on Saturday before the fourth Sunday in July and continue two days.

Before long Clanton expects to have a monster barbecue and invite Col. Oates and Capt. Kolb to speak to the multitudes. The friends of Capt. Kolb need have no fear but that Col. Oates will give him the fairest kind of treatment if he will meet him. The people want to hear both sides, and the Democrats will match any man the opposition may name.

Mr. Wm. McDaniel has recently moved his shoe shop in Mr. Wright's store.

Victor Vines invites his friends to call and see his stock of family and fancy groceries and to bring him chickens and eggs.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

Farmers are in fine shape now for the recent dry spell of weather, which has set them back considerably, and if we don't get some rain in a few days it will be distressing. As a chinaman once said, that all Americans were decoys or almanacs: makers for all their conversation were inquiries about health and the state of weather. So if you eliminate these themes your scribe will certainly be left "high and dry". so far as news is concerned. Mr. Bill Council and family, of Tuscaloosa, are spending a few weeks here with his parents. Mr. W. D. Goss and Masters Napoleon and Nadlebutt Goss, visited Salem last Sunday. Mr. W. H. Kendrick and family visited relatives near Verbena last Saturday and Sunday.

The Democratic Executive committee of Chilton held a meeting on the 29th. Most of the members were present.

There are many requests for Rev. W. J. Ruddick of Stanton, to make the race for Representative. He is a simon pure Democrat, an intelligent citizen, and christian gentleman. He has been for many years a Machinist and Engineer. He is in thorough sympathy with the masses and at the same time enjoys the confidence and esteem of all who know him.

SAM JONES.

His Private Opinion Publicly Expressed, About the Populites.

The populites have been blowing about Sam Jones' opinion of the Democrats. Here is what Sam says about them:

"The third party, or the party of the third part, or whatever you may call it, may get to heaven but they'll never get to Washington. It is not on the way Washington is the wickedest place on earth. It is the home of the devil.

The average democratic and republican politicians are little better than rascals but the third party man is a fool. You can reform a rascal, but did you try to monkey with a fool.

CONGRESSIONAL.

DAILY PROCEEDINGS OF BOTH HOUSE AND SENATE.

The Discussion of Important Measures Briefly Epitomized.

The Hatch anti-option bill passed the house Friday afternoon by a vote of 150 to 86, but it did not carry with it the amendment of silver which Mr. Ponce had proposed to offer. Mr. Hartman, of Montana, moved that the bill be recommitted with instructions to the committee to report it back with an amendment providing for the free coinage of silver. Mr. Bailey, who was acting speaker, promptly ruled it out of order and that ended the silver part of the proceedings.

Speaker Crisp resumed his duties in the house Saturday, and as he rapped the house to order a ripple of applause swept over the floor at his reappearance. He showed traces of the effects of his recent indisposition in both his appearance and manner. The report of the committee on elections in the case of the contest of Watson versus Black, in favor of Black, was made to the house by Representative Lester, of Georgia, and placed on the calendar. The remainder of the day's session was devoted to the consideration of the general deficiency bill for the current year. No amendments of importance were made. The senate amendments to the house bill incorporating the grand lodge of Knights of Pythias were agreed to and the measure now goes to the President for his signature.

Immediately after the reading of the journal, and Chaplain Bagby's prayer, in the house, Monday morning, a message was announced from the president, by Mr. Pruden, conveying the intelligence of the assassination of President Carnot. It was at once laid before the house, and Mr. McCreary, of Kentucky, chairman of the committee on foreign affairs, offered the following resolutions: "Resolved, that the house of representatives of the United States of America has heard with profound sorrow of the assassination of President Carnot, and tenders the people of France their sincere sympathy in their national bereavement. That the president of the United States be requested to communicate this expression of sorrow to the government of the republic of France, and to Madame Carnot, and that as a further mark of respect to the memory of the president of the French republic, the house of representatives do now adjourn. Mr. Hitt, of Illinois, ex-chairman of the committee on foreign affairs, and formerly secretary of legislation at Paris, paid a brief and eloquent tribute to the memory of the dead president, and the resolutions were agreed to. In accordance with their terms, Speaker Crisp, at 12:10 o'clock, declared the house adjourned until Tuesday.

Preceding the further consideration of the general deficiency appropriation bill the house Tuesday passed a number of miscellaneous bills, including the following: Making labor day, (the first Monday in September) a legal holiday. Providing that in all pension claims the oath of a private or non-commissioned officer shall have the same force and effect as that of a commissioned officer.

In the house, Wednesday, a message from the president of the council and minister of foreign affairs of the French government, in response to the resolutions of of sympathy passed by the house, Monday, was laid before the body by Speaker Crisp. On motion of Mr. Sayers a joint resolution was agreed to, to provide temporarily for the expenditures of the government after the expiration of the present fiscal year, by extending the same rate of appropriations for July as bills for current year make for each month thereof.

THE SENATE.

In the morning half hour, Friday, the senate passed a bill to incorporate the supreme lodge of Knights of Pythias; also a senate bill making the first Monday in September every year (Labor Day) a legal holiday. At 10:30 o'clock the tariff bill was taken up, the question being on the income tax sections. During the discussion Harris and Hill had a sharp passage at arms.

A resolution heretofore offered by Senator Call for the appointment of a special committee of five senators to investigate the subject of organised efforts of corporations to control the election of members of state legislatures and members of congress and to influence the legislation of congress, was taken up immediately after the meeting of the senate Saturday morning but went over without action. The tariff bill was then taken up, the question being on the various amendments to the income tax provision.

The assassination of the president of the French republic was the one overruling topic in the senate—as well as in Washington city—Monday morning. It was referred to in the opening prayer of the chaplain of the senate, who implored that Divine grace and mercy may rest upon us and our afflicted country, so that we may at least come to that unity and brotherhood intended by Jesus Christ, the ruler of the world. The reading of Saturday's journal was dispensed with and, after a quorum of the committee on foreign relations had appeared, Mr. Morgan, chairman, rose and, in a voice tremulous with emotion, said: "Mr. President, a duty devolves upon me as chairman of the committee on foreign relations of the senate, to make the saddest announcement that can be made to the American people in regard to any event outside of their own borders. It is the death, by assassination, of President Carnot, of the republic of France. In view of that very oppressive and alarming event at which the nations of the earth will feel a serious shock, I present for the consideration of the senate the following resolution: Resolved, That the senate of the United States unites with the American people in expressing their sorrow and sympathy to the people of France in the national bereavement they are suffering from the cruel blow of an assassin, which was aimed at the peace of France and fell upon the heart of the president, and as a mark of respect due to the memory of the wise, virtuous and patriotic president of the republic of France, the senate will, at the close of this proceeding, stand adjourned until tomorrow at ten o'clock a. m. Resolved, That the president of the United States is requested to communicate this expression of national sorrow to the government of the Republic of France and to Madame Carnot. After the reading of the resolution Mr. Morgan made a few eulogistic remarks, after which the senate adjourned until 10 Tuesday morning.

When the tariff bill was taken up in the senate Tuesday, Mr. Hill withdrew the amendment he had offered Saturday to strike out the provision exempting interest on United States bonds from the operation of the tax. He also moved to exempt state, county and municipal bonds. He urged that the taxation of state bonds by the federal government would be a direct attack upon the administration of the states. After an hour and a half of discussion the amendment was rejected—yeas 23, nays 30.

The senate was occupied Wednesday in the discussion of the income tax.

PRESIDENT PERIER.

THE FRENCH CONGRESS SELECTS CARNOT'S SUCCESSOR.

M. Casimair-Perier Gets a Majority of the Votes.

A Paris cable dispatch says: The National Congress, summoned to elect a President of the French Republic for the full term of seven years, was called to order in the Palace of Versailles, by M. Challemel-Lacour at 1:10 p. m. Wednesday.

At least five minutes elapsed after the formal call to order, before there was sufficient quiet to enable the presiding officer to be heard. When finally the assembly became orderly, M. Challemel-Lacour announced the tragic death of M. Carnot, and declared the congress open for the purpose of electing his successor.

Scarcely had the president ceased speaking, when M. Michelin, socialist, sprang to his feet and shouted: "I demand the suppression of the Presidency of the Republic."

A tumultuous scene ensued, the uproar being so great that the president could not make himself heard. The socialists seemed to be stronger-lunged, and their cries of "Vive revolution!" could be heard all over the hall.

LOTS CAST FOR THE FIRST VOTE.

Lots were then cast for the ballot, the object being to see which letter the ballot should begin with. The letter "L" was drawn and the name of M. Labarthe, a moderate republican, was first called.

In accordance with the custom, M. Labarthe ascended the rostrum and, being recognized by the scrutator, placed his ticket in a great urn which serves as a ballot box, and descended and returned to his seat. The senators and deputies whose names were subsequently called, went through the same ceremony. The voting proceeded monotonously in this way.

When the name of M. Fabriot, socialist, was called, he exclaimed: "I shall not vote, because I believe another presidency will kill the republic. When the calling of the roll was finished, there was a counter call for absentees. This occupied a few minutes, and then the counting of the votes began. M. Cassimir-Perier was elected President on the first ballot, receiving 451 votes.

BRIEF SKETCH OF THE NEW PRESIDENT.

Jean Cassimir-Perier, now president of the Chamber of deputies, and just elected President of France, is a grandson of the President of the Council under King Louis Phillippe, and his father was a minister under Thiers.

He was born in 1847. During the Franco-German war he volunteered to serve with the "Mobiles" of the Aube, and, distinguishing himself, received the Legion of Honor. In 1872 he became chief of the Cabinet of his father's department, and was elected to the chamber in 1874. In 1883 he was appointed under secretary of war. He was elected vice president of the chamber in 1890, and is today president of that body. He is described as a short man, dark in complexion, with unexceptionable manners, well dressed and military looking. He does not look his age, has a lofty forehead, a bright and frank eye, a short nose, and a general air of decision and determination.

M. Cassimir-Perier is regarded in his country as a hard worker and a man of strong character and indomitable will. He has never been extreme in his political opinions, but has always taken great interest in questions of political economy and defense. He was premier of one of M. Carnot's short-lived cabinets, from December of last year until the latter part of May, and his resignation then was said to have been due to his repugnance to do anything unpopular.

Now that he is elected, things will again look lively in Europe. M. Cassimir-Perier is just the man to lend his support to a strong anti-English policy and to continue M. Carnot's traditions by keeping friendly with Russia.

MANY LIVES LOST.

Two Hundred and Fifty Men Killed in an Explosion.

A London cable dispatch says: The further exploration of the Pont-y-Pridd mine, in which an explosion occurred Saturday, has shown that the disaster was far beyond anything imagined. The number of dead is 251. The original report that only 200 men were in the mine at the time was due to a misunderstanding on the part of the manager, who thought that a shift of miners had just come up. Many of the dead bodies were mangled beyond recognition. Exploration of the mine is slow and difficult, owing to the blocking of the galleries with dead horses.

Plotting Against the Czar.

The police of St. Petersburg, Russia, have discovered mines under the tracks of the Oral and Witebok railway, over which the czar will pass in going to attend the inaugural ceremonies of the chapel erected in commemoration of the railway disaster at Borki. His majesty will also take this route in going to the military manoeuvers. A rigid investigation will be made.

NATIONAL CAPITAL.

NEWS AND GOSSIP OF WASHINGTON CITY.

Brief Notes Concerning the Business of Our Government.

The readjustment of salaries of the postmasters throughout the United States was given out Tuesday. The new scale goes into effect this 1st of July.

The president sent to the senate Tuesday the following nominations: Charles DeKay, of New York, to be consul general at Berlin, Germany. Wm. Little, of North Carolina, to be consul at Tegucigalpa, Honduras.

Speaker Crisp's bill for a 50,000 public building at Americus has been reported favorably to the house and takes its place on the calendar. While it may not be considered at this session, owing to the rush of business, it is certain to pass at the next session.

The banks of New York have receipted the treasury for gold exported to the extent of $3,500,000, bringing up the gold reserve to $86,000,000. From this is to be abstracted $1,000,000 engaged for export Tuesday, leaving the gold reserve standing in round figures $85,000,000. The treasury balance, which includes the reserve, is $115,594,000. Treasury payments are being curtailed to the closest notch in an endeavor to keep the net expenditures for the fiscal year from exceeding the receipts by more than $75,000,000.

Postmaster General Bissell has sent out a circular letter to postmasters, warning them not to interfere in political matters. The gist of the order is in this paragraph: "The influence of federal office holders should not be felt in the manipulation of political primary meetings and nominating conventions. The use by these officials of their position to compass their selections as delegates to political conventions is indecent and unfair, and proper regard for the proprieties and requirements of official place will also prevent their assuming the active conduct of political campaigns."

Surgeon General Wyman, of the marine hospital service, Washington, has been notified by telegraph of the arrival in the United States, from the West Indies, of two vessels with yellow fever on board. The American vessel Jassamore, arrived at Galveston from Havana with one case of fever on board and two deaths during the voyage. She is quarantined at Galveston. The second vessel was the British brigantine, Albatross, with two cases on board—one severe and the other mild. She is quarantined at the Tortugas station, near Key West, Fla.

Secretary Gresham received a message from Ambassador Eustis Monday morning, announcing the death of the French president. Almost at the same moment (11 a. m.) M. Patentore, the French ambassador, called, bringing the official notification of the French government. Mr. Gresham immediately started for the white house, and the president addressed the following message to congress: "To the Senate and House of Representatives—The shocking intelligence has just been received that the president of the French republic, met his death yesterday at the hands of an assassin. This terrible event, which has overtaken our sister republic, cannot fail to deeply arouse the sympathies of the American nation, while the violent termination of a career promising so much in aid of liberty and in advancing civilization, as an affliction of mankind.

GROVER CLEVELAND."

The President Speaks.

President Cleveland has given to the press the following expression on the financial situation. "The offer of certain New York banks to replace from their vaults gold drawn from the government treasury for shipment abroad is certainly thoughtful and patriotic. It not only tends to maintain the treasury's gold reserve in good condition, but it adds to the stock of popular confidence, which is at all times important. The elements which make up our actual situation do not justify any apprehension; and the administration still adheres to its pledge and determination to protect our national credit at all hazards and to keep the quality of our money equal to the best so far as the limits of executive power permits.

"Of course, croaking and the spread of disquieting tales are calculated to injure the strongest financial conditions. I assume, however, that there is too much patriotism among our people and too much familiarity with our resources and capabilities to permit our reserved force and financial vigor to be discredited. When the last government bonds were issued to replenish our stock of gold it was nearly as low as now, while outside of our gold we had as available money to pay ordinary expenses of government only about $19,000,000. We have now beside our gold and in money applicable to government expenses more than $53,000,000. I understand that it is charged in certain quarters that the payment of matured obligations is postponed to the amount of $50,000,000 or $75,000,000. This is not true. We are paying as we go in the usual way. Last year, up to June 1st, the balance against us arising from the export and import of merchandise, including gold and silver, was $64,552,046. The balance in our favor for the same period this year was $62,960,562, representing a change in our favor of $127,512,608. These conditions, taken in connection with the willingness of our banks to help the treasury during any temporary and unusual drain of gold ought to satisfy the most conservative of our safety. It must not be forgotten as another favorable feature in the situation that we are no longer purchasing silver and issuing gold obligations in payment thereof."

No Compromise.

A conference between the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company, the largest operators in the district, and the miners' executive committee, was held at Birmingham, Ala., Wednesday afternoon with a view of coming to some agreement as to the differences existing. After some talk neither side made any concessions and the meeting was a failure.

WEEKLY REVIEW OF TRADE.

Report of Business for the Past Week by Dun & Co.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s review of trade for the past week says: "The week has been rich in promise but poor in performance. It was confidently promised that exports of gold would cease, but they have not. It was promised that the end of the coal strike would bring immediate recovery to industries, but partial resumption of work discloses a comparative sameness of the demand for products; while the miners of Ohio, in convention, have repudiated the settlement and continue the strike, and in many other localities it lingers, and, above all, the coke workers' strike blocks most of the iron manufacturers in the central region, less than a quarter of the coke ovens being yet at work. It was believed that late changes in the tariff bill would be more satisfactory in the industries, but the new schedules have not yet diminished hesitation.

"The treasury gold reserve is reduced lower than it was at any time in January and the government proposes to ship legal tenders to interior points against deposits of gold in the treasury at rates which virtually constitute a premium on gold. The conference of New York bankers proposing to provide gold for export, resulted in little practical gain, but called public attention more distinctly to the difficulties of the situation. Most lenders require a stipulation of gold payment on all time loans.

"The customs receipts for the week have been $1,892,113, against $3,568,119 last year, and the internal revenue also decreases $452,000. The market for commercial paper is singularly narrow, with extreme caution in the scrutiny of names.

"It was confidently expected that the settlement of tariff rates on textiles by the senate would improve the condition of textile manufactures; but there is scarcely any evidence of such a result yet, the large sales of cotton being distinctly traceable to more seasonable weather and larger retail sales and to further concessions by sellers. The stock of unsold print cloths at Providence, Fall River and Boston is over a million pieces, but the accumulation continues. The orders for fall are limited and staples are irregular in price.

"There is much disappointment that the partial termination of the coal strike does not promptly enlarge the demand for iron and steel products, which is evidently too narrow as yet to support much increase of production. Prices are weakening. Bessemer pig is selling at $10.90 at Pittsburg, beams at $1.30 and angles at $1.20. Orders are comparatively liberal, though much smaller than in other years. No improvement is seen in Philadelphia, while in the central region the continuing coke strike and great uncertainty about the July settlement of iron workers' wages causes much hesitation.

"The volume of domestic trade, measured by clearings, shows no important change, though the heavy decline a year ago vitiates, compared with that period. Compared with 1892 the decrease is 18.8 per cent, outside of New York, and 24.3 per cent at all points. The improvement continues in failure returns, which show an aggregate of liabilities for the two weeks of June, amounting to $6,520,025, of which $2,238,906 were of manufacturing and $4,113,638 of trading concerns. The failures during the week are 214 in the United States, against 273 last year, and 25 in Canada, against 14 last year."

CARNOT'S BODY IN PARIS.

Riots in Lyons—The Assassin Santo in Court.

The special train conveying the body of the late President Carnot from Lyons to Paris, arrived in Paris early Tuesday morning. The casket was at once placed in an ordinary hearse, and driven to the Palace of the Elysee, followed by five carriages, containing the widow and her sons and the members of the president's military household.

At a respectful distance behind the vehicles, were thirty cabs containing newspaper reporters. The cabinet held a meeting in the ministry of interior to perfect arrangements for the funeral of President Carnot, which has been fixed for next Sunday.

RIOTING CONTINUES IN LYONS.

Late dispatches from Lyons are to the effect that the disorders there and at other places in France, resulting from the indignation of the people at the assassination of President Carnot continues.

Crowds of rioters paraded the streets of the city from the time the late president's remains left Lyons, and, in spite of the efforts of the police and military, the mobs sacked Italian stores and taverns, and after throwing their contents into the streets, made bon-fires of everything burnable.

CARNOT'S SLAYER IN COURT.

Santo, the anarchist, and assassin of President Sadi Carnot, was again brought up in court Tuesday morning for examination before Examining Magistrate Benoist. The prisoner declared himself to be an anarchist, and to be strongly in favor of the policy of violence. Replying to a further question, Santo said he acted upon his own initiative and had not been engaged in any conspiracy to murder the president.

The magistrate, however, is not convinced that the prisoner had no accomplices, as it has been ascertained that when Santo stopped at Vienne and Monrpelier, he had several suspicious conferences with persons suspected of being in league with the anarchists. In addition to this, when Santo arrived at Vienne Saturday, en route to Lyons, he slept at the house of an anarchist, and afterwards started for Lyons at 3:30 in the afternoon.

The police investigation into the crime has already led to the arrest of three persons at Vienne, who are believed to have been engaged in the conspiracy which resulted in the murder of President Carnot.

The authorities believe Santo was the agent of the anarchists, and that he was entrusted with the task of murdering the president, and that he carried out the instructions which he received at various towns between Cette and Paris.

FILL your body with lean enough and your body will soon fill a size.

Almost 100 years ago two men set out from Virginia to visit the Ohio valley, of the beauty and fertility of which they had heard alluring reports. On the third night they reached Clarksburg, where they put up with a man who appeared to be honest, but old fashioned and illiterate.

"Can you tell us how far it is to Marietta and what sort of road we shall find?" asked one of the travelers.

"Yes," answered the host; "that is exactly what I can do, for I was appointed one of the viewers to lay out the road and have just returned from the performance of the duty."

"That is fortunate. What do you call the distance?"

"Well, the distance on a straight line, which we first ran, was 75 miles, but on our way back we discovered and marked another line which was much nearer."

The two travelers had each spent some years in the study of surveying and were more or less amused at the idea of a line shorter than a straight line between two given points.

However, the next morning they took the route which their informant had pronounced the shorter, and true enough they found his statement correct, for the crooked road went round the hills, while the straight one went over them, and the distance round was less than the distance over.—Youth's Companion.

Wrong Side Up.

An amateur archæologist one day espied the date 1061 carved on a stone inserted above the door of a stable and persuaded the peasant who owned the property to let him have it for a good round sum of money. A few days afterward the peasant delivered the stone to the purchaser.

"Why," said the latter, "this is not the stone I bought from you the other day. This one bears the date 1801. I won't have it."

"I beg your pardon," answered the peasant, "this is the very stone, only the builder, in a mistake, put it upside down. You can do the same, you know."

AN "OUT-OF-DATE" COUPLE.

We are "so out of date," they say—
Ned and I;
We love in an old-fashioned way,
Long since gone by.
He says I am his helpmate true
In everything;
And I—well, I will own to you
He is my king.

We met in no romantic way
'Twixt "glow and gloom;"
He wooed me on a winter day,
And in—a room;
Yet, through life's hours of stress and storm,
When griefs befell,
Love kept our small home corner warm,
And all was well.

Ned thinks no woman like his wife—
But let that pass;
Perhaps we view the dual life
Through roseate glass,
Even if the prospect be not bright,
We hold it true
That heaviest burdens may grow light
When shared by two.

Upon the gilded scroll of fame,
Emblazoned fair,
I cannot hope to read the name
I proudly bear;
But, happy in their even flow,
The years glide by;
We are behind the times, we know—
Ned and I.

VIOLETTA'S PICTURE.

BY LURANA W. SHELDON.

HANDSOME Lawrence Meredith stood spellbound before his finished picture, while the light breeze from an open window tossed his wavy hair about his brow. He was charmed and delighted with his own handiwork, but it was something more than the mere beauty of his model's face that caused his heart to beat so rapturously. Oh, how he loved her! but she, poor girl, sitting so wearily in a distant corner, did not dream of what was passing in his mind.

Suddenly he turned his eyes in her direction and a look of astonishment crossed his handsome face. Could it be possible that those were the features which he had so cleverly portrayed upon the canvas?

There were flashes of fire in the sweet blue eyes now and the delicate mouth was curved in an expression of bitterness that he had never seen before. He was amazed at the sudden revelation, for in all his weeks upon the picture he had never seen that strangely bitter expression upon her face before.

He crossed the room and spoke to her pleasantly, even tenderly; and was intensely relieved to see the bitterness partially disappear before the tenderness of his manner.

"You are very tired, Violetta," he said gently, "and I am so sorry! But the picture is beautiful! Exquisite!"

With a sudden movement Violetta sprang from her chair and ran hastily across the floor. "He loves his picture, but not me," she muttered angrily as she left the room. "Fool that I am to think that he would care for me! He is bound body and soul to his art. What is the pretty face of a woman to him but a model for his wonderful creations?"

After she had gone, Lawrence Meredith stood a moment in thought, then lighted a cigar and drew the chair before the easel. He had worked so hard on that last picture. His model's face had haunted him from the first, but as days went by and he realized that he was daily loving her more and more, a new purpose seemed to take possession of his soul and fill his brain with tender fancies.

He was an honorable fellow and he knew he was too poor to marry. He determined at once that he would never speak one word of love to Violetta until he was fully able to lead her to the altar and give her at least a comfortable home. He felt that she was learning to love him, and although it was hard to see her daily and not speak of what was in his heart, he was, in a measure, contented when he thought of the bliss that would shortly come to reward him for his hours of self-denial.

For he had decided from the first that this picture of Violetta should bring him fame and fortune. He would not sell it, of course, but the picture should be sent to the National Academy's exhibition, and if it was a success the orders that he would receive would start him in a lucrative profession. Now that the picture was finished he was almost happy. It was only that momentary expression upon his model's face that brought a shadow to his own. What could it mean? Was Violetta unhappy? Had she any tormenting secret, or was it the pain of parting with him that had distorted her face with such sudden bitterness?

Then it occurred to him that he had not even bade her good-night, and this was the last of her daily sittings. The memory startled him a little and he looked in his pockets for the address that she had given him.

"I will go and see her this evening and arrange for other sittings," he said to himself as he read the little scrap of paper that he found in his pocket book.

An hour later he was on his way to Violetta's humble lodgings.

It was a dreadful disappointment to learn that she was out. "She had not returned from her afternoon's sitting," the old landlady told him.

Absently, Lawrence entered a restaurant and ordering his evening meal, then he went slowly back to the studio, intending to write her a lengthy letter. He would not tell her that he loved her yet, but would simply explain that he had decided to paint another picture, and would continue to require her services if she were not already fatigued from her weeks of tiresome sittings.

He entered the studio without his key, but some way it did not occur to him that he had locked the door carefully when he left it early in the evening.

Without even glancing around he stepped across the room and raised the gas jets higher, then turned to gaze upon his picture.

Horror of horrors! What had happened? His eyes nearly burst from their sockets as he gazed upon the ruin of that which was to bring him fame and happiness.

Violetta's lovely face had been slashed into atoms and the torn shreds of the canvas dangled from the easel in a manner that nearly drove him into frenzy.

With a hoarse cry he flung himself upon the floor and groaned in the agony of spirit: "Oh, God! Must I give up all?" he cried, brokenly; "my beautiful picture, my treasured hopes! Oh, Violetta, if you only knew! If you were only here to see and understand!"

For a few moments everything else was forgotten, then the question suddenly entered his mind, who could have done this shameful deed?

He sprang from the floor and glared angrily about the room. There was no one there and no traces of any one having been there, except the condition of the picture itself—until his eye fell suddenly upon the chair that he had drawn before the easel.

What was that small, dark object lying carelessly across the cushion? He bent and picked it up absently, but with a feeling of horror creeping slowly about his heart.

It was one of Violetta's gloves. He had noticed them day after day as she drew them on over the slim, white hand at the close of each afternoon's sitting.

Her treachery was as clear as day to him now, for the glove had not been there when he drew the chair before the easel after her departure that evening.

His brain reeled at the thought now, not so much at the loss of the picture, but at the horrible disappointment in the woman he so deeply loved.

There was madness in his eyes as he glanced again about the brilliantly lighted room. Violetta was lost to him and the world had suddenly become both cold and bitter.

He rose from his chair and began searching among his paints with a feverish lustre.

It was nearly midnight when Violetta reached her room. She was wretchedly unhappy and the memory of her evening's work made her tremble a little even in the safety of her chamber.

Oh, how she worshiped the courtly young artist who had always been so gentle and kind to her and who many times had pressed her hand with a tenderness not unlike affection.

Day by day her heart had gone out to him until now every fibre of her being was vibrating with the fierceness of her passion.

Not until to-night, when he was admiring his own handiwork, did a suggestion of jealousy cross her mind. But now she was jealous—madly, furiously jealous of that painted picture, and in the frenzy of that madness she conceived a cruel, heartless plan.

It was over almost before she knew it; not, however, as she had at first intended it, for at the very last moment affection conquered and reason guided her a little.

Now, after the deed was done and she was alone in the seclusion of her room, she grew more calm and began to be ashamed of her evening's work. She tried to sleep, but the artist's sad, reproachful eyes seemed to haunt her constantly. Over and over his voice was whispering in her ear, "Why could you not have trusted me, Violetta," until at last she sprang from her bed in a perfect agony of remorse and fear.

She glanced at her watch and saw that it was nearly one o'clock; the key of the studio was in her pocket, for of late Lawrence had given her permission to enter at her will, rather than wait in the hall outside when he chanced to be late at his appointments.

It was dark, but she was not afraid, and she dressed herself as quickly and silently as possible.

"He shall not see it," she whispered, over and over in reproachful accents. "It was cruel of me to even think of such a thing."

There was a bright light in the studio window when she reached the door and her heart beat furiously as she paused for one timid moment to listen.

Yes, Lawrence was there; she could hear him fumbling about among the bottles. Almost instinctively she turned to run away, but something stopped her abruptly upon the stairs, while a shiver of horror suddenly passed over her. She returned cautiously and bending, put her eye to the keyhole in the door.

Great heavens! What was the man about to do? He was standing before the ruined canvas, one hand clutching wildly at his throat while in the other, held steadily to his lips, was a bottle she had often seen, with a skull and crossbones on its label.

With a shriek of horror she opened the door and rushed headlong into the room.

"Oh, Lawrence? My darling, Don't! Don't!" she shrieked frantically, but Lawrence, still holding the bottle, only turned sugrily and pointed to the dangling canvas.

"You have ruined my life," he began hoarsely, "by destroying my faith and trust in you," but before he could say more, something so strange had happened that for a moment he seemed thoroughly dazed by a sudden revulsion in his feelings.

With a swift movement, Violetta had torn the mutilated canvas from its fastenings, and in another instant the beautiful picture of herself had been drawn from behind a pile of frames and was standing, in all its glory, in its proper place upon the easel.

Then it was that Violetta fell at his feet and tearfully begged for pardon; "I was jealous of your picture, so I came here after you had gone, determined to destroy it, but some way," and her voice was thick with sobs, "some way, I could not do it, after all, so I played this cruel trick upon you."

Lawrence stood almost breathless as she hurried on. "I could not sleep after I had gotten home, and that is why I returned—to put the picture back before you had seen it and learned my jealous nature."

The poor girl broke down completely in the midst of her confession, but the artist, without so much as a glance at the lovely picture, bent, with a look of love and raised her gently from the floor.

"You have saved me, darling, and I must forgive you," he whispered. "It was all my fault that you were kept in ignorance of my love, but now that the picture is safe and my fondest hopes are not destroyed, I can tell you freely how I love you, little one, and what that picture that you were so jealous of, will some day mean to you and me."

He placed her in a chair; then, taking the fatal bottle, went quickly across the room and dropped it harshly on the marble hearth.

The young girl waited, still trembling in the chair where he had placed her, but before he returned to tell her the story of his love, Lawrence Meredith ground the fragments of glass beneath his feet as if he were destroying forever the malice of some dead enemy.—New York Mercury.

Odd Barometers.

Two of the oldest and oddest barometers, says a writer in the London Spectator, are the leech in a bottle and a frog on a ladder. Mr. Richard Inwards has seen an old Spanish drawing of nine positions of the leech, with verses describing its attitude and behavior before different kinds of weather. Dr. Merryweather, of Whitby, contrived an apparatus by which one of twelve leeches confined in bottles rang a bell when a "tempest" was expected. When leeches were kept in every chemist's shop, and often in private houses, their behavior was the subject of constant observation; and it was generally noticed that in still weather, dry or wet, they remained at the bottom, but rose, often as much as twenty-four hours in advance, before a change; and, in case of a thunderstorm, rose very quickly to the surface, descending when it was past. The frog barometer, used in Germany and Switzerland, is a very simple apparatus, consisting of a jar of water, a frog and a little wooden step-ladder. If the frog comes out and sits on the steps rain is expected. The weather-glass dearest to the old-fashioned cottage in the last generation was the "old man and old woman," who came out of their rough-cast cottage in foul or fair weather respectively. This was almost the earliest of semi-scientific toys, and depended on the contracting of a piece of catgut fastened to a lever. The belief that bees will not fly before a shower is probably true, and is the rational origin of the banging of trays and iron pots with a door-key when bees are going to swarm. The insects are supposed to take this for thunder, and so settle close at hand, instead of swarming at a distance. Squirting water on them with garden syringe often makes them settle at once. But no such ingenious process of rationalizing can be found for the belief that if the insect inside cuckoo-spit lies head upward, the summer will be dry, though the increased worrying of horses by flies before rain, and the rise of the gossamer before fine weather, are abundantly confirmed by observation. — Popular Science Monthly.

A Yellow Calla Lily.

The white calla lily of our gardens is well known, it still retaining the original name of Calla, although botanists have in modern times removed it to another genus, which is called Richardia. Calla will, however, long be its common name. It has been frequently hinted that there are species with other colors, which would soon come into cultivation; but so far these have been mere rumors. It is now definitely known that there is a bright yellow species, which has been named by botanists Calla Elliottana. The one in cultivation, known as Richardia maculata, has a slightly yellowish tint sometimes. The new one is said to be a clear yellow, and has leaves spotted with white, similar to our common maculata. Only one original plant was introduced, and it is said there are only a few propagated from it in cultivation. Ten plants were recently sold at auction in London, and bought by enterprising florists for $2000, which is considered the largest figures ever obtained for auction plants. Another yellow one has been introduced under the name of Calla Pentlandi, which is said to differ in having larger foliage and richer colored spathes, but which has not yet been offered to the trade.—Meehan's Monthly.

SUMMARY OF NEWS.

CONDENSATION OF INTERESTING OCCURRENCES

Which Happen From Day to Day Throughout the Busy World.

At noon Monday the Santa Fe shops in Topeka, Kas., were closed for an indefinite period. The responsibility for their closing rests somewhat on the managers of the American Railway Union and those of the railroad.

At Los Angeles, Cal., the federal grand jury called together by Judge Ross, Saturday, found true bills against a large number of strikers who endeavored to persuade men from taking out a Santa Fe train. Warrants will be issued and attempts made to arrest the indicted men.

At a special meeting of the stockholders of the Pittsburg, Virginia and Charleston Railroad Company, held in Philadelphia Monday, an increase of $3,700,000 in the capital stock of the company was authorized. The present capitalization is $2,300,000 and the authorized capital is, therefore, now $6,000,000.

A Paris special says: Count Muenster, German ambassador, has informed Premier Dupuy and the foreign secretary, Honotaux, that, in observance of M. Carnot's funeral, Emperor William pardoned the French officers, Degouy and Dagnet, who were arrested as spies off Kiel last year, and were condemned after their trial at Leipsic to confinement.

Owing to the embargo on freight traffic between Mobile, Ala., and the west, the steamer Sunniva, which arrived in the city Monday with 19,000 bunches of bananas from Bluefields, was sent with her cargo to New York after coaling. Several thousand bunches of bananas, forming part of the cargo of the schooner Margaret Smith, from Jamaica, were dumped in the bay.

The case of the United States National bank of New York, against Sterling R Cockerill, as receiver of the First National Bank of Little Rock, has been decided by the federal district court in favor of the defendant. The suit was brought for the collection of five notes of $5,000 each which was proven to have been discounted in New York without authority of the board of directors of the Frst National.

A delegation composed of men located in various cities along the line of the Richmond and Danville railroad, and representing the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen, arrived in Washington Monday morning. The delegation called upon General Manager Green and had a conference relative to the restoration of the scale of wages which some time ago suffered a 10 per cent reduction. The result of the meeting was not given out.

Almost all the business portion of Bayou Sara, La., has been destroyed by fire. The houses burned were: Meyer, Central hotel and general store; Freyhaus Opera house and vacant store; Joseph Stern's livery stable, store and residence; John Laboye's bakery and confectionery; A. Harris, store and express office; B. Farrell's variety store; Ben Mauer's saloon, store and residence; Mann & Levy, large general store Richard Veals, eating house; Phillip Pettigs, barber and news dealer; A. G. Weil's variety store.

The ladies of the Hollywood Memorial Association and the Confederate Memorial Library Association, both of Richmond, Va., held a joint meeting and passed resolutions endorsing the address of Rev. Robert C. Cave, delivered on the occasion of the unveiling of the confederate soldiers' and sailors' monument. They also passed resolutions antagonising the movement to erect a monument to the women of the south, at least until the Jefferson Davis monument shall have been erected.

The railway lines entering Nashville are beginning to feel the great strike seriously. No through train has been run between that city and Chicago since Saturday. A local train has been running between Nashville and Evansville, but the through train with sleepers has been discontinued for the present. So far there have been no changes in the trains on the other lines entering the city except that fewer freights are being run. But all of these lines are suffering more or less, both in the passenger and freight departments.

DECIDED BY LOT

And Santo Selected to Assassinate Carnot.

A dispatch from Marseilles, France, announces that a soldier detained in the military prison at that place, upon hearing of the assassination of the president, gave the authorities full details concerning the plot which was hatched at Cette, and also furnished the names of seven anarchists who, after the execution of Vaillant and Henri, drew lots in order to decide who was to kill Carnot. The lot fell to Santo Cesario, which now seems to be the real name of the assassin, the mistake in the inversion of his name having resulted from the Italian custom of writing the family name first. Cesario is described as having been "wild with joy" when found that he had been selected to commit the murder.

Prendergast Has a Lease of Life.

A Chicago special says: Judge Payne has granted a stay of execution in the case of Assassin Prendergast because of the present hearing. Prendergast was sentenced to be hanged on July 24, but the court announced that the execution of the sentence will be deferred until the present hearing is concluded.

Chronicling Events of Special Interest to Our Readers.

Dallas, the largest city of Texas, according to the census, and the center of the richest farming region, is about to have a waterway to the gulf by the deepening of Trinity river.

The temperature recorded 99 at New Orleans Sunday, breaking all records there. The ambulances were kept busy all day and nine sunstrokes were reported, two resulting fatally.

Pat Savage and James Bess, the two striking miners, who were arrested at Birmingham, Ala., twelve days ago on a charge of arson, it being alleged that they dynamited a house in which were six negroes, have been discharged from custody.

The carefully taken census for the new city directory gives Chattanooga, including her suburbs, a population of 46,353. This is a loss of 3,426 as compared with a similar census made in 1892. Considering the great depression in business, it is considered a good showing.

An ordinance was recently passed by the Montgomery, Ala., city council granting additional franchises to the street railway company. The mayor vetoed the ordinance for the reason that the company delined to agree to give transfer tickets over the different line. By a vote of 1 to 3, the council passed the odinance over the mayor's veto.

Lee camp of confederate veterans, of Richmond, Va., after a lively discussion, endorsed the address made by Rev. Dr. Robert C. Cave at the unveiling of the confederate soldiers and sailors' monument, and appointed a committee of five to prepare an answer to the Chicago Post's letter, which asked if the camp, as a Southern representative body, endorsed the address.

The Mississippi penitentiary farm commission, charged by the last legislature with the purchase of ten thousand acres of land on which to locate the state prison, has gone to Rankin county to make a final inspection of the property offered there for the purposes named. The farm will be under state supervision, and after January, 1895, the iniquitous lease system is prohibited under the constitution.

The Chattanooga National bank shipped $60,000 in gold to the subtreasury Saturday as a Chattanooga contribution to aid in building up the gold reserve. C. A. Lyerly, president of the bank, said this was done in response to a circular letter from the United States treasurer, wherein it was stated that the government wished to exchange currency for gold. There will be other shipments from Chattanooga.

It is announced that the July interest on the $2,250,000 first mortgage bonds of the Carolina Central Railroad Company will not be paid on account of recent large expenditures to put the railroad in a condition to be safely and economically operated. Holders are invited to meet in the office of the Maryland Trust Company, in Baltimore, July 30th, at 12 m., to decide what action may be deemed advisable under the circumstances.

United States Circuit Court Judge D. M. Key has removed Temporary Receiver W. C. Adams, of the Chattanooga Electric Street Railway Company, and appointed C. W. Divine permanent receiver. The St. Louis Trust Company made the application for a receiver. The majority of the bondholders have raised the money to pay the interest on the consolidated bonds, and the road will soon be out of the hands of the receiver and a reorganization will take place soon.

A Savannah dispatch says: General approval of the reorganization plan of the Central railroad as outlined by Receiver Comer has been expressed on all sides. This is one of the first instances where the stockholders of an insolvent railroad have been treated with consideration, the stock neither being wiped out nor an assessment on it being asked. The debenture holders are well pleased to receive income bonds at par and the work of their committee is considered at an end.

A Mountain of Oyster Shells.

If any one thinks there is any waste about an oyster he should visit the foot of West Fifty-sixth street. What he will see there will convince him that there are more ways than one of making use of the bivalve.

From Fifty-sixth street, rising high in the air toward Fifty-fifth street, there is a heap of oyster shells which must contain millions. One can only judge of the favor in which the oyster is held in this city by standing and gazing at this mountain.

The shells are not there for ornamental purposes. There are no mother of pearl workers thereabouts; but just beyond the mountain rise two or three tall, white chimneys, with mysterious looking shutes alongside, and every once in a while a man digs away into the mountain and sends the shells into these shutes.

Below are kilns, and all that is left of the shells when they pass through the kilns is lime. This accounts for the fact that oyster shells are never found on the dumps. They are too valuable to be thrown away, and the dump carts carefully take them to the kilns, which are operated night and day turning out lime that is said to be pasticularly valuable for special purposes.

The railroad agents at Columbia, S. C., have been ordered, on account of the strike, to accept no perishable freight for points west of Memphis and Chattanooga, unless subject to delays. In consequence of this shipments of melons, vegetables and fruits will be greatly hindered, and the growers will suffer.

A Cincinnati dispatch says: A majority of the freight conductors of the Chesapeake and Ohio and Louisville and Nashville roads went out on a strike Wednesday morning, refusing to haul freight switched by non-union men. The yardmasters on the Chesapeake and Ohio at Covington, Ky., also quit work and the situation on that road is decidedly bad.

The Louisville and Nashville and the Mobile and Ohio platforms and yards at Hamboldt, Tenn., are crowded with tomatoes, apples and other fruits. The vegetable and fruit growers had a special called meeting and notified the Louisville and Nashville agent that, unless the road arranged to move the fruit at once they would take possession of the Pullman cars. Great indignation prevails among the fruit growers, owing to the action the roads have taken.

There are hundreds of intelligent men who are exploring, mapping, picturing, photographing, describing and analyzing Africa. The Dark Continent is under the glass, and is being surveyed in a microscopic manner. The next fifty years, nay the next ten years, will show such wondrous improvements in the continent as no nation has ever seen before. The only parallel to its expansion and enlightenment will be that of the region west of the Mississippi, since the explorations of Fremont, the pathfinder. As fast as discoveries are made, and new regions explored, the intrepid missionaries are ready to advance and hold the field, and there are commercial enterprises following hard after. THE LABOR WAR.

RAILROAD BUSINESS BEING PARALYZED IN THE WEST.

Slaughter Houses of Chicago Lay Off 30,000 Men.

A Chicago special says: News of the most serious nature has just been received at the headquarters of the Managers' association. Two hundred and fifty deputy marshals and seventy-five deputy sheriffs, sent to Blue Island to raise the embargo on the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific railroad traffic, were overpowered and whipped by a mob of over 2,000 strikers and sympathizers and are still in the hands of the lawless element. The Second regiment of Chicago has been ordered to the scene.

It is stated at the office of the Rock Island road that the mob at Blue Island has cut off all telegraph and other communication between that point and Chicago and news in regard to the fight between the strikers and combined forces of deputy sheriffs and deputy marshals cannot possibly be obtained until the troops have arrived at the scene and re-established communication.

MARSHALS SENT TO BLUE ISLAND.

At 5 o'clock Monday morning, 125 deputy marshals under the command of United States Marshal Arnold, left for Blue Island with the determination of aiding Blue Island to raise the embargo on four mail trains held at that point. With the men already on the scene, Arnold will have a force of 200. All the men are armed to the teeth.

Later advices state that the forces of special deputy marshals and sheriffs sent to Blue Island are pronounced by their commander as practically useless, and by the strikers as arrant cowards, hiding behind cars and in them, for fear of being hurt. The police officers of the town and the authorities have conspired not only to render all the aid in their power to the strikers, without getting into the meshes of the law, but also to starve the civil officers by refusing them food and threatening to boycott any one who supplies it.

MILITARY A NECESSITY.

The presence of militia of United States soldiers from Fort Sheridan is requisite to open the Rock Island line and keep it open. The strikers have no more respect for the authority of the deputy sheriffs and marshals than they have for the railroad property or the officials of the company who have been trying to get trains moved.

PACKING HOUSES SHUT DOWN.

As a result of the general tie-up of the stockyards-railroads, 6,000 men and 400 girls employed in the big packing houses were laid off Monday morning. During the early morning the Burlington road succeeded in bringing in five trains of live stock, each train containing thirty cars. The receipts for live stock at 9 o'clock were 8,000 cattle, 9,000 hogs and about 2,000 sheep, and these were killed during the day for local consumption. No coal has been received at the stock yards since last Thursday, and orders were issued for a general clean up preparatory to shutting down the packing houses. At noon 7,000 more employes of the packing houses were laid off, making fully 80 per cent of the employes now out. There is nothing for them to do, and the houses have shut down indefinitely.

TRADE REVIEW.

Report of Business for the Past Week by Dun & Co.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says: "The great strike of coal miners has ended at most points, but another threatens to interrupt business more seriously for a time, though the number of hands engaged is comparatively small. The resumption of work in the mines and mills has made good progress, but the demand for product is as yet smaller and less urgent than was expected. Buyers apparently wait for lower prices of iron and steel products, which manufacturers are slow to give in view of the increased cost of materials and production. After a suspension of half the working force for more than a month, it was expected that orders for products would be very large, but instead there is general complaint of dullness and narrorow demand, and prices of Bessemer pig and some finished forms are a little weaker. Although the working force has evidently increased, several establishments have stopped for want of orders, or because no settlement regarding wages for the coming year has yet been reached.

"The volume of domestic business as shown in clearing house payments is 27.3 per cent smaller for the week than last year, and at New York the decrease is 36.1 per cent. There is some improvement in the demand for commercial loans, especially from the south, and sales of foreign exchange against products to be exported hereafter have much increased. This, with foreign buying of stocks after the action of the New York banks, has weakened exchange so that gold exports for the week have been only $2,570,000. But customs receipts for the month have been only $3,551,457 and the year's deficit will be about $60,000,000. A considerable deficit is expected in July.

"This week the failures have been 214 in the United States against 207 last year. Of late the number and importance of failures have increased a little, as is usual near the close of a half year."

We have nothing but the kindest feeling for Mr. Mastin the 3rd Party, candidate for the Legislature, but in the language of some his own folks "We don't want to send a fellow to Montgomery who is unable to accomplish anything for Chilton County." Plainly speaking, if Chilton County should be represented next year in the Legislature by Mr Mastin what could he do for us?-If any important legislation was needed, we would be compelled to get some Democrat from another county to champion the measure. Now, as to sensible men, let us put this question. If you send a hand to the field to do a certain piece of work and he proves his unfitness and inefficiency why waste further time and money by sending the same hand back to try his luck at the same work? Nay, verily--Now the gentleman in question is, as far as we are informed, an upright citizen, an agreeable neighbor, and a good surveyor, but he was not surely cut out for a law maker--Let us give him all our surveying, and send Mr. Ruddick to Montgomery to look after the welfare of the county. Mr. Ruddick is in the fullest sympathy with all classes of our people, and he would keep his eyes open to every interest of Chilton county. We can as stockholders in Chilton county lay aside partisan feeling and elect a business Representative.

THE ALABAMA DEMOCRACY

Savannah News.

The silver plank in the platform adopted by the Alabama convention says: "We all believe in the free coinage of silver whenever it can be done consistently with the maintenance of a sound and safe currency."

According to the foregoing all Alabama Democrats are for sound money. They want the coinage of silver made free, but not until it is absolutely certain that a silver dollar under free coinage would have the same debt paying power as a gold dollar. In other words, they don't want a debased silver currency. It is doubtful if there is any considerable number of Democrats in Alabama who are against this view of the silver question. It is in harmony with the silver plank of the National Democratic platform, and with the silver plank of the platform adopted last week by the Democrats of Missouri. Mr. Bland undertook to get the Democrats of Missouri to adopt a silver plank like that which appears in the platforms of the Populists, and failed.

And the Democrats of every other Southern State are in favor of a sound money. A good many have misunderstood the silver question, and some of them do yet, but eventually they will get a correct knowledge of it. They have been led to believe that the administration is opposed to silver. They are finding out that it is not. It is only opposed to a debased currency. It wants the coinage of silver made free whenever it can be made so without endangering the soundness of the currency. It insists upon sound money—the kind of money that every farmer and every workman wants—and that is the kind of money that the Democrats of the South insist upon.

The democratic ranks of the South are fast being redeemed. The old line Democrats who were drawn off with Kolb now see that the managers of Populist affairs in every county are Radicals of the old school—ofcourse they cant stomach such stuff and they are coming home.

HOW TO VOTE.

From the law we take the following in reference to a preparation of the ballot and below we add the ballot. It will be observed that we have placed the letter X opposite the Democratic candidates.

Section 19.—Be it further inacted. That the ballots printed in accordance with the provision of this act shall contain the names of all the candidates nominated as herein before provided who have not declined. The names of all candidates for the same office shall be printed together and arranged alphabetically according to the initial letters of their surnames irrespective of party. But the order in which the titles of the several offices to be filled shall be arranged upon the ballots shall be left to the discretion of the officer charged with the printing of said ballots.

Section 20.-- Be it further inacted. That whenever a constitutional amendment or other public measure is submitted to a vote of the people, the substance of such amendment or other public measure shall be twice in the same language clearly indicated upon the ballot after the list of candidates followed in one case by the word. "Yes" and in another by the word "No"

Section 21.— Be it further inacted. That all ballots provided by the Judge of Probate of any county for an election shall be alike printed in plain type, in straight lines, upon plain white paper, so thick that the printing cannot be distinguished on the back, with a slim line between each name and extending sufficiently to the left of names to easily permit making before each name a cross mark (X) and in the appropriate place the words "Vote for One" (or two or other numbers, as the case may be) to indicate the number which may be elected to each office, and shall be substantially in the following form, except the order in which the several offices to be filled are stated, namel :

THE DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM.

The Democracy of Alabama in convention assembled, re affirm the principles of the Democratic party as declared in its platform adopted at Chicago in 1892, and congratulates the country upon the success of those principles in the triumphant election of Grover Cleveland, who, by his generous treatment of our people, has shown that he is the President of the whole country, knowing no North, no South, no East, no West. We recognize the wisdom and patriotism of the president, and believe in his feality to the principles of our party, and indorse his administration of the Federal Government: while some of us differ with him matters of policy, we are agreed in the belief that he is actuated by motives of the highest patriotism and by an unselfish devotion to the greatest good of the whole people.

While there are differences of opinion among us in matters of detail, we all believe in the free coinage of silver when ever it can be done consistently with the maintenance of a sound and safe currency.

We earnestly urge upon our Senators and Representatives in Congress the speedy reform of the tariff and the prompt repeal of the ten per cent. tax on the issue of state banks.

We heartily endorse the present administration of the state Government, headed by Governor Thomas G. Jones, who has so wisely and courageously his great trust, and we commend him for his impartial and fearless execution of the laws.

We pledge to the people of Alabama a continuance of the good government of our state affairs inaugurated by the election of George S. Houston in 1874.

The election law enacted at the last session of our General Assembly is in accordance with the principle upon which are based the laws regualating elections in a large majority of the states of this Union enacted with out regard to party, and was intended to obtain at the ballot box a full and free expression of the popular will; and after giving it a trial, should it fail to accomplish the end which it was intended to effect, we pledge ourselves to make such changes and alterations therein as may be necessary to effect that end.

When that splendid Citizen J. P. Streety, died in Hayneville the entire County, white, and black, grieved that a greatfriend and good man had fallen, and when his remains were being carried to the tomb the bells on the Negro Churchs were tolled-- This act ought to give the Northern man an idea of the friendliness between the Negro and his white neighbors.

DR. G. C. OSGOOD,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE,

H. A. ARCHER, M. D.,

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

LOCAL BREVITIES.

Reliable news reaches Chilton that Judge Hays, of Bibb County, has come out boldly for Oates, and says that old Bibb will give the Wire Grass leader a good majority.

Our town was honored last Saturday by a visit from Rev. Jno. R. Sampey D. D. of Louisville K. Y.

Miss Minnie Pinckard is on a visit to a kinsman in Atlanta.

Profs Moore, Hicks, Estes and a score of other teachers were in Clanton Saturday.

The list of election inspectors will be seen in another column. This list was only signed by the Circuit Clerk and Sheriff, the Judge of Probate refusing to sign for reasons which he thinks perfectly satisfactory. He objected to certain men on both sides and says he will at the proper time say why. The Sheriff and Clerk are a majority of the board and they believe they are right in doing as they have, and so the dance goes on.

On the 4th inst. the boys went to Coopers to have a game of ball. The team spent the morning very pleasantly, expecting to have dinner served on a long table and they were going the whole length. The looked for hour, 12 o'clock at last arrived; the crowd began to disperse, going off in little groups to enjoy their dinners in the shade of trees. Then it was that the boys felt left. Dinner time had come and they had no dinner, they never felt so hungry before. Just as they were about to despair of having the "hungry fed" the big-hearted Mr. George Cooper came to their rescue, invited the whole team to dine with him. He entertained royally, and never before did they enjoy so sumptuous a repast. The team will be a life long friend to the hospitable Mr. Cooper.

The game was called at 2 30. The A. J.s. of Clanton came out victorious by a score of 9 to 30 in favor of Clanton. "It is ever thus"

Mr. E. S. Harris of Nashville was numbered among our visitors here last Sunday.

Miss Shackleford has had some years experience as a teacher of Music, and is in every way fitted to fill the position. We bespeak for her a liberal share of the patronage.

A negro woman named Lizzie Rasberry was found dead in the woods two miles north of Stanton last Thursday. Her head had been badly shattered by a shotgun wound; the body was in such a state of decomposition that a full examination could not be had.

To Button Boots.

"In buttoning shoes there is no need to rip of buttons and split out buttonholes as often. Half the women don't know how to handle a buttonhook, and that is the trouble," said a girl who was on her knees trying on a pair of shoes for a customer. "Most women take the buttonhook, and after catching the button in it turn the hook straight over backward to force the button through the hole. That is all wrong. See how quick the buttons will fly off that way," and she illustrated and sent four buttons flying into the air as a result. "Now do this way. Put the hook through the buttonhole and take hold of the button with it. Then keep the buttonhook flat and swing it around in a half circle, always keeping the hook level where it holds the button. This saves the wear and tear on the buttonhole stitching, and the buttons will stay sewed on four times as long."—Shoe and Leather Facts.

CHICAGO IS BOTTLED UP

As a Result of the Great Railway Strike.

DEBS SAYS THE TROUBLE WILL SOON BE ENDED.

The Freight Business of the West Paralyzed.

A Chicago special of Tuesday says: "The strike and boycott inaugurated by the American Railway Union will be settled not later than Saturday."

This was the official statement given out by President Debs, of the American Railway Union, this evening. Vice President Howard, James Hogan and William Burns, of the joint conference committee selected to meet the mediators, agreed with Mr. Debs. Other directors were divided in thier opinion, but it is generally conceded that the efforts of the municipal authorities, preceded by the mediation of P. E. Studebaker, will in all probability result in a settlement of the boycott against Pullman and the strike on the railroads.

BOYCOTTING THE DAILIES.

An official notice has been sent out from the union headquarters to the effect that the executive board has passed a resolution boycotting certain Chicago papers that have attacked the American Railway Union and calling upon all union men and labor sympathizers to refuse to buy or advertise in the papers mentioned on account of the position taken by the editorial management on the strike.

FREIGHT AT A STANDSTILL.

Freight shipments to all points west of Pittsburg are practically at a standstill. Thirty-two western roads have notified the Pennsylvania company's general office, in Pittsburg, that they will not receive freight of any kind until the boycott has been settled. Freight trains are tied up all along the routes between Pittsburg and Chicago and the losses from the delays will be enormous.

The railroad officials for the first time, admit their inability to move through freight. All efforts are concentrated in keeping local freight and passenger trains moving.

DEBS'S INDICTMENT ORDERED.

A Washington special says: The attorney general Wednesday morning telegraphed to United States District Attorney Milchrist at Chicago to have the grand jury convene as soon as possible in order that indictments may be found against President Debs and other officials of the American Railway Union in conformity with the omnibus injunction issued by the United States district court at Chicago. Commenting on this action, the attorney general said:

"We have been brought to the ragged edge of anarchy, and it is time to see whether the law is sufficiently strong to prevent this condition of affairs. If not, the sooner we know it the better, that it may be changed."

Attorney General Olney has also instructed United States District Attorneys Perry, Kansas; Lyons, Michigan; Burke, Indiana; Brinsmabe, Cleveland, O.; Cleveland, Cincinnati; Garder, San Francisco, Cal.; Denny, Los Angeles, Cal., and Shutt, Springfield, Ill., to apply to the United States district court for an omnibus injunction against the strikers in their vicinity similar to the Chicago injunction granted by Judge Groscup.

GROWTH OF THE SOUTH.

The Industrial Situation as Reported for the Past Week.

The review of the industrial situation in the south for the past week shows that the unsettled condition of labor still continues in somewhat less degree. The miners are returning to their work at some points and at others they are not sure of finding employment. The Southern railroads, other than the Illinois Central, have not as yet been affected by the Pullman strike and it is not believed that the trouble will be extensive in this section, although a strong effort will be made to call out the men on the line of the Queen and Crescent.

In other respects there is no change to report in the industrial situation. Much depends on the crops, the condition of which is more favorable than formerly. Hot weather is bringing forward the cotton which has been backward for the season.

The following are the most important of the fifty-one new industries reported by The Tradesman as established or incorporated during the week: The Big Wheel Co., capital $300,000, at Wheeling, W. Va.; the Retail Dealers Ice Co., of New Orleans, La., capital $150,000; the Chestatee Pyrites Co., capital $100,000, of Atlanta, Ga., and a $50,000 spoke factory at Gurley, Ala. The Manufacturers' Transportation Co., capital stock 50,000, has been chartered at San Antonio, Tex.; the Tennessee Packing Co., capital $30,000, at Birmingham, Ala.; the Arey Bedding & Upholstering Co., also with $50,000 capital at Houston, Tex., and the Mexia Compress Co., with $35,000 capital, at Mexia, Texas. The Oak Terrace Land and Improvement Co., has been chartered at South Jacksville, Fla., with $35,000 capital; the Southern Specialty Co., capital $30,000, at Martin, Tex.; a $25,000 bagging factory to be built at Anniston Ala.; the Houston, Texas, Fruit and Preserving Co., capital $25,000, has been organized, and the Hagerman Lumber Co., $20,000, chartered at Chipley, Fla. There is also reported a brewery at Norfolk, Va., brick works at Sumter, S. C., a can factory at New Orleans, La., and cotton mills at Canton, Ga., and Beaufort, S. C. Fertilizer works are to be established at Norfolk, Va., flour and grist mills at Mount Hope, Ala., and Milford and Taylorsville, Ky., and an electric lighting plant at Jacksonville, Fla. Iron works are reported at Bessemer, Ala., and New Orleans, La., mining companies have been chartered at Orlando, Fla., Glendon, N. C., and Broadway, Va.; phosphate works are to be built at Lakeland, Fla., and shoe and leather factories at Maysville, Ky., and Wilmington, N. C. Wood-working plants are to be established at Wyeth City, Ala., England, Gillett and Pine Bluff, Ark., Avon Park, Fla., Valdosta, Ga., Mer Rouge, La., Rosedale, Miss., Oakwoods, N. C., Knoxville and Unitia, Tenn., New Alexandria, Va., and Kendalia and Welch, W. Va.

Waterworks are to be built at Lawrenceburg, Ky., and Benwood, W. Va. Among the eleven enlargements of the week, as reported, are brick works at Richmond, Va., car wheel works at New Decatur, Ala., and an increase of from $75,000 to $250,000 in the capital of the gas and electric company at Key West, Fla. Iron works are to be enlarged at Brunswick, Ga., and South Pittsburg, Tenn.; oil mills at Alvarado, Itasca and Weatherford, Texas, and cotton mills at LaFayette, Ga., Columbus, Miss., and Scotland Neck, N. C.—Tradesman (Chattanooga, Tenn.)

War Against Anarchy.

A most animated anti-anarchist campaign has been inaugurated by the police in Italy and as a result many letters of a menacing character have been addressed to King Humbert, Premier Crispi and other prominent persons. The firing of steps in Sicily has been prolonged indefinitely.

CONGRESSIONAL.

DAILY PROCEEDINGS OF BOTH HOUSE AND SENATE.

The Discussion of Important Measures Briefly Epitomized.

In the house, Friday, Mr. Pence called up the contested election case of Thomas E. Watson vs. James C. C. Black, from the tenth Georgia district. After a lengthy discussion the resolution of the committee on elections, declaring Mr. Watson not elected, and Mr. Black entitled to his seat, was agreed to—106 to 10.

After objection had been made to consideration of various bills by unanimous consent in the house, Saturday, committees were called for reports and the bill to readjust the salaries and allowances of the postmasters at Guthrie and Kingfisher, Oklahoma, was taken up; but the morning hour had expired and the bill was withdrawn. Twenty nine pension and desertion bills, which had been favorably reported from Friday night's sessions, were passed, and the house, at 2:30 o'clock adjourned until Monday.

The house agreed Monday that when it adjourned, it be to meet Thursday. After the transaction of minor business the body went into committee of the whole to consider the bill providing for a hall for the keeping of records in Washington, D. C.

THE SENATE.

Friday was certainly remnant day in the senate. All the odds and ends of the tariff bill were lumped and disposed of in short order. It is out of the committee of the whole however, and after nearly three months it kneels before the senate proper.

In the senate, Monday, Mr. Call introduced a resolution for the appointment of a select committee of five senators to inquire into and report the cause of the existing strike of the railroad and Pullman car employes and the justice of the demands of the workingmen, and report such legislation as may secure justice to the workingmen and be reasonable and fair to their employers, and secure the safe transportation of mails, freight and passengers without interruption. Mr. Kyle offered a joint resolution providing that no warrant or other process shall be issued by any United States commissioner or out of any circuit or district court of the United States against any person or persons for alleged obstruction of any railroad train or trains unless it shall appear that such persons have obstructed or hindered in such a manner as to interfere with the safe and convenient movement of a part of such train that is essential to the safe and convenient transportation of the mails; also, providing that the detachment of a Pullman or other parlor or sleeping coaches from railroad trains shall not constitute any offense against the laws of the United States. Both resolutions were laid on the table for the present. At 10:30 the tariff bill was taken up, and it was agreed that amendments to which no special objection is made be voted on in bulk. Mr. Sherman asked that the entire wool and woollen schedule be reserved. Mr. McLaurin demanded a separate vote on the amendment excluding the salaries of the president and United States judges from the income tax. Separate votes were demanded by Mr. Hale on the lumber schedule, Mr. Kyle on the sugar schedule, Mr. Gallinger as to hay, Mr. Chandler as to the date when the law is to go into effect; also as to borax, lead, iron ore, barbed wire, lead ore, rice brandy and spirits of wine, silk and silk goods, the income tax and reciprocity. Mr. Jones, for the finance committee, reserved the several dates mentioned for the bill to go into effect; also as to glass ware, plate glass, nuts, laces, waste wool, ready made clothing, ingrain carpets, etc. Then the residue of the unreserved amendments adopted in committee of the whole were concurred in in bulk. Mr. Hill's amendment in the senate, making the repeal of the sugar bounty take effect "on the passage of that act," instead of on the first of January, 1895, was agreed to; yeas 35, nays 32. Mr. Kyle moved to strike out one-eighth of the differential given to the sugar refiners and the one-tenth discriminating duty on sugars imported from countries where the export bounty is paid on refined sugar. It was defeated by a vote of yeas 34, nays 35.

The senate met at 10 o'clock a. m. Tuesday in continuation of Monday's legislative session. The tariff bill was taken up at once, and action on the amendments of the committee of the whole occupied the whole of the day's session. First came the motion made by Mr. Mills Monday evening to place burlaps and grain bags made therefrom on the free list. It was carried by a vote of 28 to 17. Next came the famous "collars and cuffs" amendment fixing the duty on those articles at 30 cents per dozen and 30 per cent ad valorem, and on shirts at 50 per cent, equivalent, according to a statement made by Mr. Chandler to an ad valorem rate of from 80 to 125 per cent. Then the great wool schedule came up for action, Mr. Sherman offering an amendment to place wool on the dutiable list at 30 per cent ad valorem. The amendment was defeated by a vote of 37 to 32. And so wool remans on the free list. The committee amendment placing bituminous coal on the dutiable list at 40 cents a ton and coal slack at 15 cents, was agreed to by a vote of 57 to 7. The six were Messrs. Allen, Hill, Irby, Kyle, Mills and Pefer. All the committee amendments to leather schedule were agreed to, also all the amendments under the title of "miscellaneous manufactures." The committee amendment which has been originally offered by Mr. Hill, exempting the salaries of the president of the United States and of the judges of United States courts from the income tax, was rejected. All the other reserved amendments up to the close of the bill were agreed to without opposition. The date when the bill is to go into effect was, on motion of Mr. Jones, fixed at August 1, 1894, with the understanding that, if necessary, a later date can be fixed hereafter.

It is better to be an April fool than a simpleton.

THE TARIFF BILL PASSES

It Goes Through by a Vote of Thirty-nine to Thirty-four.

HILL FIGHTS THE BILL TO THE BITTER END

And He Was the Only Democrat Who Opposed It.

The tariff bill was finally passed by the senate at 10:30 o'clock Tuesday night.

It has been in the hands of the senate since the first day of February. For more than two months the senate has devoted eight hours a day to speech-making and voting upon it. The work has been a hard strain on many senators and it is a great relief to them as well as to the country that the senate has finally voted upon and passed it. The vote stood 39 to 34.

Every democrat except Hill voted for it. Allen and Kyle, two of the three populists, voted for it. Peffer voted with the republicans against it. Before the vote, and after Hill had been turned down on nearly all of the amendments he offered and defeated in every flank movement he made against the bill, he arose and in a vigorous and vicious fifteen-minute speech denounced the bill as undemocratic and populistic. When he sat down not a sound was heard. Neither the republicans nor the galleries applauded him.

When the roll call commenced there was some excitement in the galleries, and particularly so when Caffery, of Louisiana, voted no. He, however, changed his vote before the result was announced, saying he had cast it first that way because he was not satisfied with the repeal of the sugar bounty, but as it was the best bill that could be gotten and was a democratic measure, he would vote for it. Blanchard wanted to explain his vote, but there was objection, and he contented himself by voting "yea."

APPLAUSE IN THE GALLERIES.

When the vote was announced and the vice president said, "The bill is passed," the galleries sent up a hearty cheer and the democratic senators, with one exception, applauded. Then the senate, after the conferees were announced, adjourned until Friday for a much-needed rest.

This bill now goes back to the house and the speaker will refer it to the ways and means committee. That committee will report back to the house and then the conference committee will be appointed. The house will fight the sugar, wool, coal and iron schedules and the prospects are that the conference committee will make material changes in them. The bill should, however, become a law by the 1st of August. In that event congress will adjourn by the 15th.

NATIONAL CAPITAL.

NEWS AND GOSSIP OF WASHINGTON CITY.

Brief Notes Concerning the Business of Our Government.

Speaker Crisp's bill for a 50,000 public building at Americus has been reported favorably to the house and takes its place on the calendar. While it may not be considered at this session, owing to the rush of business, it is certain to pass at the next session.

A new source of demand for United States gold has developed in an order from Canada for $25,000 in gold. This was taken out of the New York subtreasury Saturday and sent north. In addition to the Canada order, $1,225,000 worth of the metal was engaged for shipment to Europe. With these engagements deducted, the treasury's net gold reserve stands at $64,328,815.

The statement was made Saturday from an authoritative source that no issue of bonds will be made by the administration during the summer; that the president and Secretary Carlisle are in thorough accord on the financial policy of the treasury, and that the end of gold exports to Europe is believed to be about reached. The administration expects the new tariff bill is going into effect by August 1st, and after that date increased revenues are looked for.

The grand jury of Washington, Saturday afternoon brought indictments against Elberton R. Champman, broker, of New York, and John W. McCartney, broker, of Washington, two of the witnesses who refused to answer questions of the senate committee. Some comment was caused by the failure to return any indictments against the newspaper men, Schriver and Edwards, who were the first witnesses certified by the vice president to the grand jury, but is understood that the goverment expects to make the brokers' cases test cases, believing it has a better chance for their successful prosecution than it would have in the case of the newspaper men.

All the members of the cabinet, except Secretaries Carlisle and Morton, were present Tuesday at the cabinet meeting. The strike situation in the west occupied most all of the time, and the members of the cabinet as a whole are understood to be in thorough accord in sustaining the president and the attorney general in the steps which they have taken to suppress the disorder and bring about resumption of interstate traffic. The consensus of opinion was to delay, if possible, the use of the United States troops until terms of the injunction obtained in Chicago were made known to the various striking organizations. If, after that has been done, the disorder and violence continue, then the United States troops will be undoubtedly used promptly and with firmness.

FOR THE BIG SHOW.

SENATOR WALSH ON ATLANTA'S COMING EXPOSITION.

Good Reasons Why Congress Should Make an Appropriation.

Senator Patrick Walsh in an interview by the Southern Associated Press about the national and international importance of the Atlanta, Ga., exposition, said among other things:

"The Cotton States and International exposition at Atlanta for the display of arts, industries, manufactures and products of the soil, mine and forest, will open in September and close December 31, 1895. The promoters of this great enterprise have planned it on broad lines and will condnct it on such a liberal scale as to command the confidence and support of the people of the United States. The exposition will not be confined to the South. It will embrace the entire Union and will be open to exhibits from Mexico, Central and South America.

"There is no reason why this country should not command the trade of the Spanish-American republics. From the geograpical position of those countries and their proximity to the United States, our manufacturers and merchants should be able to command a large part of their trade. The United States should do a profitable business with the 50,000,000 of people to the south of us. England, France, Germany and Spain control the commerce which for the most part belong to this country. American enterprise should at least command a fair share of it.

"The Cotton States and International exposition has this object in view, and with proper encouragement from the government and the people of this country there is no reason why the effort should not be successful. The purpose of the promoters of this national and international exposition is to make it bear the same relation to the people of the American continent that the Chicago exposition bore to the nations of the world. This is the object which the public-spirited citizens of Georgia and the south have in view. All of the southern states will cordially co-operate in making it a grand exposition of the industrial progress of their section of the Union.

NEGROES TO TAKE PART.

"The colored people will take an active part. It is in contemplation to have a building exclusively devoted to them. This will contain their handiwork and show the advancement which the race has made in the useful arts. They would have made a most creditable showing at the World's fair, but Chicago was so distant as to make it impossible by reason of the great expense that would have to be incurred in collecting the evidences of their commendable progress in the mechanical and other arts. The central location of Atlanta makes it certain for them to do that which was impossible at Chicago.

"In order to dignify and enlarge the scope of the Cotton States and International exposition government recognition and aid are essential conditions to obtain and secure exhibits and attendance from the people of neighboring republics.

THE SOUTH DEMANDS IT.

"As an evidence of the public sentiment of the south, I cite the unanimous resolutions of the municipalities, conton exchanges and boards of trade from Baltimore to Galveston.

"Atlanta is known throughout the United States as one of the most progressive cities in the south. She has risen from the desolation of war to be a large, enterprising and prosperous community. I remember Atlanta in 1865 when she had less than a dozen houses and but few inhabitants. She has now close upon 100,000 people and more than $50,000,000 of taxable property, her growth has been rapid and substantial. Knowing the people as I do, and appreciating their ambition and their ability to excel in every great enterprise, I have no hesitation in saying that the Cotton States and International Exposition with the recognition and aid of the government will be a triumphant success.

"The dormant wealth of the South cannot be exaggerated. The industrial possibilities of the southern states are limitless in every field of human endeavor—in agriculture, in mining, and in manufactures—no other part of the Union affords like opportunities for investment and profitable development. In coal, iron, marble, granite, cotton and timber and in climate and water power, the South is the richest country in the world. These facts are forcing themselves to the attention of investors, and there is no more certain way to impress them upon the mind of the country than through the instrumentality of the proposed national and international exposition at Atlanta.

"Henry W. Grady, the brilliant and accomplished young Georgian, whose genius and patriotism were appreciated throughout the Union, died while literally loving the sections into peace," but his spirit still lives among the people of Georgia and animates them to deeds of noble enterprise.

"The Atlanta exposition is national and international in its aims and purposes, embracing all the states of the Union and the republics of Mexico, Central and South America, Cuba and the West Indies. I consider it the duty of congress to make the appropriation. Were the sum twice as great it could not be appropriated to a national enterprise more worthy of the support of the federal government and the patronage of all intelligent and patriotic American citizens."

Curious Effects of Frost.

An egg expands when it is frozen so much that the increased bulk breaks the shell. Apples, on the contrary, contract to such an extent that a full barrel will shrink until the top layer will be a foot below the chime. When the frost has been slowly and carefully drawn out they again assume their normal size and appearance. Apples can be transported when the mercury is 20 degrees below zero. Potatoes once touched by frost are ruined.

Lookout Mountain.

One of the largest signs ever painted is seen by visitors to Lookout mountain. The ascent up this historic old mountain is made by an incline railway. Open observation cars are used, and the trip to Lookout point, 2,200 feet above sea level, is made in six minutes. Just at the foot of this incline the laboratory of the Chattanooga Medicine Co. is located. The roof of this building shows a sign 175 feet long and forty feet wide that reads "McElree's Wine of Cardui for Women." Some of the letters are twenty feet long and can be read from the cars while riding all the way up the mountain. No visitor comes to Lookout mountain without having "Wine of Cardui" firmly impressed on their memory. The Chattanooga Medicine Company also make Thedford's Black Draught, and have an immense laboratory containing more than one-half acre of floor space.

RAMON'S LIVER PILLS AND TONIC PELLETS TREATMENT

How a Snail Breathes.

The breathing operation in a snail is one of the queerest processes imaginable and is carried on without the least semblance of lungs. The orifice through which he takes his supply of "the breath of life" is, of course, called the mouth, notwithstanding that it is situated in the side of his great sucker-like foot. The process of breathing is not carried on with anything like regularity, as it is in most creatures, the mouth simply opening occasionall to let in a supply of fresh air, which is expelled by the same opening as soon as the oxygen has been exhausted. The snail's peculiar mouth is provided with a tongue, set with hundreds of fine teeth.

SEVERE EXPOSURE

Often results in colds, fevers, rheumatism, neuralgia and kindred derangements. We do not "catch cold" if we are in good condition. If the liver is active, and the system in consequence doing its duty, we live in full health and enjoy life "rain or shine." To break up a cold there's nothing so valuable as Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They keep the whole system regulated in a perfectly natural way. If we do not feel happy, if we worry and grumble, if we are morbid, if the days seem dreary and long, if the weather is bad, if things go awry, it is the liver which is at fault. It is generally "torpid." A common sense way is to take Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. We generally eat too much, take insufficient exercise, by means of which our tissue-changes become indolent and incomplete. Be comfortable—you are comfortable when well. You'll be well when you have taken "Pleasant Pellets."

No Constipation follows their use. Put up sealed in glass—always fresh and reliable.

LIFE.

Life, like a marble block, is given to all,
A blank, inchoate mass of years and days,
Whereon one with ardent chisel swift essays
Some shape of strength or symmetry to call;
One shatters it in bits to mend a wall,
One in a craftier hand the chisel lays,
And one, to wake the mirth in Lesbia's gaze,
Carves it apace in toys fantastical.

But least is he who, with enchanted eyes
Filled with high visions of fair shapes to be,
Muses which god he shall immortalize
In the proud Parian's perpetuity,
Till twilight warns him from the punctual skies
That the night cometh wherein none shall see.

SENTENCE OF DEATH.

BY H. E. CLARK.

EAREST Sidney—I must see you at once. I had another frightful scene with father this morning. He got into a terrible passion simply because I happened to mention your name in the most innocent way. He actually wanted me to promise never to see you again. When I refused his rage was really awful. I am sure he is going mad. I have not been allowed to leave my bedroom all day. Isn't it too absurd? But I cannot endure this tyranny any longer. I have quite made up my mind to leave him. I shall go and live with Aunt Mary, who has often promised me a home. I must see you first, however, and this is my plan. All the fearful worry and strain about you with father has made me so irritable and uncertain tempered lately that he is sure there is something wrong with me, and I am to go to-morrow morning at 11 o'clock to see Dr. Keith-Jefferies, the great nerve doctor. Father says he shall drive me over there himself and call for me again in an hour. This is to make sure that I hold no communication with you. Did you ever hear anything so childish? It serves him right to hoist him with his own petard, so you must be in the doctor's waiting room at a little before 11, and then we can have three-quarters of an hour's quiet conversation. My maid, who is a very good girl, and who will accompany me to Aunt' Mary's, is to post this. Yours ever. SYLVIA BULPETT.

P. S.—Keith-Jefferies's address is—Harley street. Don't be late.

This was Sydney's first glimpse of the tragedy of life, in the shape of parental barbarism. It overcame him for a moment. "My poor Sylvia," he murmured. Then he pulled out his watch. Nine twenty-seven! He swallowed a cup of scalding coffee, without milk or sugar, and looking at his watch again. Nine twenty-eight! "The old brute!" he muttered, walking up and down the room, "I always said it would come to this. I should like to—" Out came the watch once more. Nine twenty-nine! He seized his hat and rushed from the room.

The hat was a concession to custom, but the morning was warm. It was much too soon to go to her so he ran three times round St. James's Park to quiet his nerves. Then he slackened his pace and fell to reviewing the position more calmly.

"After all it's perhaps the best thing that could happen," was his conclusion. "Aunt Mary is not friendly with the old wretch. Aunt Mary will help me. We will be married from Aunt Mary's. I suppose I shall have to arrange this running away, and it will be good fun, for old Bulpett would show fight if we came across him. He would gratify his bloodthirsty instincts and shoot me like a dog! What should I do? I could not strike her father!"

He proceeded to develop the situation in various ways, and succeeded in creating himself a very fine role, indeed, in which he should be the maiden's savior from a brutal parent's rage, and at the same time spare the old man's gray hairs. At half past ten he hastened to the great doctor's and rang the bell. A man servant, presenting the usual combination of butler and undertaker, opened the door.

"Have you an appointment, sir?"

"No, I must take my chance."

"I am afraid you will have to wait some time, sir; there are already a good many here."

"It doesn't matter; I am in no hurry," replied Sydney, incoherently. He was shown into the waiting room, where a dozen or so of fellow creatures were collected. Most of them were young ladies, for Dr. Keith-Jeffries was a favorite with the sex, and they all had that air of dreary self-absorption peculiar to the self centered invalid.

Presently Sylvia glided in, looking the picture of health and spirits. She was very young, almost too young to be a martyr to the sorrows she described to Sydney, as they took possession of a remote window embrasure. She told him that she really could not bear it! Her resolution was unshaken. She had written to her Aunt Mary to expect her that night. Sydney must have a carriage at the garden gate at 9 o'clock in the evening, when she and her maid would be waiting. They were then to drive to Paddington, and catch the last train for Exeter, where Aunt Mary lived.

So far, Sylvia, who was a clear headed, managing young lady, had arranged, and her plan of campaign seemed to Sydney quite excellent. He promised readily to fulfill his share of the business, and then took occasion to urge that as he was both able and anxious to prepare a home for her, the sojourn at her aunt's need be only a temporary one.

Sylvia listened, reflected and shook her head. "One thing at once," said she, wisely. "When I am safe at Aunt Mary's there will be time to talk about the future. Don't forget 9 o'clock this evening. I depend upon you. Oh, I must go; the doctor is at liberty." And at the funereal beck of the undertaker she vanished.

Sydney was left in the waiting room, but on excitement and castaway were such that he could scarcely behave with sobriety. A golden future lay before him, his pulses throbbed as if to music, he dreamed rose colored dreams.

The undertaker coming to summon the dreamer to the doctor's presence, had to touch him on the shoulder before he took any notice, and even then he followed quite mechanically, muttering and smiling to himself in a quasi idiotic way.

"Well, sir, what can I do for you?"

A grave, clean shaved, keen looking man sitting at a desk was eyeing him with the closest observation; and it dawned upon him that he was in for a serious consultation—he who had never had a day's illness in his life! He had intended to give the undertaker half a crown and to depart as he had come; but he had put it off till too late.

Here was a preposterous dilemma! The doctor, who seemed to be in a great hurry, felt his pulse, looked at his tongue and sounded him with a stethoscope before he had in any way recovered his self command.

"What excuse shall I make?" Sydney asked himself meanwhile. "What excuse shall I make when he finds there is nothing the matter with me?"

To his surprise the doctor, having finished his examination, sat down at his desk to write a prescription, looking very grave indeed, and trying not to meet his patient's eye.

"Your heart is all wrong," he said gloomily. "You must be very careful. No excitement mind, no violent exertion! Light diet, chop, fish; no wine, no beer, no smoke. Take this three times a day and come to see me again in a week. I'm afraid it's all over with you. Good morning. Good morning."

Sydney was in the sunlit street again and the tide of London life roared around as before. But to him everything was changed. He stood a stranger in a city he had never seen.

"Heart disease—I've got heart disease," he repeated to himself stupidly. "It's all over with me. He needn't have put it in that brutal way. Oh bosh! there must be some mistake; the man's an infernal charlatan. I'll take no notice of him." But a moment afterward he was painfully calling to memory every word of the interview, every tone, every look and weighing them with anxious deliberation. And then he recollected having heard that people who had heart disease were often the last to know of their state, and he remembered, too, that he had been troubled more than once with a curious feeling in the left side. At that very moment a sharp pain went through him like a knife.

"The doctor is right enough," he muttered; "I'm very bad. I feel it now. I'll go and get his stuff made up at once. No excitement! If I get excited I suppose I shall fall down dead. But how am I to get over to-night without excitement? However, I must risk that. She must be taken out of the clutches of that old brute of a father of hers at all hazards. And then I must say goodby to her forever—if I survive—for it's clear that I can't marry her now with one foot, perhaps both feet, in the grave!"

He had his medicine made up and took a dose. But what could medicine do in a serious case like this? He was too far gone! He had no doubt it was only colored water—prescribed for the sake of soothing him, as if he were a child. But he would look the thing in the face and set his house in order. He went to a livery stable and ordered a carriage to call for him at 8 o'clock in the evening. Then he posted off to his solicitor.

The lawyer was a personal friend. "My dear boy, I am glad to see you! Come and lunch with me at the club, and we'll go to Lord's afterward. But I say, you don't look very bright. Nothing wrong, I hope!"

"Can you make my will—now—directly—this very moment—right off—on the spot?"

"Most decidedly I can," replied the lawyer, becoming professional at once, and pulling a sheet of fair, white foolscap from his desk. Then he looked hard at Sydney, whom three hours of mental misery had changed considerably.

"There's nothing wrong," blunted out Sydney, "but I want it out of the way, once for all. I should like to have it signed and finished by 2 o'clock if possible."

"That is in two hours," remarked the lawyer, looking at his watch. "Yes, we can manage that provided it isn't very long, and still go to Lord's after," and he began to write. "You're not going to die, old man, never fear; you'll have many another lark with me."

The will was finished by 1.30 and deposited in the safe. They shook hands and Sydney said wearily: "You'll excuse me not lunching with you to-day, won't you? I don't seem to have any appetite. And you'll excuse my silence, too, for the present. You'll know all there is to know pretty soon, I expect," and he sidled out of the door without looking back.

"I wonder what's up?" muttered the lawyer, as he went back to his desk. "He certainly looks very ill,. Some entanglement? Suicide? Nonsense! And what an odd will! Half his property to Sylvia Bulpett, who will have plenty of her own when the old curmudgeon of a father of hers dies. I shall know pretty soon, shall I? Poor old Cartright!"

"In the midst of life we are in death," muttered Sydney, as he strolled through Lincoln's Inn Fields, with the carefully regulated step of an invalid. He wished the sun would not shine so brightly and the children scream so loud. It affected his nerves; Sydney had nerves now! He wanted only to hide away and die in peace.

He returned to his chambers. "His" chambers! He had just taken them on for another year. A month would probably have been quite long enough.

He heaved a sigh, and looked mechanically in the box for letters. There was the brown envelope of a telegram, and his heart beat wildly, dangerously, ominously. He must really cultivate calmness.

"Everything changed. Cancel all arrangements. Come at once to Sylvia."

The room swam round him and the windows waltzed madly for a few seconds. Then, instead of dying, as he expected, he found himself pretty well.

What had happened to change everything? Was Sylvia's father dead? Had he relented? Had she met with an accident? The thought of this last possibility had made his heart beat dangerously again. In half a minute, quite forgetful of heart disease, he was driving as fast as a hansom could take him toward Mr. Bulpett's house in Hampstead.

There, all was commotion; the very footman who opened the door was in tears. "Old Bulpett's not dead, then," was Sydney's immediate deduction.

"Who is dead?" asked Sydney of a blubbering maid servant. "Neither of them yet, sir!" and so hardened was Sydney to mortuary reflections that her remark seemed quite natural. "Here comes poor master."

Sydney's heart jumped, as it always did at sight of his tyrant.

"Forgive me, my boy; I've done you injustice," sobbed the old gentleman. "It was all pride—all pride. I'm a dying man, and I beg you to forgive me."

"Where is Sylvia? Is she well?" exclaimed Sydney.

Bulpett burst into tears. "She's very ill—very ill—dying, too, we are afraid," he exclaimed, "and that's why I want you to forgive me. I never really disliked you. I'd rather have seen her marry you than anybody else. But you were too independent—and I meant to have you on your knees before I—but there, what does it all matter now."

"Ill?" gasped Sydney, "since when? What has happened?"

Mr. Bulpett drew him into a reception room, and then, mastering his grief somewhat, poured out his tale.

"She went to see a great doctor this morning, for what she thought a mere nervous ailment, and I allowed myself to be examined, too, as I was there. My boy, I have not a year to live!"

"And Sylvia?" cried Sydney, impatiently.

"Sylvia! Oh, Sylvia is in the last stages of consumption, and cannot last six months—half a lung. You have come to a house of mourning, indeed!"

It was as well that old Bulpett should mourn for himself—nobody else would, but Sylvia, the bright—the beautiful—

Sydney sank back upon a sofa, and buried his face in his hands; he was incapable of thought, and he felt nothing but a burning desire to see her again—to be with her, if only for a moment.

"May I—can I—will she?" he began, confusedly, but he was interrupted by an imperious peal of the bell.

"Here he is at last," cried the agonized father. "I sent for our little local doctor—Dr. Eliot—directly we got home, but he was out. I have been expecting him these two hours."

"Your message was urgent," he said to Mr. Bulpett; "I am sorry I have been delayed so long, but I was called away to a most extraordinary case. My distinguished confrere, Dr. Keith-Jefferies, was brought home from Harley street a couple of hours ago, having attempted to commit suicide in a sudden access of mania. He has been very odd for some time; it appears that he has been sentencing all his patients to death for days!"

"Keith-Jefferies?" exclaimed Mr. Bulpett to the doctor's boundless astonishment, "why, that's the very man! Mad? Why, that explains everything! Doctor, that fellow has nearly frightened us all out of our wits. Look at me, doctor, do I look like a man in the last stages of disease? I shall live to—"

"Plague everyone yet," subjoined the little local doctor, who knew him of old, as he was led to see Sylvia upstairs, where she was sitting crying, her pretty head buried in her knees, rocking herself to and fro.

Sydney had taken a piece of paper from his pocket and was tearing it into minute pieces. It was the prescription which had cost him a couple of guineas a few hours before.

There was a brief interval, and then the door slowly opened, and Sylvia stole into the room, half laughing, half crying. "I have come to tell you, darling, that Dr. Eliot says there is nothing whatever the matter with either me—or papa," she cried, and then, starting back: "Why, Sydney, you look ten years older than when I saw you this morning, and I declare your hair has turned gray. And all on my account. My poor darling."—Black and White.

Tin for Filling Teeth.

Professor E. T. Darby, of Philadelphia, has demonstrated that, when properly prepared, tin is equal to gold as a material for filling teeth. The tin is prepared by first casting the chemically pure metal into a disk, which is placed in a lathe, and thin, narrow shavings are turned from it. These have peculiar softness and adaptability, and are more cohesive than the best gold. Tin does not, of course, possess the strength of gold, but it has a density and hardness that few would give it credit for, besides possessing many other advantages. It seems peculiarly congenial to tooth tissue.—New York Observer.

THE STRIKE FAILS.

SOVEREIGN'S ORDER TO K. OF L. GENERALLY DISREGARDED.

Only a Few Unions Go Out—Chicago Resuming Her Normal Condition.

The great railway strike is practically at an end in Chicago. Trains on all roads are moving, passenger trains are almost without exception on time, and freight traffic is rapidly becoming regular.

"The back of the strike is not only broken, said Manager Egan, of the General Managers' Association, Wednesday afternoon, "but the backbone has entirely disappeared. The blockade is raised and it will require but a short time to get the railroad business of the city into its regular routine."

HOLDING THEIR JOBS.

The ultimate effect of the appeal issued by Grand Master Workman Sovereign, of the Knights of Labor, calling all knights throughout the country and those in sympathy with them to quit work, and the order issued at about the same time representatives of all allied labor in Chicago to do likewise, cannot yet be certainly foreseen. All that is known is is that the Knights of Labor at all points heard from, including nearly all of the large centers of population in the United States, remained at work during the day with practical unanimity, and that in Chicago the number of members of the allied trades remaining at work so far outnumbered those who quit, as to make no appreciable change in the industrial appearance of the city.

The leaders, however, say that there is nothing in the situation to cause discouragement and that the public, through a lack of knowledge of the machinery of industrial organizations, has been led to expect results which were in contemplation when the strike orders were issued. Mr. Sovereign, for instance, points out that his appeal was not an order to strike; that in fact he has no power to order a walkout; but that the persons acquainted with the working of the organization would know that in effect it would be the same as an order.

THE STRIKE RANGE FIRE.

In short, he was perfectly confident that by Saturday next, after the various local and district assemblies had time to meet and take formal action on the appeal and to rally their friends outside of the order, the result would show 1,000,000 of men idle as a consequence. The local strike leaders also claimed that a little time was the only necessary condition to a walk-out of the 100,000 men whom they represent, and by Saturday, after the various sub-organizations had had time to consult together, the proposed tie-up of business would be fully as effective as they had predicted.

Surface indications so far, however, do not bear out the claims of either Sovereign or the Chicago men. It is not recorded yet that any district assembly of the Knights of Labor has voted on the strike. On the other hand, the Brooklyn district, which is composed of railroad men, and therefore naturally supposed to be in sympathy with their fellows in the west, at a meeting confined their expression of sympathy to a tender of financial aid, but declined to strike.

THURSDAY'S DISPATCHES.

The following telegram was sent to President Cleveland Thursday afternoon by the American Federation of Labor conference:

"The gravity of the industrial situation of the country demands extraordinary and exceptional action of a counciliatory character at the hands of all men. Recognizing this fact, the executive council of the American Federation of Labor and the undersigned officers of national and international trades unions and brotherhoods of railway organizations of America are in conference in this city. We ask you, in the name of the working people and the entire citizenship of our country, to lend your influence and give us your aid so that the present industrial crisis may be brought to an end, alike to the advantage of the people of our country and the institutions under which we live.

"We, therefore, ask you to come to Chicago and meet this conference, or, if the condition of public business does not warrant such course, that you will deputize some one as your representative."

Signed by the executive council American Federation of Labor, Samuel Gompers, president; C. P. McGuire, first vice president; C. L. Drummond, second vice president; James Bretelle, third vice president; William Marden, fourth vice president; J. R. Lennon, treasurer; Chris Evans, secretary; and representatives of all organizations present. The telegram was addressed simply, "To the President of the United States."

The strike situation throughout the country Thursday was, in general, one of quiet news. The central point of interest was the meeting of labor leaders with President Gompers, of the American Federation of Labor, at their headquarters in Chicago. Among the suggestions considered were the following:

First, that the striking Pullman employes, on high patriotic grounds, appeal to President Debs to declare the strike off, because of the infinite damage which is being done to the business of the country.

Second, that the leaders unite in an appeal to the public to quit patronizing Pullman sleeping, drawing room and dining cars.

Third, that President Cleveland be requested to appoint commission to investigate the strike and the causes which led up to it, in the expectation that the president's commission would justify the action taken by the strikers, and free them from charges of rioting and disorder.

Fourth, that immediate efforts be made to secure the impeachment of Attorney General Olney.

Fifth, that an effort be made to secure the passage of a compulsory arbitration law by congress.

Sixth, that complaints be lodged looking to the indictment of the railway managers for conspiracy to obstruct the movement of United States mails by refusing to run mail cars except in connection with Pullman cars.

ANOTHER RESTRAINING ORDER.

Another omnibus bill and restraining order was issued against E. V. Debs and others by Judge Taft, of the United States circuit court at Chicago, Thursday, similar to that filed on July 4th. It covers the Pittsburg, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis; the Columbus, Hocking Valley and Toledo; the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis; the Columbus, Akron and Cleveland; the New York, Lake Erie and Western; the New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio; the Norfolk and Western; the Baltimore and Ohio; the Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern, and the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton.

Up to 4 o'clock Thursday the following unions and members were represented at the headquarters of the American Railway Union as being on strike: Iron workers, 1,700; painters, 3,500; bakers, 1,000; machinists, 500; cigar makers, 4,000; carriage and wagon makers, 700; teamsters, 1,500; cloak makers, 1,400; lake seamen, 3,000; moulders, 500; tinners, 1,000; glass workers, 70; beer pump workers, 200. Total of trades unions, 21,865. In addition to this are about 10,000 Knights of Labor, of which 6,000 were thrown out of work by the closing out of packing houses and factories.

H. Hanford, of Chicago, second vice president of the National Linseed Oil Trust, and popularly supposed to have been several times a millionaire, committed suicide early Wednesday morning. Despondency caused by worry over financial matters is given as the cause impelling him to take his own life.

The republican state convention of Minnesota met at St. Paul Wednesday. Governor Knute Nelson and Lieutenant Governor Clough were renominated by acclamation. Albert Berg was nominated for secretary of state, and S. C. Dunn for state auditor. Henry W. Childs was renominated for attorney general by acclamation.

The Britannia will be followed by the Scotia with the deep-sea section of the cable.

Mr. Samuel Spencer bought two railroads Tuesday. They were the Columbia, Charlotte and Augusta and the Columbia and Greenville. Each road was bid in at $100,000 by Samuel Spencer, president of the Southern Railway Company, the purchasers to carry out the terms of the reorganization plan as agreed upon under the Drexel, Morgan & Co. arrangement.

A company of regulars, commanded by Captain Conrad, came in collision with a mob of strikers, principally miners, Tuesday afternoon at the Rock Island railroad station at Spring Valley, Ill., and after patiently enduring volley after volley of stones, fired into the mob, killing two men and wounding several others. The mob was largely composed of Hungarians, Poles and other foreigners.

The sheriff also swore in seventy-five additional deputies, and armed them with Winchester rifles. "In the interest and love of home," the violent manifestoes carried forty odd pages long.

At midnight Thursday night both houses of the Louisiana general assembly finally adjourned, the present session of the legislature having expired by limitation.

Division Superintendent Pike, of the Louisville and Nashville railroad, has issued an order requiring all members of the American Railway Union, in the employ of the road, to withdraw from the order. No man known to be a member will be permitted to go out with a train without showing a certificate of withdrawal from the organization.

The managers of the Western Union Telegraph company, the Postal Telegraph and Cable company and the North American Telegraph company have been subpœned at Chicago, Milwaukee and various other cities to appear and produce the telegraphic correspondence of Debs and other parties connected with the Pullman boycott and strike.

Judge Barrett, of the supreme court of New York, has granted a certificate of reasonable doubt in the case of Erastus Wiman, who was recently convicted in the court of oyer and terminer, before Judge Ingraham, of forgery for having forged the name of T. Bullinger as endorser of a check for $5,000 made by R. G. Dun & Co. and payable to Bullinger's order.

Captain W. H. Murdaugh, supervising inspector of steam vessels for the third district, with headquarters at Norfolk, Va., has received his commission at the treasury department. It had been withheld under the impression that he had never been pardoned for serving in the confederate navy. His name, however, was found in the pardon act of 1885 and he was qualified at once.

A special cable dispatch from Paris says: The chamber of deputies rejected M. Cavagnac's proposals for an income tax by a vote of 267 to 236. As the proposals had been strenuously opposed by the government, Dupuy and Finance Minister Poincare announced that in view of the narrowness of the majority they must have a vote of confidence or resign. Confidence was then voted by 363 to 80.

A Washington special of Thursday says: The attorney general has offered a reward of $500 each or $2,000 in all, for testimony which will lead to the arrest and conviction of the person or persons concerned in the wreck at Sacramento, California, which resulted in the almost immediate death of Engineer Clarke and three regular United States soldiers. The reward is $500 for the conviction of the murderer of each person killed.

So far as Los Angeles, Cal., is concerned the strike is over. Even the strikers admit that the strike is a thing of the past. The Santa Fe strikers are making application for places. Trains are running all over southern California, passengers and freight, with few exceptions are running as before the strike. The Santa Fe is regularly sending out its overland trains with a complement of troops and deputies aboard each train.

Freight trains were run on both the Louisville and Nashville and the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis railroads Thursday, as regularly as if there had been no strike. The yards in which hundreds of cars had accumulated were about cleaned up during the day. Both roads will retain the new men employed before the strike was broken, while those men who refused to take out trains will not be given employment.

A Jackson, Miss., special says: The third congressional convention was held Thursday in Vicksburg. Congressman Catchings was unanimously renominated. A resolution was passed unqualitedly endorsing his course in congress. The national administration was enthusiastically endorsed in every detail and the action of the president in suppressing the strike was commended. General Catchings was the only Mississippi congressman who voted for the unconditional repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman act.

DEBS ARRESTED.

Charged With Conspiracy to Interfere With the Mails.

Eugene V. Debs, president of the American Railway Union; George W. Howard, vice president; Sylvester Keliher, secretary; William Rogers and J. S. Merwin were all indicted at Chicago Tuesday afternoon by the grand jury for conspiracy to interfere with the United States mail. The penalty is a fine of from $1,000 to $10,000.

Wednesday evening Governor Stone addressed the American Railway Union lodge by invitation. He emphatically warned them against lawlessness, rioting, etc. Every word that he spoke was full of determination and courage and well pleased the audience, causing many fellows that took cause for lawlessness and spoke.

NATIONAL CAPITAL.

NEWS AND GOSSIP OF WASHINGTON CITY.

Brief Notes Concerning the Business of Our Government.

The house committee on interstate and foreign commerce has decided to recommend the appointment of a committee to investigate the present labor troubles.

The president, Monday, sent to the senate the following nominations: James M. Bareo, register of the land office at Gainesville, Fla.; postmasters, Wm. Graham, Orange, Va.; Frank D. Smith, Dothan, Ala.

General Miles reported to the president and Major General Schofield Wednesday morning that everything in Chicago is quiet. The officials at Washington think the situation more favorable than it has been at any time since the strike began.

Dispatches received at Washington from Baltimore, New York, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Topeka, Duluth, Boston, Buffalo, Milwaukee, St. Joseph, St. Louis, Omaha, Detroit and other cities say that there has been no strike of labor organizations in compliance with Sovereign's request.

The senate committee on commerce, Wednesday afternoon reported the river and harbor bill to the senate. The bill carried an increase over the sum passed by the house amounting to $8,087,490, of which $2,267,490 is expended on rivers and $820,490 on harbors. Divided according to states the increase are as follows: Virginia—Jamestown island, $10,000; Norfolk harbor, $35,000. North Carolina—Roanoke river, $50,000; Cape Fear, $132,000. South Carolina—Winyah bay, $8,000. Georgia—Cumberland sound, $70,000; Brunswick bar, $30,000. Florida—Pensacola harbor, $25,000; Key West, $15,000.

The fact that the senate has adopted Senator Daniel's resolution endorsing the action of President Cleveland in calling out the military to suppress the riotous strikers, it is believed here, will have a good effect upon the situation. Mr. Cleveland is determined that there shall be no more destruction of property by strikers, and that they shall prevent none from working who care to do so. It is probable that this strike will lead to the adoption of some act of congress looking to the arbitration of disagreements between corporations and employes on the line recommended in Mr. Cleveland's letter to congress eight years ago. Several members of the executive committee of the Knights of Labor are in Washington urging the passage of the bill introduced by Senator George, of Mississippi, which provides for arbitration between employer and employe in case of disagreement.

WON'T ARBITRATE.

THE PULLMAN COMPANY REJECTS OFFERS OF PEACE,

And the Biggest Strike on Record Will Result.

A Chicago special says: The city council committee on arbitration and the committee of seven appointed by the meeting of Trades' Assembly, met Monday afternoon. Alderman McGillen briefly sketched the fruitless efforts of the committee of arbitration, and concluded by suggesting that, as the Pullman Company had said that there was nothing to arbitrate, a committee of five to investigate that statement be appointed, which should inquire into all the facts and discover if there be grounds for arbitration. He moved that such a committee be selected, and that two members be named by the Pullman company, two by the judges of the circuit court of Cook county, and the fifth member to be named by the four so chosen.

The meeting adopted the motion and a committee composed of four aldermen and three delegates were appointed, to lay the proposition before Vice-President Wickes, of the Pullman Company, for his acceptance or rejection, and to report at 4:30 p. m.

"We shall make this offer to the Pullman Company," said Alderman McGillen, "as the representatives of the city of Chicago and its laboring interests. If the company rejects it, there will no longer be doubt as to where the responsibility for the great trouble rests."

THE PROPOSITION REJECTED.

The officials of the Pullman company absolutely refused to entertain the proposition made by the joint committee, and there seems to be nothing left now to prevent the great strike of all industries, arranged for twenty-four hours hence.

A MEETING AT CHATTANOOGA.

Railway Employes Decide to Remain at Their Posts.

A largely attended meeting of the employes of ten railroads, members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, the Brotherhood of Locomotive firemen, the Order of Railway Conductors, the trainmen's union and the United Beneficial Order of Switchmen, was held at Chattanooga Sunday to discuss the strike. It was decided to remain at their posts until their respective chiefs called them out, and the unanimous sentiment was that no strike be ordered.

General Strike at Meridian.

All labor organizations at Meridian, Miss., have declared in favor of the strike and joined the boycott against Pullman. Tuesday afternoon a mass meeting was held by the members, and unanimously decided to take sympathetic action in the matter. The situation is [illegible]

Bowman unwittingly paid Gov Jones a high compliment—In his speech at Oneonta, he refered to the Military blocking the streets of Birmingham, and said "Let such as this continue and they will be trying to run every plow in these Mountains with a soldier and a bayonet behind you". True, if the farmers of Alabama were to be molested by their employes, who refuse to work and who also sought to prohibit the farmers or other laborers from following the work of their choice, the Governor of Alabama would see that they were not Molested, and if need be would send soldiers to protect the humblest farmer in his sight. It is this confidence in the Governor and in his Party that is inducing so many wanderers to come home. The Democratic Party is the Party of the people, because it insures equal rights and equal Protection to all.

Skaggs is desperate, he sees no hope of success for Kolb, is excited and wants to figt when one criticises his record. He notified editor Williams that he would call on him next day with a Winchester if Williams would name the time and place. Mr Williams says he did not name the time and place and Skaggs did not call and that he is glad he did not, for he could not hope to add anything to his character by having a difficulty with a man who has niether the respect nor confidence of those among whom he was reared—Bravo! for Williams.

The late Baptist state Convention held in Marion was a great success. The boards made encouraging reports. Five thousand dollars were raised to pay off the floating debt of the Judson Institute. The announcement was made that Rockefeller would give $5000. to Howard College, provided the friends of that institution would pay off its indebtedness. This they will proceed to do. Howard College has opened its doors for young women.

The VIEW is pleased to see that a spirit of for-bearance is being exercised by the citizens of Chilton County. We are all more fully realizing the fact that each man has perfect right to think and to act for himself. We have so far heard of no ill feeling between Neighbors on account of political differences. Two years ago churches were rent in twain by such foolishness, but now we've learned better. Extreme men on both sides might be glad to create strife, but the people are not going to allow any such disturbances. We do not apprehend any trouble in our County. The Inspectors will, we think, do their sworn duty without fear or favor, and when the vote is counted and the returns in the result will be accepted in good faith, and we will still be bretheren.

In every County day by day Kolb forces are leaving him, but no man yet comes out with the name of a Democrat who has left Democracy for Kolb. When Col. Oates was through speaking, at Independence, Autauga County, last Friday week five men who had been following Kolb, came to him and said, from now on we are with you: And so it goes. Come home ye wanderers, you are weary and worn, sick and sore. Come home and together we'll march to a glorious victory.

COL. A. A. WILEY.

In an inteview in the Advertiser Col. A. A. Wiley announces unequivocally that he proposes to contest for the congressional nomination in September. He has this to say in reference to the President

"Mr. Cleveland has ever been the unwavering friend of the South. He called into his official family—his cabinet—three Southern gentlemen—Carslile, Herbert and Smith. He commissioned ex-Senator Eustis of Louisana to be Minister to France and Hannis Taylor of Mobile, in our own State, to Spain. Recently, he appointed Judge White of Louisana Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, the highest Judicial tribunal on the world.

I have not the time to enumerate, nor has the public patience to listen to the recital of the large number of consular positions he has filled with Southern men. In the languages of the State Democratic platform, "by his generous treatmen of our people, he has shown that he is President of the whole country, knowing no North, no South, no East, no West."

Because of his devotion to the best interests of our people in demanding lower taxes, he was defeated for re-election in November 1888. In golden words, which will live along side of magna charta he proclaimed that unnecessary taxation is unjust taxation. And this patriotic declaration, unpopular at the time, compassed his defeat in his second race for President. Four years later, however, he was elected by the largest popular majority ever cast for any candidate for that office from the foundation of the American Union.

"It is not necessary to recount the bad tendencies Mr. Cleveland has checked, nor tell of the faithfulness he has shown in small as well as in great things. His character has stood the most curious scrutiny since he challenged the ring of New York, during his term of office as Governor of that great State. The best esteem of men towards each other is reserved for honesty. Our President fears but one thing and that is to do wrong. Some Democrats may differ with him as to policy, but no true man can doubt his honesty or question his wisdom or patriotism.

The VIEW is the best county paper in the world.

THE DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM.

The Democracy of Alabama in convention assembled, reaffirm the principles of the Democratic party as declared in its platform adopted at Chicago in 1892, and congratulates the country upon the success of those principles in the triumphant election of Grover Cleveland, who, by his generous treatment of our people, has shown that he is the President of the whose country, knowing no North, no South, no East, no West. We recognize the wisdom and patriotism of the president, and believe in his fealty to the principles of our party, and indorse his administration of the Federal Government; while some of us differ with him matters of policy, we are agreed in the belief that he is actuated by motives of the highest patriotism and by an unselfish devotion to the greatest good of the whole people.

While there are differences of opinion among us in matters of detail, we all believe in the free coinage of silver when ever it can be done consistently with the maintenance of a sound and safe currency.

We earnestly urge upon our Senators and Representatives in Congress the speedy reform of the tarif and the prompt repeal of the ten per cent. tax on the issue of state banks.

We heartily endorse the present administration of the state Government, headed by Governor Thomas G. Jones, who has so wisely and courageously his great trust, and we commend him for his impartial and fearless execution of the laws.

We pledge to the people of Alabama a continuance of the good government of our state affairs inaugurated by the election of George S. Houston in 1874.

The election law enacted at the last session of our General Assembly is in accordance with the principle upon which are based the laws regulating elections in a large majority of the states of this Union enacted with out regard to party, and was intended to obtain at the ballot box a full and free expression of the popular will; and after giving it a trial, should it fail to accomplish the end which it was intended to effect, we pledge ourselves to make such changes and alterations therein as may be necessary to effect that end.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
DR. G. C. OSGOOD,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE,
Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

Dr. Sims, comes highly recomended.

A few weeks ago the Banner made much sport of the fact that a few playful Miners going through the woods with sticks on their shoulders had frighten the guards and the Sheriff and had caused our Governor to fill Birmingham with the Military. But no sooner had the Military been withdrawn on Monday last, than these same "playful Miners" rushed in and shot down innocent men who were at work. Forbearance has ceased to be a virtue and no stone will be left unturned to bring to justice every participator or abettor in such crimes.

W. H. Lawrence deceased
Estate of

Probate Court
Chilton County Ala.

Letters of administration upon the estate of said decedent, having been granted to the undersigned on the 4th day of December 1893, by Hon. R. M. Honeycutt, Judge of the Probate Court of Chilton County, Alabama, notice is hereby given that all persons having claims against said estate will be required to present the same within the time allowed by law, or that the same will be barred.

W. M. Lawrence.

At the earnest request of many good citizens of Chilton County, Rev. W. J. Ruddick has consented to make the race for Representative. He is a working man, busy with his saw at the Mill and may not have the time to visit all portions of the County. He depends upon the good people of the County to elect him. All know Mr Ruddick to be an intelligent man, an upwright citizen, and a man of pure life. He favors enlarged educational advantages for our children. He believes in honesty in public life as well as private life. He would if elected, do his best to have remedied any defect that may be found in the Sayre election law. He stands for honest methods and his unimpeachable character is a guarantee that he would do his best to see that all taint of fraud be swept from our statutes. Here is a case of the office seeking the man, and we as citizens can heartily unite in his support.

Send W. J. Ruddick to the Legislature and every citizen in the county will be properly represented.

A MIRACLE IN VERMONT.

THE WONDERFUL EXPERIENCE OF A WELL KNOWN CHELSEA MAN.

Stricken with an Incurable Disease and yet Cured. His Personal Statement in Detail.

(From the Argus and Patriot, Montpelier, Vt.)

This is an age of progress and everything that hails the advance of new ideas for the good of humanity is hailed with delight.

It is the province of newspapers to watch for strange events or phenomena of any kind and to immediately investigate a reported case out of the line of regular community happenings. So when the story of Mr. George Hutchinson, of Chelsea, Vt., and how he had been raised from a bed where he lay stricken with a supposedly incurable disease was told, the Argus and Patriot detailed a reporter to look up the reported facts of the case, to whom Mr. Hutchinson made the following statement.

"I am a native of Massachusetts, a woodworker by trade, and forty years of age, and for the past fifteen years have been working in various sawmills in Vermont and Massachusetts. Eight years ago I moved from Bradford to Chelsea and bought the sawmill of which I am now proprietor. I was in perfect health and known throughout Chelsea and vicinity as one of the strongest men or my weight in that section. December 10th, 1893, I was hurt by a piece of flying board as I was at work in the mill. After that, I began slowly to lose my strength and became incapacitated for work or effort of any kind. The seat of my trouble seemed to be my back, but it gradually extended downward. I consulted all the local physicians and was treated by two of them, but the medicines they administered were not of the slightest avail and did not check the disease in the least. In fact, I was a miserable victim of locomotor ataxia and was conscious of a steady advance of the insidious disease. My back ached continually and my legs began to grow numb and to be less and less usable. By the 15th of April I could absolutely do nothing and was scarcely able to stand. My physicians advised me to go to the Mary Fletcher Hospital, at Burlington, to be treated, and I took their advice. When I left home my friends bade me good-bye, never expecting to see me alive again. The physicians at the hospital told me that my case was a serious one, and I was completely discouraged. I remained at the hospital seven weeks and took the medicines which the doctors gave me. I felt better at the hospital and thought that I was recovering, and went home to continue their treatment, which I did for two months, and also had an electric battery under their advice. The improvement, however, did not continue, and I began to give up hope. August 1st, 1893, I could not get out of my chair without assistance, and if I got down upon the floor, I could not get up alone. About this time I chanced to read an account of the wonderful cures of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People in cases similar to my own. I did not have any faith in the Pills, but thought a trial could do no harm, so I bought some without telling anyone what I was going to do. After I had been taking them some time I surprised myself by getting out of my chair without assistance, and found that, for the first time in months, I was able to walk down to the postoffice, and my neighbors began to discuss the marked improvement in my health. As I continued the medicine I continued to improve, and soon recommenced work in the mill, at first very lightly, and increasing as I was able and as I gained in health and spirits, and now for the past three months I have been working ten hours per day almost as steadily as I ever did. I feel well, eat well and sleep as well as I ever did, and I have no pain anywhere."

The reporter talked with several other gentlemen in regard to the case of Mr. Hutchinson, who is a well known citizen of Chelsea and a Justice of the Peace, and they corroborated his statements as far as they were familiar with the case and stated that he was known to be a reliable man, and any statement he might make would be entitled to entire credence.

An analysis of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills shows that they are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effects of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, all forms of weakness either in male or female. Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price, (50 cents a box or 3 boxes for $2.50—they are never sold in bulk or by the 100) by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

OVER FIFTY YEARS OF SUCCESS.

Notable Career of the John P. Lovell Arms Company.

For over half a century the John P. Lovell Arms Co. has been looked to as an authority on sporting goods, and no one who ever had business dealings with this well known firm has ever had cause to complain of unfair treatment.

After 55 successful years this house is now known throughout the country, and the very mention of the name John P. Lovell Arms Co. is a synonym of honesty and reliability.

John P. Lovell, the founder of the Company, although 74 years old, is invariably at his desk every day to overlook the rapidly increasing business.

No sharp practices in trade can be laid up against him. His record for honesty and integrity is irreproachable.

Fortunately, Mr. Lovell has some sturdy and businesslike sons whom he early associated with him.

Col. Benjamin S. Lovell, who is endowed with rare business ability, fills the position of treasurer of the Company in a most thorough manner. He is attached to the Governor of Massachusetts' staff, as was he from 1890 to 1893; was aide-de-camp to Gen. John C. Robinson in 1877-1878, and served on staff of Gen. Russell A. Alger in 1889, and with Gen. Palmer in 1893.

Thos. P. Lovell and H. L. Lovell are the Colonel's valuable assistants in keeping the Company to the front.

The John P. Lovell Arms Company have every facility which money, a thorough knowledge of the business, and the greatest skill mechanism can produce to make the "Lovell Diamond" the best bicycle in the world.

Every year since its first appearance this bicycle has been improved, until now it is unsurpassed in point of material, workmanship, finish, safety, speed, beauty and easy running qualities.

Not only is the use of the Lovell Diamond becoming more widespread in this country, but foreign dealers are not slow in recognising the merit of this machine.

The "Lovell Diamond" has the field, and it has already demonstrated that it is the king of bicycles. As the mountains of New England stand for all that is substantial in nature, so does the John P. Lovell Arms Company represent all that is solid and permanent in the business world.—Boston Herald.

What They Say.

These are a few sample statements about Dr. King's Royal Germetuer from people who have tried it thoroughly: Rev. Sam P. Jones: "It is truly a great remedy." Rev. J. L. CONGRESSIONAL.

DAILY PROCEEDINGS OF BOTH HOUSE AND SENATE.

The Discussion of Important Measures Briefly Epitomized.

After several private relief bills had been passed the house, at Tuesday's session, adopted, without discussion, the resolutions of the committees on election in their report on the contested election case from the eighth Tennessee district, that P. H. Thrasher was not elected and that B. A. Enloe was entitled to the seat. Mr. McRae, democrat, of Alabama, chairman of the committee on public lands, called up the first bill, the bill to repeal an act to exempt public lands in Alabama from the operations of the laws relating to mineral lands, passed in 1883, and it was agreed to.

Speaker Crisp having been called home by sickness in his family, Mr. Richardson, of Tennessee, was elected speaker pro tempore of the house Wednesday. The senate amendments to the house bill was agreed to, dividing the southern judicial district of Mississippi into two divisions and providing for holding a term of court at Meridian.

The house at Thursday's session concurred in the senate amendments to the house bill for the admission of Utah as a state. This passes the bill and sends it to the president for his approval. The senate amendments to the postoffice appropriation bill were also concurred in.

THE SENATE.

As a sort of compensatory move for its long daily sessions during the three months that the tariff bill was being considered, the senate, after two days' recess, spent only an hour and a half in session Friday and then adjourned until Monday at noon, having first made an order that its daily meetings shall be herafter at noon, instead of two hours earlier. Several bills were passed during the short time that the session lasted, including the joint resolution continuing the employment of mechanics and laborers at the several navy yards.

In the senate, Monday, the house bill to fix the terms of federal district and circuit courts in the southern judicial district of Mississippi, to be held at Meridian, Miss., was passed.

The Indian appropriation bill was reported to the senate Tuesday and placed on the calendar. The resolution offered Monday by Mr. Pieffer as to government control of railroads and other kindred matters, was laid before the senate, and Mr. Pieffer addressed the senate on it.

In the senate, Wednesday, Mr. Daniel, of Virginia, offered an additional clause to his substitute to the Peffer resolution. This additional clause was that, while the senate expressly declares its determination to endorse executive in enforcement of the laws and in maintaining the supremacy of the constitution, it deems it proper also to declare its adhesion to the principles of the arbitration of difficulties, and controversies between employers of labor and its employees, as recognized in the laws of the United States, and to express its condemnation of the refusal of the party to such controversy connected with the late disturbances and vicinity, to submit such difficulty and controversy, to a fair and impartial arbitration, and its determination. Also, to use in promotion of such arbitration, whatever constitutional powers it may possess. The clause was fully discussed and finally withdrawn by Mr. Daniel. His amendment of Tuesday, after being slightly modified, was then adopted by the senate without division. It as follows: Resolved, That the senate indorses the prompt and vigorous measures adopted by the president of the United States and the members of his administration to repulse and repress by military force the interference of lawless men with the due process of the laws of the United States and with the transportation of the mails of the United States, and with the commerce among states. The action of the president and of his administration has the full sympathy and support of the law-abiding masses of the people of the United States and he will be supported by all the departments of the government and by the power and resources of the entire nation.

The army appropriation bill was taken up in the senate Thursday. The committee amendment, striking out of the house bill an item of $152,000 for general service clerks and messengers, which also repeals the law of 1886, authorizing their employment, was agreed to.

COTTON CROP REPORT.

A Slight Improvement in Condition During the Month of June.

Returns to the department of agriculture at Washington for cotton make the average condition 89.6, against 88.3 in June, showing an improvement in its condition of 13 points. The condition in July, 1893, was 82.7. The averages by states are as follows:

Virginia, 87; North Carolina, 91; South Carolina, 88; Georgia, 78; Florida, 93; Alabama, 87; Mississippi, 88; Louisiana, 94; Texas, 99; Arkansas, 97; Tennessee, 73.

The reports show a slight but general improvement of condition throughout the cotton belt. In five states—Virginia, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and Tenpessee, there has been a decline, while in the states of North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida and Texas there has been an improvement in the condition of the crop.

TERROR IN TURKEY.

Many People Killed and Buildings Destroyed by Earthquakes.

Four fresh shocks of earthquake were felt at Constantinople Wednesday. Many houses collapsed at Stamboul, and the Grand bazaar, in the jewelers' quarter, fell, occasioning the greatest confusion. The merchants fled in terror, leaving their valuables behind them. Many shopkeepers and passers-by were buried beneath the ruins. It is impossible as yet to give the number of people killed and injured, but it is known that over 150 people are buried beneath the debris.

A Nashville special of Wednesday says: So far as the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis railway is concerned, the strike has totally collapsed, and on the Louisville and Nashville the situation is hourly improving, as the striking men are gradually going to work.

The entire working force of the Mobile and Ohio railroad shops at Whistler, a suburb of Mobile, Ala., have been laid off on the ground that the strike having laid off freight trains, there is no work for the shops. Three hundred and twenty-five men are thrown out of employment.

The following are given as percentages of condition: Cotton, 87; rice, 82; peanuts, 92; corn, 91; tobacco, 74; sorghum cane, 86; clover and grasses, 72; sweet potatoes, 90.

A strong petition has been presented to the Louisiana legislature protesting against lynching and calling on that body to pass some law that would have the effect of checking and preventing it. The petition is not the work of the negroes, nor have they anything to do with it, but emanates from the leading white citizens of New Orleans.

Governor Tillman has pardoned Thomas W. Ezzard, who was convicted and sent to the penitentiary from Barnwell county, S. C., for breach of trust. He was the agent of an estate consisting of lands lying in Wilcox, Irvin and Worth counties, Georgia, and belonging to J. J. Hill, Malvens Hill and others. Ezzard will be tried again on another charge of malfeasance in connection with the estate.

Judge Bruce, of the federal court at Montgomery, Ala., gave judgment to the Farmers' Loan and Trust company, of New York, against the Montgomery and Eufaula railroad for $1,640,000, being the principal and interest since July, 1893, on $1,500,000 of bonds. The road became involved about that time on account of the financial difficulties of the Georgia Central and the Richmond and Danville and defaulted on its interest.

The Texas State Horticultural Society passed unanimously strong resolutions endorsing the Atlanta exposition as a broad project for national progress, as a fine occasion to make an object lesson of the south's vast and versatile fruit possibilities. It was resolved that Texas should present there her rapidly developing horticultural interests and the resolution urged the Texas statesmen at Washington to support a national exhibit.

For some time Cuban smugglers have been doing a lively business on the east coast of Florida. There was a regular fleet of smacks engaged in the business, and not only the revenue laws, but also the quarantine regulations were broken. Wednesday the revenue cutter McLane arrived at Anclote and found six smacks anchored there engaged in illegal traffic. The McLane took the entire number in charge and proceeded with them to Mullet Key, where they were turned over to the authorities.

TRADE TALK.

Report of Business for the Past Week by Dun & Co.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s review of trade for the past week, says:

"The interruption of business by the railroad strikes has been such that the usual signs, whether bright or gloomy, have little value. Clearing house returns for the first week of July are 19.2 per cent less than last year and 25.1 per cent less than in 1892, but these record half yearly settlements rather than the volume of current business. The iron industry had not yet recovered from the coal miners' strike when it was seriously interrupted by the blockade of the railroads in the west. An obvious effect will be the restriction of repairs and car building and of track laying, and the track laid during the first half of 1894 has been only 495 miles, the smallest addition for many years, against 1,025 in the first half of 1893.

"A long and somewhat lasting reduction in the demand for iron is the natural consequences of the disturbances affecting railway earnings. The demand for iron products does not appear better, and prices are again tending downward, in spite of the general feeling that an advance must follow the termination of the miners' strike.

"Textile manufactures do not show improvement, two important cotton mills that manufactured colored goods having stopped indefinitely, while the unsold stock of print cloths at Fall River and Providence has reached 1,064,000 pieces, and a downward turn in prices of bleached sheetings is expected. Quite a large number of woolen mills have filled all orders on hand and closed for the present, and in most branches orders for the future fall far below expectations.

"Failures during the week have been 181 in the United States, against 354 last year, and 24 in Canada, against 28 last year, with no important disaster as yet since the new half year began."

IGNORAMUS is a word that leads to repentance.

Good Lemonade.

At this season of the year lemonade is appreciated, and it is a healthful, invigorating drink that agrees with almost every stomach. A writer in the Scientific American recommends the following plan for making good lemonade:

For a quart, I take the juice of three lemons, using the rind of one of them. I am careful to peel the rind very thin, getting just the yellow outside; this I cut into pieces and put with the juice and powdered sugar, of which I use two ounces to the quart, in a jug or jar with a cover. When the water is just at the tea point I pour it over the lemon and sugar, cover at once, and let it get cold. Try this way once, and you will never make it any other way.

The man who beats a horse and starves a cow.

The man who loves the sound of his own sweet voice.

The man who thinks it smart to be brusque to strangers.

The man who keeps his seat while ladies are standing.

The man who boasts of his own extravagance and vices.

The man whose alphabet always begins at the third vowel.

The man who tells one story to the same man a dozen times.

The man who would fetch the umbrella back in ten minutes.

The man who borrows books and papers and never returns them.

The man who thinks the world will fail to move on when he is gone.

What Denomination?

Jay Cooke, in 1866, told the following: One day, when I was putting government bonds on the market, I was greatly annoyed by the clerks telling me that there was an old man in the office who would do no business with them and must see me. To get rid of him I went out. Said he:

"Mr. Cooke, I have got $3,000 in gold in this bag. I can't do anything with it in the town where I live; they are circulating grocers' checks and everything else but money, and I am frightened because I think I will be cheated if I dispose of it. Will you tell me on your word of honor if these bonds are sound and right?"

I replied:

"If they are not right, nothing is right, I am putting all I have in the world into them."

After further conversation the man concluded to take them.

"What denominations will you have them in?" I asked.

This was too much for the man. He had never heard that word used in connection with that business.

For the Complexion.

The diet has such a decided effect upon the complexion that I wonder that more attention is not paid to it. Hot fats, breads and highly seasoned dishes, tea and coffee should not be indulged in to excess. Fruits, especially apples, oranges, currants and rhubarb should be eaten. Lemonade, but not clear lemon juice, is beneficial. Early spring salads, dandelion, cress, lettuce, peppergrass, dock and nasturtium leaves, dressed simply or eaten with salt, are good. Early in the spring this tea, taken in tablespoon doses, three times a day, helps greatly to clear the skin: Boil together for three hours two pounds of wild cherry bark, one pound of dandelion root, two sticks of rhubarb, one ounce of sassafras, one pint of grape juice, one-half pint of currant juice, one ounce of clover blossoms, and two sticks of hoarhound. Strain and bottle for use. —Deldee Croft in Housekeeper.

RECOMPENSE.

I cast a pebble in the sea,
Thinking that never more
As long as life is a mystery
Would come back to the shore,

'Twas thus she threw my heart away
It sank into the sea,
But time is good, and yesterday
'Twas given back to me.

Polly Ward—"Flagman."

BY ALBERT M. STRONG.

POLLY WARD had a grievance. Tears of angry disappointment stood in her eyes as she sat under the low spreading branches of the old elm tree in the front yard of her pretty little home, and all this had been caused by the big, broad-shouldered young fellow who was now making his way across the open prairie to the "Q" round house, dinner basket in hand and with the usual roll of overclothes under his arm.

The Brotherhood of Railroad Firemen were to give the first dance of the season that night, and Joe Quinn, the bright young engineer, with whom Polly had been keeping company for over a year, had promised to take her, and now, just as the evening shades were falling, and it was nearly time to don the pretty dress made with such loving care for the event, he had come to the house and told her that it would be impossible for him to keep his engagement. He had been called to go out on No. 5, the "Limited," and could not get off. It was enough to vex a saint, thought Polly.

John Ward, Polly's father, had been in the employ of the "Q" company for many years and had risen from a position as a laborer to that of foreman of the round house. On the night of which we write he had been home to his supper and had been obliged to return to the shops again to complete some repairs to a locomotive that could not wait. Polly was alone, and, with nothing else to do, sat under the big tree and grieved over her lover's defection.

Across the level prairie she could dimly see in the growing dusk the outlines of the monster shops and engine house. On the turntable track, down near the water tank, she saw the bright rays of an electric headlight that she well knew was on the big "ten-wheeler" that her lover was to run that night. She could see the flaring "torches" of Quinn and his fireman as they worked around the ponderous machine, getting her ready for the mad rush of the fast limited express.

The mellow tones of the engine bell, softened by the intervening distance, floated across the plain, rousing Polly from her reverie, and telling her that her lover had started for the passenger station in the city, two miles away. She watched the headlight until it disappeared around the curves, and was about to start for the house, when her attention was attracted by voices on the other side of the tight board fence that inclosed one side of the lot scarcely ten feet from where she sat.

"Tell you it's a dead sure go if we only hustle. That's Quinn backing down now on the 57. He'll run the life o' 'em out of here, and a couple of good oak ties stuck in that trestle will do the job slick enough. Nobody will be watching very close, and we can sneak the safe into the woods easy enough."

"Bill," said a second voice, "I don't just fancy killing such a lot of people as that'll do. Can't we flag 'em at the trestle 'n go through the car same as the other gangs do? There's six of us, 'n we ought to bluff that express man easy enough."

"No use to talk about it now, Hank," responded the first speaker. "The boys have got the thing all fixed 'n we can't change it now. Come on, we'll have to run if we get to Rock Creek before Quinn does."

As they finished their low-toned, hurried talk two men came from behind the fence and started on a run down the road toward the railroad track.

Polly was a bright, quick-witted girl and generally very self-reliant, but now she stood in the black shadows of the big tree, completely paralyzed by the atrocity of the awful plan these men had revealed.

They were going to wreck No. 5 to rob the express safe.

How could she give the alarm in time to avert this terrible sacrifice of human life? It was over half a mile from her house across the prairie to the shops, and from them it was nearly as far to the main track, to reach which one would have to cross the intricate tracks of the great switching yards, which at this time in the year were crowded with grain cars. Could she get to the shops, find some one trustworthy, tell her story to them, and still leave time enough for her messenger to reach the main track to stop the train?

While these questions were flashing through her brain the little clock in the hall chimed the half hour. It was half-past 8 and the train left the city at 9. She had only thirty minutes left. Suddenly she started toward the house on a run, crying:

"I can do it! I know I can."

On Joe's last trip in she had given a little lawn party, and Quinn, with the characteristic love of a railroad man for light and color, had brought over from the shops a lot of railroad lanterns, white, blue, red and green, to hang in the trees, and now they were stacked in the hall awaiting their return to the store room. In a second Polly was beside the pile, holding first one, then another between her eyes and the great arc light at the shops. She soon found what she wanted, a red one, and with it clasped in her arms ran to the kitchen for matches with which to light it.

Match after match was struck, only to go out, but at last success crowned her efforts and the light burned bright and clear; in another moment she was speeding down the road toward the track, bareheaded, thinking only of Joe and the awful fate that awaited him if she were not in time.

Leaving the city of —— the C. B. and Q. road runs south nearly two miles in almost a straight line, then makes a long curve to the left and straightens out to the east. In the inner radius of this curve the company located the shops and switching yards, and a little farther back, and east of the shops, had laid out a little town for its employes. On the street nearest the shops was the home of the Wards, and this street crossed the railroad nearly a mile from their house, and considerably more than that from the yards.

Polly was thoroughly familiar with all the surrounding country, for, in the summer just passed, on the pleasant Sunday afternoons, the big engineer would take the little maid for a long walk, and, lover like, would choose the least frequented paths. One of their favorite rambles had been down the shady street to the railroad and occasionally down the railroad track through "Quinlan's Cut" to Rock Creek. She knew the place well. It was at the foot of a short but very heavy grade, and, as the road left the deep rock cut, named after the contractor who had blasted it through, it ran over a high embankment and around a curve to Rock Creek, which it crossed on a trestle thirty feet above the stony bed of the little stream. The trees in the bottom obscured the view of the bridge even in daylight, and at night no headlight would show on it until it would be too late to stop.

It was the intersection of the street and the railroad at the top of the grade that Polly was straining every nerve to reach before the threatened train should arrive.

Down in the city Engineer Quinn had looked over the train register and bulletin boards in the train dispatcher's office, and was back where his engine was standing, just outside the passenger shed. Torch in hand he was taking one last look at the massive machinery before starting on this his first passenger run. The train was reported ten minutes late, and he had in his pocket an order from the superintendent to make up that lost time over his division.

"Did you fill these rod cups, Tim?" he called to his fireman, who was busy in the cab of the engine.

"Oi did, sor." "Say, Joe did ye cut out th' driver brake?" asked Murphy.

"I had to. Some one got to monkeying with the pipe and broke the connection. Maybe we won't need it; if we do she's got a mighty good lever and a hundred and sixty pounds of steam, and that'll answer, I guess."

"Hello! Here she comes," called Joe, as the bright headlight of an approaching train shot into the farther end of the big passenger station.

The engine was soon coupled to the cars and in a few minutes the huge machine was drawing its long, heavily laden train out of the depot. Joe at throttle, vigilant and cautious, carefully watching the little varicolored lights on the semaphores, and running slowly until the crowded confines of the city should be passed. All the worry and vexation of the long wait at the station for the delayed train had vanished, and now, with the cool night air blowing in his face, the engineer was filled with the exhilaration that is known only by those hardy fellows who drive the iron horse; that knowledge of mastery over the powerful machine that seems almost human in its work; that obeys almost the slightest touch. Soon the city is left behind and as he nears the long curve at the outer yards and sees the last semaphore signals at "safety" he gives the throttle lever a light pull. Under the increased pressure the iron giant leaps forward like a thing of life.

Meantime how fared it with the little woman we left flying down the street?

Polly reached the road crossing out of breadth and trembling like a leaf. She stopped in the middle of the track and listened. The train had not passed; of this she was sure; she would have seen it from the road if it had.

Ah! A bright light is dancing on the rails at the end of the curve, and now she can plainly hear the low rumble of the heavy train on the rails. A moment later the brilliant electric headlight is throwing its powerful rays down the line, and now, for the first time since she left the house, she thinks to look at her lantern and is almost frozen with horror to find it had gone out. A little glowing coal still on the wick told its own story:

It was out of oil.

"God help me now. What shall I do?" cried the girl in an agony of distress, as she held the glistening shape at arms' length and could see no sign of light within the dark globe.

Then, even as the hoarse note of the duplex whistle broke on the night air, giving the crossing signal, less than eighty rods away, there came to her mind, as plainly as if she had seen the very incident he told of, a story of her engineer lover that would save his life now.

* * * * * *

One bright afternoon in the summer, Polly was sitting on the porch sewing, while Joe lounged on the steps at her feet. He had told her many tales of thrilling interest of life on the road, and many showing the humorous side of the men of his vocation. She had been listening attentively, and while watching his face as he told of a particularly exciting event in his own life, her loving eyes had discovered a little scar, only a faint line now, on his forehead.

"What did that, Joe?" she asked, as she pushed back the curly hair that she might see it plainly.

"Oh, a brakeman out on the Central Branch. Hit me with a lantern."

"Why, Joe? Were you fighting?"

"Fighting? Not much. Why, my dear, that man saved my life when he did that."

"Tell me about it, please, Joe," pleaded his pretty listener.

"It happened when I was running that little passenger engine on the branch, four years ago. I had been out all day on a 'special,' two officers' cars full of big officials on a tour of inspection. When we got to the end of the road, they decided that they must go back to E— that night. It had commenced to rain and it was as dark as the—"

"Joe?"

"Well, so dark you couldn't see anything. I had broken my headlight chimney and couldn't get an extra one there, so I put a white lantern in the headlight reflector, and it gave just enough light to show any one on the track that we were coming, and that was about all.

"We got orders about 9 o'clock and pulled out with, as we supposed, a clear track. I had made about seventy of the ninety-five miles we had to go, and was sailing them along about forty-five or fifty miles an hour, when something came through the front window of my cab, hit me square in face and dropped into my lap. I picked it up and knew what it was the minute I touched it; a lantern, and a red one at that.

"I set my brake, pulled the sand lever open and reversed her. She skated along a little way and then stopped with a sudden jar. When I got down on the ground I found she had poked her nose under a freight caboose. If it hadn't been for that 'brakie' and his red light, I'd a split that train wide open, and you'd probably had some other fellow in tow now.

"You see, it was this way. The freight had been running ahead of us and had broke down. The conductor had sent his flag out all right, but the brakeman, running back over the wet and slippery ties, had stumbled and fell, putting out both his lanterns. He had matches, but he was wet through, and of course the matches were ruined. He had started to go back to the caboose to light his lamps when he heard me whistle for a road crossing a little piece back. Then he ran towards me, got as far as he could, and, just as I passed him, fired his lantern through the window.

"Pretty good scheme that. Wasn't it?"

* * * * * *

This was the story that photographed itself on Polly's brain as she stood in the track of the black monster that was so rapidly nearing her. Perfectly cool now, she stepped to the side of the track, and, with uplifted arm, braced herself to take, as she thought, the only chance to save her lover from an awful death.

On the engine Joe, as soon as he got out on the straight track, could see something on the crossing. A few seconds brought him near enough to see who it was, and knowing full well it could be no trifling matter that had brought his little sweetheart there at that time of night, and alone, he shut off steam and applied the air brake. Then, as he got down on the step, prepared to get off as soon as the speed of the train slackened sufficiently, he said to his fireman:

"Stop her, Tim, and back up for me."

Murphy had hardly straightened up on the footboard when there came a crash of broken glass, a blow on the shoulder from some heavy object, and a shattered red lantern lay on the "deck" at his feet.

"Howly Moses! Phwhat's dthat? Me shoulder's broke intirely."

A glance at the bent frame and broken glass lying in the bright light of the open firebox door told him, and the reverse lever of the powerful locomotive went back with a jump, a stream of sand was pouring down on the rails beneath the big driving wheels, and the little Irishman at the throttle was giving the ten-wheeler the full benefit of the 160 pounds of steam she carried.

Hearing the crash as the lantern went through the window, Quinn took desperate chances, and as the engine cleared the crossing, jumped to the ground. The speed of the train was so great that he was unable to keep his feet, and he rolled into the ditch beside the track. He was on his feet again in an instant and, running back to the crossing, found Polly's slender form lying in the road; for the first time in her vigorous young life she had fainted.

When she opened her eyes her head was on Joe's broad breast and the blue and gold conductor, lantern in hand, was eyeing her severely, while a small but rapidly growing crowd of passengers stood around and wondered what had happened.

Her story was soon told and as she was on her way back home under the protection of the baggagemaster, Quinn went thundering down the hill with the light engine, her cab and tender crowded with an armed posse recruited from among the passengers, and led by that muscular little Irishman, Murphy, who sported a murderous-looking Winchester borrowed from the express messenger. The engineer knew where to stop now, and as they slipped up to the end of the trestle they saw a skulking figure make for the woods. Murphy sent a shot or two after it, but when the posty searched the woods in the bottom there was no sign of any of the robbers to be found. In the timbers of the bridge between the rails they found four big oak ties so placed that they would surely have thrown the train to the rocks below.

What became of Polly, do you ask? A short time ago I received a copy of a paper published in —— that contained among the marriage notices that of Mr. Joseph Quinn and Miss Polly Ward, and in another column I found an extended notice of the event that gave a list of the presents and the donors thereof. Among them were a check from an English earl for one hundred guineas, a fine piano from a San Francisco gentleman, a beautiful set of solid silver from the Adams Express Co., and from the C. B. & Q. Railway Co. a deed for a handsome house and lot in the city. Many others sent beautiful and useful presents, and I am creditably informed that the two gifts, almost holy in the eyes of Mrs. Polly, are an elegant little watch from the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, inscribed, "To Polly Quinn, from the B. of L. E. 'A memory of Rock Creek.'" and a watch charm in the shape of a shield, made of solid gold. On one side was traced, "Polly Ward—Flagman;" on the other was the crossed red and green flags, the insignia of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, who had elected the young lady an honorary member of the largest organization of railroad men on earth.—Washington Star.

Japanese Gardens.

During a great part of the year the gardens of tea-houses and temples have but few blooms—they are only an arrangement of greens and grays—but in the spring no amount of clipping and training can prevent the shrubs from blossoming. The cherry trees and magnolias are let grow as they choose, but the others are trimmed into more or less formal shapes, considered suitable to the species, or helping the carefully studied arrangement of forms, which is the ideal of a Japanese gardener. There are no beds for flowers. In the little ponds the irises and lotus bloom, and in odd corners there may be clumps of lilies, chrysanthemums, or other plants, but these are mere accidents; the designer's aim is a composition of rocks, shrubs, stone lanterns, ponds and bridges, which will look the same in its general features all the year round, and conform to established rules. One of my Japanese friends told me, as an instance of the complexity of the landscape gardener's art, that if a certain shrub were used it would be necessary to place near it a stone from Tosa, the distant province where it commonly grows. The decorative garden is quite distinct from the flower garden, where the fine varieties of iris, peony and chrysanthemum, for which Japan is famous, are grown by professional florists, or by rich amateurs who can devote a special place to their culture.—Harper's Magazine.

Pitfalls Dug for Lions.

"The Arabs seldom attempt the destruction of the lion except by means of a pitfall," said John T. Worley, of New Orleans. "In the summer time the cattle owners have little to fear, as these beasts can find plenty of food in their own haunts, but in the winter the lions, suffering with cold and hunger, descend from the mountains, and the Arabs have to be vigilant. They pitch their tents in a circle and surround them with a hedge about six feet high. Between the tents and the hedge a deep trench is dug. When the hungry lion comes that way he scents the cattle, and they, scenting him, set up a loud bellowing, which only tends to whet the appetite of the voracious thief on the outside. The height of the hedge is scorned by such a leaper as he is, and finally he steps back a few paces, and with a terrific roar clears the hedge, but instead of finding himself in the midst of the cattle he falls into the pit. There he lies, and the people of the tents, frantic with joy, rush to the edge of the pit and shower bullets and stones on their enemy until he is dead."—San Francisco Chronicle.

Stamp Collection Worth $125,000.

I saw a collection of postage stamps at the exhibition of the Philatelic Society the other day that had been insured for $125,000; says an English writer. To a non-stamp collecting mind it was almost incredible to hear Mr. Garth or Mr. Castle telling of stamps costing hundreds of dollars because they were imperforate, or had a hair-line running through them or a head turned upside down or a word in the wrong place. Two postoffice stamps shown to me cost the buyers $2900, chiefly because the words were at the sides instead of somewhere else. Royalties seem to be eager collectors. The Duke of Coburg and the Duke of York both exhibit rare specimens of their collections, and on Thursday both paid a visit to the offices of the society in Arundel street and spent an hour very pleasantly there.—New York World.

Right Doing.

Right doing is a very simple thing, but right doing is not always an easy thing. A straight line is the shortest line possible between any two given points; yet, as a practical matter, it would be easier to draw a dozen crooked lines than one straight one in off-hand drawing. All of us can see the way of right living, but who of us can walk in that way without wavering?—Detroit Free Press.

Medical men die off more rapidly than other professional men. Between the ages of forty-five and sixty-five two doctors die to one clergyman.

SUMMARY OF NEWS.

CONDENSATION OF INTERESTING OCCURRENCES

Which Happen From Day to Day Throughout the Busy World.

The Cincinnati brewery, owned by Peter Schwab & Co., was damaged by fire Saturday morning to the extent of $100,000. It was fully covered by insurance.

The new men employed on the Fort Wayne, Ind., railroads in the yards and as trainmen are hourly submitted to most brutal assaults from the discharged men.

The official cholera report received from St. Petersburg, Russia, for Saturday shows that there were 403 new cases of cholera and thirty-four deaths from the disease in that city.

The New Hampshire prohibition state convention nominated Rev. D. C. Knowles, D. D., treasurer of Tilton seminary, for governor, and Dr. Edgar L. Carr, of Pittsfield, and David Heald, of Milford, for congressmen.

Notice was issued Saturday to the 800 employes of the Pennsylvania railroad, located at Logansport, Ind., that work would resume on full time. The men had been working on half time for two months until two weeks ago, when all work was suspended.

An Albany, N. Y., dispatch says: The sentence of Mrs. Halliday, the triple murderess, to be electrocuted, has been commuted by Governor Flower to imprisonment for life. The woman had been found insane by a commission appointed by the governor.

The newsboys of Cleveland, O., have struck and organized a boycott on The Morning Leader and Plain Dealer. They claim they do not get the papers for a fair price, and that recent reductions in prices of the papers have been made mostly at the expense of the newsboys.

Dispatches of Saturday state that the strike is off at Galveston, Texas. The militia, deputy sheriffs and extra police have been withdrawn. Everything on the Gulf, Colorado and Santa Fe is running as if no trouble had existed. Only a few of the strikers will be reinstated.

A dispatch from Marshall, Mich., states that the firemen and brakemen and most of the conductors of the Cincinnati, Jackson and Mackinaw railroad, went on a strike Saturday morning. The entire line is effected. The company is making every effort to replace the men and with some success. They say the strikers will not be taken back on any terms.

The American Railway Union strike at Cleveland, O., has completely collapsed. Most of the strikers have been taken back, except on the Lake Shore, where all hands have been discharged and their places will be filled with men who are known not to affiliate with the American Railway Union. The proposed strike of Knights of Labor will not materialize.

Train wreckers attempted to ditch the west bound passenger train two miles east of Dodge City, Texas, by stretching a large steel chain across the rails. The obstruction was discovered by Sheriff Clancey, who was on horseback. He urged his animal in a breakneck pace towards the approaching train and succeeded in stopping it within a few feet of the obstruction.

Advices of Tuesday from St. Petersburg state that the cholera epidemic is assuming alarming proportions. The present visitation is of much more intense and more fatal character than were the outbreaks of the two previous years. The disease has even penetrated into Finland, which has hitherto been absolutely free from cholera. The hospitals are full and a prison is being converted into a hospital.

The Southern Pacific company has offered a general reward of $5,000 for evidence or information leading to the arrest and conviction of persons guilty of any crimes set forth in the train-wrecking act passed by the last legislature committed upon any of the lines of the company. The railroad has also offered a reward of $5,000 for the arrest and conviction of any persons shooting at any engine or train with intent to kill any person thereon.

The most horrible accident which ever occurred about the mines in the Pennsylvania region, took place at No. 8 Stockton mine at Hazleton Tuesday morning. Two hundred sticks of dynamite exploded among a crowd of men preparing to go down to their day's work. All of these unfortunates were scattered and torn to fragments. The exact number of killed is not positively known, but it is placed between eight and eleven.

Wrecked by Strikers.

At 10:30 o'clock Sunday morning a freight train of thirty cars standing on an incline switch on the Pennsylvania track at Indianapolis was cut loose by strikers and ran down at a terrific speed into the Home Brewing Company's stables, causing a complete wreck of both train and stables. One dozen brewery wagons were demolished, and the teams of horses were fairly slaughtered. The loss to the brewery, in addition to that of the railroad company, will be many thousands of dollars.

Cholera Spreading in Russia.

The cholera continues to spread with alarming rapidity throughout the city of St. Petersburg, Russia. Sunday 216 fresh cases and sixty-nine deaths were reported. From July 8th to Sunday at noon, 973 cases and 294 deaths have been reported. The exceptional measures used in the period of such an epidemic are being enforced rigidly. Hundreds of cases are reported from the provinces where the per centage of deaths is exceptionally high.

CONGRESSIONAL.

DAILY PROCEEDINGS OF BOTH HOUSE AND SENATE.

The Discussion of Important Measures Briefly Epitomized.

Beyond adopting the report of the conferees upon the bill making appropriations for the payment of pensions for the year ending June 30, 1895, the house accomplished but little business at Friday's session, and that only of a preliminary nature. The entire session of the day was spent in consideration of measures on the private calendar.

In the house, Saturday, Speaker Pro Tem. Richardson sent a notice to Clark Kerr, naming Representative Dockery, of Missouri, to perform the duties of the chair for the day. A bill to promote the efficiency of the revenue cutter service, by providing a system of retirement for officers, was called up by Mr. Clark, of Missouri, who took the floor.

Monday was suspension day in the house. Under suspension of the rules the senate amendments to the naval appropriation bill were agreed to and the bill was sent to conference. Mr. McCreary then precipitated something of a sensation by offering the following resolution: "Resolved, That the house of representatives indorse the prompt and vigorous efforts of the president and his administration to suppress lawlessness, restore order and prevent improper interference with the enforcement of the laws of the United States, and with the transportation of mails of the United States, and with interstate commerce, and pledges its hearty support, and deems the success that has already attended its efforts cause for proper and general congratulation." After debate the resolution was passed without a division, the minority not being strong enough to get the ayes and nays called.

In the house, Tuesday, on motion of Mr. Sweet, of Idaho, the house agreed on the senate amendments to the house bill extending for one year the period within which entries under the preemption law may be paid. Messrs. Catchings, of Mississippi; Lester, of Georgia, and Henderson, of Illinois, were appointed conferees on the part of the house for the consideration of the river and harbor appropriation bill. Mr. Bailey, of Texas, demanded the regular order, to vote on the bill to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy which was pending when the house adjourned Monday. Mr. Burrows, of Michigan, made the point that the special order for consideration of that bill had expired and that it was not now in order, but Speaker Pro Tem Richardson ruled that a vote should be taken. The ayes and nays were called and the bill passed by yeas 127, nays 81.

THE SENATE.

The senate Saturday morning resumed the consideration of the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill.

In the senate, Monday, the consideration of the legislative executive and judicial appropriation bill was resumed. Mr. Call renewed his efforts to increase the salary of the law librarian to $2,500. The bill was passed and then the district of Columbia appropriation bill was taken up.

In the senate, Tuesday, Mr. Vest reported a bill for the sale of the custom house property in Louisville, Ky. The bill to amend the constitution with provision as to hours of labor was introduced by Mr. George, of Mississippi, by request and referred to the committee on immigration.

The senate was called to order Wednesday by Senator Harris, president pro tem, Vice President Stevenson having gone to his home in Bloomington, Ill., for several days. The bill authorizing John H. Johnson and others, keeper and crew of the life-saving station, at Hog Island, Va., to accept medals of honor and diplomas from the king of Spain, for saving the crew of the Spanish ship San Albano, February 2, 1892, was passed; also the bill authorizing Rear Admiral John G. Walker and Surgeon General J. Rufus Tryon, United States Navy, to accept donations from the government of Venezuela; also, authorizing Commander C. H. Davis, United States Navy, to accept a decoration from the King of Spain, in recognition of services to the Infanta Eulalie during her visit to the World's Fair. The bill authorizing the President to appoint delegates to the International Geodetic Association, was passed.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS.

Their Big Convention at Cleveland Concluded.

Saengerfest Hall, the mammoth auditorium of Cleveland, O., with a seating capacity of 10,000, was crowded to the doors several days last week during the exercises of the great International Christian Endeavor convention. It is estimated that over 20,000 strangers were in the city.

The exercises consisted of tremendous mass meetings. One was held at Saengerfest Hall, and the other in a big tent in the eastern part of the city. The tent has a seating capacity of 10,000. The address of welcome was delivered by Governor McKinley.

In the absence of President Clarke, who was unable to be present owing to illness, Rev. Charles F. Dinkins, of Boston, presided over the principal meeting at Saengerfest Hall. The growth of the society during the past twelve months has been the largest since it was organized, thirteen years ago. During that period 7995 companies have been added to the roster, against a gain of 3573 companies added to the rolls during the previous year.

THE TROUBLE ENDS.

LABOR ORGANIZATIONS REPUDIATE THE STRIKE.

And Refuse to Stand by the American Railway Union.

Latest dispatches from Chicago indicate that the great strike is a dead failure.

The building trades council organization, representing 25,000 Chicago workingmen, held a meeting and took action on the strike orders. There were 160 delegates at the meeting and for nearly five hours they discussed the strike. Then the vote was taken and the order issued by the organization calling its members out last Tuesday, was almost unanimously rescinded. The strike, so far as the building trades council is concerned, was thereby declared off. No resolutions of sympathy were adopted nor any sympathy expressed for the American Railway Union. This action practically takes away the support of the Chicago workingmen from Debs.

NORMAL CONDITIONS RETURNING.

Chicago is very rapidly resuming its normal condition. The action of the conference of the federation of labor, supplemented by the meeting of the building and trades assembly, at which it was resolved to call off the strike and resume work at once, is accepted universally as the death blow of the Pullman boycott.

Of course, Debs and Sovereign are saying that it is not over and that they are going to fight to the bitter end. Debs goes so far as to say that he will tie up every railroad in the United States. John M. Egan, chairman of the General Managers' Association, announced at noon Saturday that the action was final, which was taken Friday night in returning to Mayor Hopkins the proposition for the return of the strikers to work, submitted by President Debs, of the American Railway Union. The announcement by Egan was said to be the result of a session of the general managers.

SWITCHMEN REPUDIATE THE STRIKE.

The switchmen have taken a decided action regarding the strike. A meeting resulted in the following being promulgated: "We, the grand board of directors of the Switchmen's Mutual Aid Association, of North America, now assembled in the city of Chicago, have carefully considered our position in the pending strike of the American Railway Union, and Whereas, Our Grand Master, Miles W. Barrett, did not countenance the same, but held that all members of the Switchmen's Mutual Aid Association be governed by our constitution, therefore, be it Resolved, That it is the sense of this body of the grand board of directors, assembled, to fully indorse our Grand Master in his action in said strike.

DEBS GOES TO JAIL.

He and His Associates Charged With Contempt of Court.

The reports that additional proceedings were likely to be taken by the federal authorities against President Debs and his associate officers of the American Railway union had the effect of bringing a big crowd to the United States circuit court room in the government building at Chicago Tuesday. Judge Seaman, of Milwaukee, presided in the absence of Judge Grosscup. Mr. Debs was present at the opening of court, accompanied by W. W. Erwin, his attorney.

As soon as a few minor cases had been disposed of Mr. Gregory stepped to the bar, announced the presence of Debs and inquired whether the hearing was to go on. After a lengthy discussion Attorney Erwin exploded a bombshell by stating that if the defendants were compelled to give bail on the charge of contempt they must go to jail, for the bail already demanded on the indictments found in the district court had exhausted their ability in that direction. Unless the court accepted their own recognizances, then it was a matter of jail or nothing else.

ALL FOUR OFF TO JAIL.

Mr. Erwin made an impassioned speech, saying that at the proper time the indictment would be demurred to and the issue would be raised whether the unchecked operations of capitalistic tyranny could introduce the methods of a British monarchy. These men had never committed any act of violence. The conscience of the court was being whipped to resort to extreme and unjustifiable methods.

Judge Seaman set the train of contempt cases for Monday morning at 10 o'clock. He fixed the additional bail at $5,000 each and ordered the four men to be held in custody of the United States marshal until the sureties had been approved.

At 3:15 o'clock p. m., after a conference with their attorneys, Debs announced for himself and the three other defendants that they would go to jail and refuse to give additional bail on the ground that their bondsmen in the other cases had been so bitterly attacked by the press that they feel a great deal of hesitancy in asking any more citizens to go additional bail for them.

Coaches Skip Their Goods.

Liggett & Myers, of St. Louis, Mo., closed their tobacco factory, employing 3,500 hands, Saturday for lack of railroad transportation. Twelve other concerns have closed for want of coal or transportation. From these causes 6,000 men are now idle in the city.

Bloodhounds Attack a Train.

A freight loaded with soldiers was attacked by the convicts near Sacramento, Cal., Wednesday. The engineer was injured and the train wrecked.

Capt. Kolb's presence in the metropolis last week was pie to the reporters. He deluged them with accounts of his many and heroic efforts to boss the political situation of Alabama, fired them with his overweening confidence that this time he will win to a dead moral certainty, and got them all to announce that his hand is outstreched and ready for any stray change the Northern Republicans may have about their old clothes. The multitudinous and contradictory statements which he belched forth are positively picturesque. For instance, to a Sun reporter he said:

I will be elected this year and they can't count me out; in fact, I don't believe that any attempt will be made this time to defraud me of my votes.

Yet he takes an appeal for money around to all the Republican papers, which asks for help on the specific ground, that he is bound to have money to stop the Democrats in their headlong career of fraud. How characteristic is this outburst with which he further regailed the Sun man:

My party will control the next Legislature, which will elect a successor to Senator John T. Morgan. After the State election, which occurs on August 6, we are going in to turn down the present delegation in Congress from the state and elect business men.

"My party" and what great things he is going to do! It has'nt been two years since he and his party started in to turn down the Democratic nominees for Congress and turn over the State to Weaver. They are monstrous big threats for such a little man, and create laughter here at home. But the funniest thing said by this most picturesque of the modern humorists is put down by the Sun reporter as follows:

I have just issued an appeal to the American people for help in my canvass. I ask everyone who is infavor a fair elections to contribute and they can send money to Skaggs my chairman of my campaign committee. The American Protective Tariff League will help me because our platform declaire that the revenue of the government should be raised by duties on imports. The League will not send any speakers to Alabama, because we are not asking for outside talent in this campaign.

"My chairman of my campaign committe" is good. The Captain is everdently saturated with the idea that he is a bigger man than Goodwin, or Bowman, or Skaggs, or even Manning; that these are all satelites revolving around him as a sort of sun in a new political universe. "My chairman!" Mr. Skaggs will have to tone him down.

But the one thing that would really modify the genial Captain and bring him back to a consciousness of earth, would be for the Democrats to bring Shelley down here from Washington, open headquarters in Birmingham and put the General on the Captain's trail.

FAIR ELECTIONS.

The people of Alabama are awakened to the necessity that the ballot must be preserved in its purity. Whatever fraud may have grown up under the original plea of necessity, they have determined that an equal necessity today demands fair and honest elections. Naturally, in this effort of the body politic to go forward, the great Democratic party took the lead. Emty declamation, loud sounding cries and mighty and aimless beating of the winds are not are not promises of practical reform. The Democratic party took hold of the situation in a practical and honest way and enacted Sayre election law, Its purpose and its provisions are for fair elections, and everywhere the Democrats are standing by it and giving forth no uncertain sound as to their intetion of executing it honestly and to the letter. It is practical, and promises to be effective. The men who oppose it and obstruct it are the ones who stand against honest elections.

In this connection we desire to call attention to the following resolutions, adobted by the Democratic mass meeting in Chambers County which nomintated Judge Dowdell and Judge Robinson for the Legislature:

That we have a free ballot and fair count, and to this end we demand that the officers of the law having the appointment of the managers of the election make these appointments in accordance with the letter and spirit of the law.

That we favor a fair trial of the Sayre election law, and if it should not secure fair election, then the enactment of such an election law as will secure fair elections.

THE DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM.

The Democracy of Alabama in convention assembled, reaffirm the principles of the Democratic party as declared in its platform adopted at Chicago in 1892, and congratulatee the country upon the success of those principles in the triumphant election of Grover Cleveland, who, by his generous treatment of our people, has shown that he is the President of the whole country, knowing no North, no South, no East, no West. We recognize the wisdom and patriotism of the president, and believe in his fealty to the principles of our party, and indorse his administration of the Federal Government while some of us differ with him matters of policy, we are agreed in the belief that he is actuated by motives of the highest patriotism and by an unselfish devotion to the greatest good of the whole people.

While there are differences of opinion among us in matters of detail, we all believe in the free coinage of silver when ever it can be done consistently with the maintenance of a sound and safe currency.

We earnestly urge upon our Senators and Representatives in Congress the speedy reform of the tariff and the prompt repeal of the ten per cent. tax on the issue of state banks.

We heartily endorse the present administration of the state Government, headed by Governor Thomas G. Jones, who has so wisely and courageously his great trust, and we commend him for his impartial and fearless execution of the laws.

We pledge to the people of Alabama a continuance of the good government of our state affairs inaugurated by the election of George S. Houston in 1874.

The election law enacted at the last session of our General Assembly is in accordance with the principle upon which are based the laws regulating elections in a large majority of the states of this Union enacted with out regard to party, and was intended to obtain at the ballot box a full and free expression of the popular will; and after giving it a trial, should it fail to accomplish the end which it was intended to effect, we pledge ourselves to make such changes and alterations therein as may be necessary to effect that end.

For several weeks we have had a fearful state of affairs in Alabama. The Miners of the Birmingham district refused to accept the wages offered by their employers and quit work, they had a perfect right to do that, But they refused to stop there, they boldly counseled blowing up and burning the property of their former employers. In order to break up the coal industry or compel this term to be accepted they began to burn and blow up rail road bridges. And from the first they have terrorized those who dared to accept work in their old places, even killing a man occasionally, Gov. Jones saw the neccessity of placing the state troops upon the scene. So long as this force was in sight the Miners remained peacable. So soon as the soldiers were removed they held a meeting and 200 men are said to have sworn to kill the Negro Miners. This they proceeded to do shooting helpless Negroes and their guards as if they had been sheep. This cowardly outrage has made it neccessary that a standing army be placed throughout that district and that thousands of dollar be expended in searching out the guilty and bringing them to punishment. The need for self protection is so great that evey man and youth is volunteering as a special deputy or soldier. Such scenes are enough to call from the homes of every patriot denunciations against such anarchistic elements and words of commendation for our Governor who has the courage and the wisdom to handle this dangerous element. Yet in the midst of such times every Jeffersonian and Populite paper and speaker has not failed to denounce Gov. Jones for having the Military on the ground. In their eyes it is alright for those anarchists to burn property and kill unoffending men, but awful for a Governor to spend money in the protection of life and property: And yet, these condonors of crime, these denouncers of law and order are the reformers who seek to fill the offices of Alabama. To reflect for a moment upon what the possible condition of affairs in Alabama would be should Kolb's crowd be successful, ought to be enough to drive from their ranks every law abiding man.

Hon. A. D. Sayre of Montgomery, gave us some sound democratic doctrine at Cooper's last Saturday. He explained the Sayre law to an able audience, so that any one could understand it. He knocked the Kolb-Reese's argument on the Sayre law all to pieces. This is the first speaking we have had in the county. Are the Democrats of Chilton doing their duty, are they working for the ticket to be elected in August?

The Democratic Executive Committee of Chilton County, has not done its duty, they ought to have had speaking all over the County.

TERM OF THE TYRO LAUREL

According to previous appointment the friends of Education, assembled at Corinth Academy, five miles north east of Verbena, where a nice programe of declamations and recitations were carried out by the pupils of Prof. J. M. Connell's school, each pupil acquitted himself handsomely. But the main feature of the occasion, was the address delivered in masterly style by Prof. C. C. Slaton, Principal of Verbena High School.

The Prof. began by delivering a learned discourse on Psycology, and thoroughly captivated the audience, ann brought them in the fullest sympathy with his views, by enumerating the phylanthropic measures brought to bear from time to time for the advancement of the common schools of the country. He reviewed the history of the Blair Bill, discussed the present school Laws of Alabama, and closed with a lenghty and eloquent appeal in behalf of the Hundly Amendment. It is to be hoped that like efforts will be made by others, to inform the people upon this important Measure, which I believe would be liberally supported irrespective, of party, if once fully understood.

Half a Century.

One at fifty don't feel old, yet he has had considerable experience. According to a statistician, a man who has lived a half century has slept 6,000 days, has worked only 6,500, has spent in amusement 4,000. His diet has embraced about eight tons of meat and two tons of fish, eggs and vegetables, and he has drank over 7,000 gallons of fluid. He has been ill about 500 days, which is surprising considering above gluttony, and has walked a distance equal to half around the globe.

The Money-Maker.

The best money-maker on the farm is the hen. She turns grass into greenbacks, grain into gold, and from the sand and gravel she goins silver. There is nothing else on the farm to compare with her. The horses and cattle are heavy consumers, and to get their value we must part with them; but not so with the hen. In her small way she is a gold mine on the face of the earth; a mill that grinds that which others overlook or refuse.—Farmers' Review.

Little is accomplished in this civilized era, but with the gentle laxative, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the bowels are relieved without abruptness or subsequent weakening. "A Practical Age"

Is a fit epithet for the present age. "Of what use is it?" and "How soon will I get my money out of it?" are questions always asked before making an investment of any kind. Bright, intelligent young ladies no longer spend their time in acquiring useless accomplishments. Parents who wish to render their children independent, cannot do a wiser thing than give them a course in shorthand and typewriting. For young ladies it is a genteel and pleasant work, and for young men it is often the stepping stone to a higher business position. For terms, etc., in the best, most thorough and complete school in the South, write Miss McNutt's School of Stenography & Typewriting, 127 and 129 S. S. & L. Assn. Bldg., Wall St., Knoxville, Tenn.

Throw Physic to the Dogs.

So Shakespeare said, and it is the best of good advice for those suffering with tetter, ringworm, eczema, salt-rheum and other parasitic skin diseases. Physic never cured them and never will. Most blood medicines are merely cathartics—haven't anything to do with scaley skin eruptions. Tetterine is the only absolutely sure cure. Druggists sell it, 50 cents a box, or by mail on receipt of price by J. T. SHUPTRINE, Savannah, Ga.

No medical remedy ever put before the people has received an endorsement so universal and enthusiastic among the thousands who have used it as that which has been given to Dr King's Royal Germetuer. NATIONAL CAPITAL.

NEWS AND GOSSIP OF WASHINGTON CITY.

Brief Notes Concerning the Business of Our Government.

The president, Tuesday, signed the bill to permit Utah to hold a constitutional convention and be admitted to the Union as a state.

The President Wednesday sent to the senate the nomination of G. L. Baltzell, of Florida, to be collector of customs for the district of Fernandina.

The president sent to the senate, Tuesday, the following nominations: D. A. Wells, Jr., of Connecticut to be second secretary of legation at London, England; J. R. Jackson, of New Hampshire, to be consul at Sherbrooke, Quebec.

Partisanship in the United States senate apparently disappeared with the passage of the tariff bill. Since that time this dignified body has allowed its proceedings to be interrupted by no jars of any kind and the celerity with which public business is being transacted, is phenomenal.

It is semi-officially announced that the conference committee will make a report upon many points of difference between the house and senate tariff bill Monday afternoon or Tuesday morning. Many unimportant schedules will be reported as agreed to, as well as the coal, iron and whisky sections of the bill.

Secretary Carlisle, it is understood, will give direction, within a few days, to resume, to a limited extent, the coinage of standard silver dollars at the mints of the United States. Since the repeal of the Sherman silver purchase law, last November, silver coinage has been virtually suspended, only about 500 silver dollars having been struck off bearing the date of 1894. This coinage of silver for the remainder of this year will not probably exceed $2,000,000. Its coinage will not affect the amount of money in circulation, as for every dollar of silver coined a $1 silver certificate will be retired.

The Cramps Will Get a Premium.

The compilation of the official data taken on the trial trip of the cruiser, Minneapolis, shows her to be not only the fastest ship in the American navy, if not in the world, but faster even than was supposed. When the trial was completed a few days ago, the rough calculation made of her time placed her speed at 23.05 knots per hour, but the calculations made by the naval experts show that she accomplished the wonderful average of 23.073 knots. This will be her official rating, and on it the premium for excess of speed will be allowed. At the rate of $50,000 for each quarter knot of speed developed in excess of contract requirements, her builders—the Cramps, of Philadelphia—will secure $414,600 in premiums.

How the Pension Bureau Stands.

The commissioner of pensions, on June 12, issued a circular directing Assistant Commissioner Murphy to make a thorough examination of the records of the pension office, with a view of showing the present status of the bureau. For the first time since the establishment of the pension office an accurate, complete and comprehensive investigation has thus been made, and the results are regarded as very satisfactory. The work was carried up to July 1 of this year, and it shows that there are now 619,027 claims pending, against 711,150 on July 1, 1893, or a decrease of 92,123 claims. The total number of claimants was 514,414, representing 61,027 claims. Of the total number of claimants 227,205 are already on the pension rolls, showing that there were only 287,209 claimants who were not receiving pensions.

Treasury Report.

Treasury finances show an improved condition due solely to large receipts from internal revenue, which have reached for the half month of July $15,000,000 out of a total of $20,000,000. The expenditures for the same period aggregates $18,000,000. This places the treasury in a comparatively easy position with available currency at large centers for delivery without having to transfer it from point to point to meet prospective drafts. The receipts up to date indicate a total for the month of $35,000,000, while the expenditures will probably fall below $30,000,000, the larger part of the pension payment having already been made for the month. Customs dues still run at a very low figure and internal revenue receipts are not expected to continue to flow in at the same rate, as much of the spirits in bond have already been taken out in anticipation of the increased tax on whiskey. When the tariff bill passes internal receipts will, of course, decline materially, but customs receipts are expected to respond to the changes in the tariff bill and resume their normal volume.

YELLOW FEVER ON BOARD.

Arrival of a Vessel in Baltimore With the Dread Disease.

A sensation was caused in shipping circles at Baltimore, Sunday, by the arrival in port of Bark Glad Tidings from Rio with yellow fever on board. The Glad Tidings, Captain Young, left Rio for Baltimore June 12th, with 9,000 bags of coffee. A few days before her departure W. W. Benson, the cook, was attacked with the fever. He was sent to the hospital and left behind. June 23d Second Officer Fritz Hines was stricken with the dreadful disease, died June 28th and was buried at sea. No more new cases broke out and the officers supposed that the disease had been stamped out. The law requires that vessels arriving with infectious disease have to go into quarantine. Captain Young thought it was unnecessary to stop at the capes and came to Baltimore. The custom house officials refused her entry. Surgeon Wyman has the case under advisement.

The Sale Confirmed.

The sale of the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia railway to the Southern Railway company was confirmed in the United States court at Knoxville, Saturday afternoon, by Judge Lurton. The new management will take hold August 1st.

The National Tube Works strike at McKeesport, Pa., has been declared off, and the men will return to work.

Three distinct shocks of earthquake were felt in Memphis, Tenn., at 6:30 Wednesday morning. The vibrations were from north to south.

Senator Morgan spoke at Bessemer, Ala., Wednesday night, and for the first time made the announcement of his candidacy for re-election to the senate.

A Knoxville dispatch says: Miners in the Jellico district, who have been out on a strike since April, by order of President McBride, returned to work Wednesday at less wages than they were getting before.

The senate committee on territories decided at a meeting Wednesday to recommend the admission of Arizona and New Mexico as states, and instructed the sub-committee, who have the bills in charge, to make favorable reports.

Advices from Seoul, the capital of Corea, say that an attack has been made by the Japanese collieries upon the British consulate, and that Consul General Hiller and wife were brutally assaulted. A force of British marines has been landed at Seoul to protect the consulate from further attack.

Among the applicants to practice pharmacy examined by the South Carolina state board of pharmacy was a negro named L. J. Thompson, from Spartanburg. This is the first colored applicant to practice pharmacy in the state in fifteen years. The result of his examination has not yet been made public.

At a mass meeting of miners held at Bevier, Mo., the coal strike was formally declared off, and the men allowed to return to work on the terms offered by their employers. Work will be resumed in all of the mines excepting the Kansas and Texas No. 43, which will not be open for work until September.

A slight shock of earthquake was felt in the vicinity of St. Louis Wednesday. The shocks were not so noticeable in the city proper, but in the suburbs houses were shaken, pictures rattled on the walls, chairs rocked, and dishes on the tables were moved. In no case so far reported was the shock sufficient to do any damage.

The Massachusetts state convention of the people's party have put in the field the following state ticket: Geo. H. Cary, of Lynn, governor; Wilbert O. Dwinell, of Danvers, lieutenant governor; Dr. M. W. Moran, treasurer and receiver general; M. W. Landers, of Pittsfield, auditor; Carleton S. Beals, of Brockton, secretary of state.

Auditor Stone, of Jackson, Miss., has received a telegram from the St. Louis Bank Note Company stating that United States officers had seized the plates from which the 200,000 dollars of special 3 per cent Mississippi warrants were printed, and that the total number of warrants had been shipped and the plates canceled. The question is assuming grave proportions.

At Memphis, Tenn., the switchmen members of the American Railway Union who went out on a strike, have adopted resolutions condemning the local officers of the American Railway Union for not trying to get their old places back for them. They declare the strike off in Memphis, so far as the switchmen are concerned, and the strikers will try for any position they can get.

H. W. Hargreaves, an official of the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railway Company, is in Chattanooga, Tenn., securing negroes to take the places of the striking white miners at their various Alabama plants. Thus far he has secured about 100 men. Other agents are at work in Knoxville, Nashville and Atlanta. Nearly 6,000 men are employed by this company, and they are anxious to replace them with negroes, promising them $1.50 to $2 per day.

Richard Wood Woodward, of Marshalltown, Pa., has engaged counsel to bring suit against persons in the city of New York to recover $470,000,000. He claims to hold evidence to prove that he is the only descendant of Robert Edwards, who in 1754 bought thirty-five acres of land where Trinity church now stands. The land was leased to King George ninety-nine years, at the expiration of which time the heirs were called for, but none appeared.

A PANIC IN CONSTANTINOPLE.

Business Paralyzed as a Result of the Earthquakes.

Advices from Constantinople are to the effect that the panic caused by the earthquake does not abate. The rumbling of a heavy cart or rattling window from a sudden breeze suffices to send the occupants of near-by houses huddling into the streets. The families in the parks, cemeteries and smaller open squares are preparing to camp out for several days more; all who can are replacing their tents with little wooden huts. The rich families have sought refuge on the upper Bosphorus. Business is virtually stagnant. Half of the merchants closed their shops immediately after the last shock and have not returned to them. Apart from trade in food, there is no buying and selling in the city.

DECIDED AGAINST THE ROAD.

Mississippi's Supreme Court Sustains the Law Taxing Railroads.

The circuit court at Jackson, Miss., has rendered a judgment in favor of the state in its suit against the receivers of the Georgia Pacific Railroad company for taxes. The defense made in the suit was by demurrer. The only legal question raised by the demurrer was whether mileage or privilege taxes levied by the act of 1892 upon the Georgia Pacific on its line of road in Mississippi, were invalid as a tax on interstate commerce. The judgment of the court upholds the statute. There will be an appeal to the supreme court by the receivers of the railroad company.

NEWS OF THE SOUTH.

BRIEFLY SYNOPSIZED IN PUNIENT PARAGRAPHS.

Chronicling Events of Special Interest to Our Readers.

The Third batallion Florida state troops went into camp Monday evening at Palmetto Beach. The batallion consist of five companies, Major W. P. Williams commanding.

An attempt was made Monday to blow up Lockhart mines, in Walker county Ala., and serious damage done. James Kelley, a colored driver, and his mules were instantly killed. No clue to the guilty parties.

The Raleigh News and Observer property was sold at auction Monday and one of the creditors became the purchaser at $6,810. The sale has to be reported to the court and confirmed. The paper will be continued as a democratic paper.

A Birmingham, Ala., special says: The proposition of the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railway company for mining coal was rejected Saturday by the striking miners. The general manager of the company has said that he will put new men in the strikers' places.

The entire working force of the Mobile and Ohio railroad shops at Whistler, a suburb of Mobile, Ala., have been laid off on the ground that the strike having laid off freight trains, there is no work for the shops. Three hundred and twenty-five men are thrown out of employment.

An enthusiastic mass meeting was held at the courthouse in Meridian, Miss., Saturday by several hundred populists. An organization was perfected. Committees were appointed for a vigorous campaign. The strike situation was discussed by the speakers. They stated that the cause was bad legislation.

Freight trains were run on both the Louisville and Nashville and the Nashville, Chattanoogs and St. Louis railroads Thursday, as regularly as if there had been no strike. The yards in which hundreds of cars had accumulated were about cleaned up during the day. Both roads will retain the new men employed before the strike was broken, while those men who refused to take out trains will not be given employment.

Intense excitement prevails at Birmingham, Ala., over the attack by the striking miners upon the guards and the negroes working at the Pratt mines, resulting in a bloody battle in which three men are known to have been killed outright and a number wounded, several fatally. Forty-two striking miners have been jailed on the charge of murder, and fifty more will be arrested. A monster citizen's indignation meeting was held in which they denounced the lawlessness and took action to suppress it.

A Chattanooga special says: The thirteenth annual session of the senate of the National Union, convened at Lookout inn Tuesday. Speeches of welcome were made by Mayor Ochs, President A. J. Gahagan, of the Chamber of Commerce, State Senator Morrow and Hon. Creed F. Bates, the rejoindere being by officials of the union. The first day's proceedings were of a preliminary nature. Members were in attendance from every state in the union. The organization is of a beneficial order, insurance being its main feature. The membership is over 50,000.

GROWTH OF THE SOUTH.

The Industrial Situation as Reported for the Past Week.

The review of the industrial situation in the South for the past week indicates that the interruption in railway communication is being rapidly made good, and that business is reviving. The truck farmers have been heavy losers by the strike, as large shipments were either lost entirely or sold at prices that returned no profit to the shippers. The progress in railway reconstruction is giving confidence in business circles, manufacturers are generally running on full time, the coal mining and iron producing industries are slowly and steadily increasing their outputs, and only the lumbermen are in unfavorable circumstances, owing to overproduction and dull markets.

Thirty-five new industries were established or incorporated during the week, together with fourteen enlargements of manufactories, and sixteen important new buildings. Prominent among the new industries of the week are the Mountain Home Co., of Parkersburg, W. Va., capital $250,000; the Marlboro Manufacturing Co., of Bennettsville, S. C., capital $25,000; the Curphey-Woolen Lumber Co., of Vicksburg, Miss., with $18,000 capital, and the Pierpont Lumber Co., of Crescent City, Fla., capital $15,000. The Raymond Lumber Co., of Raymond, Fla., capital $15,000; the Biloxi, Miss., Artesian Ice Co., capital $16,000, and the Roesale Manufacturing Co., of San Antonio, Texas, capital $10,000, have also been incorporated during the week.

There is also reported a button factory at Raleigh, N. C., cotton and woolen mills at Canton, Ga., and Helton, N. C., an electrical plant at Winchester, Tenn., and flour and grist mills at Mt. Hope, Ala., New Orleans, La., Concord and Tracadia, N. C., and Columbus, Va. A tinware factory on a large scale is to be built at Louisville, Ky., gold mines are to be opened at Cheraw, S. C., a quarry at Chilhowie, Tenn., and a phosphate mining company has been chartered at Nashville, Tenn. A tannery will be built at Tate, Ga., and tobacco factories at Kernersville, N. C., and Memphis, Tenn. Waterworks are reported at Marion, Ala., and Waxahachie, Texas. The new woodworking plants of the week are at Huntsville, Ala., Bohemia and Orlando, Fla., Lebanon and Louisville, Ky., Wilmington, N. C., and Branchville, S. C.

Among the enlargements reported for the week are brick works at Houston, Texas; flour and grist mills at Sparta, Ky., and Anson, Sherman and Weatherfield, Texas; an ice factory at Tampa, Fla.; phosphate works at Pemberton, Fla., and Alvin, Texas.; cotton mills at Gastonia and Monroe, N. C., and Gonzales, Tex., and a woodworking plant at Stamps, Ark.

The new buildings include business houses at Athens and Atlanta, Ga., Pine Bluff, Ark., and Fort Worth and San Antonio, Texas; a Government building at Mt. Sterling, Ky.; a church at Atlanta, Ga.; a $11,000 residence at Houston, Texas, and a $3,000 one at Logan, W. Va.; school buildings at Marietta, Ga., and Vicksburg, Miss., and a warehouse at Americus, Ga.—Tradesman, (Chattanooga, Tenn.)

Pullman Men Return to Work.

The first break in the ranks of the Pullman strikers has occurred, one hundred and fifty Hollanders having been put back to work on the tracks back of the Pullman foundry. These men quit work when the strike was declared and stayed out until now. No effort was made by the strikers to prevent the men from going to work.

Closed Up the Shops.

The men in the yards and shops of the Fort Worth and Denver presented to go out on a strike Wednesday at noon, but the company posted bulletins closing up shops and laying off about 175 men just before 12 o'clock. No trouble anticipated.

FLOATING FACTS.

Boston has a water-storage capacity for 17,766,643,000 gallons, which is considered to be 438 days' supply.

Philadelphia has the name of "Mother City of Photographic Portraiture" because it was the first city in this country to adopt photography after Daguerre, and was the first in all the world to apply the new art to the reproduction of human faces.

When the editor of the populist paper at Kingman, Kan., returned from the state convention, where he had voted against female suffrage, he was seized by a large party of woman's rights people, who put on him a flaming sun bonnet and a yellow "Mother Hubbard" and marched him through the streets, headed by a brass band.

If it be true that the Indiana giant, Hanson Craig, who has just died at Danville, Ind., weighed 900 pounds, he must have been the heaviest man of whom there is any record. The famous English giant, Daniel Lambert, who died in the month of June, 1809, weighed only 739 pounds.

Cure for the Blues.

In a certain town a number of cures were established. There was a faith cure, a hot water cure, a cold water cure and a cure for the blues. Thinking that in these days of business depression and financial stringency, when more or less acute attacks of the blues are so prevalent as to be almost epidemic, a reliable remedy would be a delight, we give the one recommended at this cure. On his arrival at the cure for the blues the patient was shown into a small office where sat a physician. After questioning the patient a little he gave him a small box, charging a few cents for it, and charging him to keep the contents a close secret. In the box was a slip of paper with these words: "Let no day pass without doing something for some one." This prescription carefully taken is guaranteed to cure the most chronic case. We hope if anyone under whose eye this may chance to fall, is suffering from this melancholy disease, he will give it a trial.

Consumption of Horse Meat in Paris

In the survey of the butcher shops, one duty is to make sure that horses, ass and mule meats are not masquerading as beef. Not that their sale is forbidden. On the contrary the municipal laboratory itself has declared this sort of nourishment "an excellent thing." It simply demands that the meat be sold as equine and not bovine, and that the animal that furnish it be not decrepid or diseased.

The first point is regulated by establishing shops especially for the sale of horse meat. Or, if it is sold from a cart or in a regularly licensed butcher shop, by requiring that it be marked plainly. The sale of horse meat has grown to enormous proportions since the first shop was established in 1866. The estimate is, that it is eaten now in a third of the Parisian households. In 1891, 21,231 horses, 61 mules, mules, 275 asses were sold in the Paris shops. The meat costs about half as much as beef.—McClure's Magazine.

Necessity of Irrigation Recognized.

The necessity of improving the conditions of agriculture by means of irrigation has been recognized in nearly all states west of the Mississippi river. Conventions have been held in North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, California, Wyoming and Montana for the purpose of more thoroughly studying the question of irrigation and ascertaining what should be done by the national government and the several state governments in the way of legislation to secure the introduction and increase of irrigation facilities. The proceedings of these different conventions have have proved valuable to the states mentioned. In Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas and Colorado a large acreage has been made available within the past two years utilizing the water supplies that have heretofore been allowed to run to waste. The results obtained have been highly satisfactory, and due effort is being made to extend the irrigating facilities in these states.—Ex.

Uses for Soda.

Tinware may be brightened by dipping a damp cloth in common soda and rubbing it well.

Very hot soda in a solution, applied with a soft flannel, will remove paint splashes. Use soda in the water to clean paint and glass instead of soap.

Strong, tepid soda water will make glass very brilliant, then rinse in cold water, wipe dry with linen cloth.

Ceilings that have become smoked by kerosene lamps may be cleaned by washing off with soda water.

For cleaning oil paint before repainting, use two ounces of soda dissolved in a quart of hot water, then rinse off with clear water.

A lump of soda laid on the drain pipe will prevent the pipes becoming clogged with grease; also, flood the pipes once a week with boiling water, in which a little soda is dissolved.

Wash white marble porches, bath, etc., with a mop dipped in boiling hot water and soda. A good deal of soda should be dissolved in the water.

A little soda put in the water in which cut flowers are placed will keep them fresh for a long time.

If grease has been spilt on table or floor of kitchen or pantry, put a little soda on the spots and then put boiling water over them.

His Sure Rule of Action.

A well known lawyer on a circuit in north England, curious to know how a certain juryman arrived at his verdict, meeting him one day, ventured to ask:

"Well," replied he, "I'm a plain man, and I like to be fair to every one. I don't go by what the witness say, and I don't go by what the lawyers say, and I don't go by what the judge says; but I look at the man in the dock, and I says, 'He must have done something or he wouldn't be there,' so I bring 'em all in guilty."—Argonaut.

Have You? Many Millions Have accepted James Pyle's invitation to try his wonderful discovery, Pyle's Pearline; for easy washing and cleaning. You couldn't count them in a lifetime. Some of the twelve million housekeepers in this land must have accepted very often. That's the way with Pearline. The wise woman who investigates, tries it; the woman who tries it continues to use it. A daily increasing sale proves it. The truth is, there's nothing so acceptable as Pearline. Once accept its help, and you'll decline the imitations—they don't help you. It washes clothes or cleans house. It saves labor and it saves wear. It hurts nothing, but it's suited to everything. Try it when it suits you, for it will suit you when you try it.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, do the honest thing—send it back. 575 JAMES PYLE, New York.

CHILTON COUNTY

Is the geographical center of Alabama. The Louisville and Nashville, the E. T. V. & Ga. and the Montgomery, Tuskaloosa and Memphis Railroads pass through the County, and the Coosa river is the boundary line on the east. The chief industries are farming and saw mill-ing. Population 18,000.

Clanton, the county seat, is on the L. & N. R. R., 50 miles south of Birmingham and 40 north of Montgomery. Several large saw mills are located in the vicinity of the town.

The French Government recently imposed a tax on bicycles, which has been found to prove a very profitable source of revenue, as a craze for bicycling appears to have taken France by storm.

Brooklyn has eight miles of water front, where over $300,000,000 worth of goods are stored every year. It is the fourth American city in manufactures, producing nearly $200,000,000 a year.

It is found that shirts of white muslin and 2200 linen may be produced at seventy-three cents per dozen. Each shirt passes through the hands of seventeen operatives, and each woman employed averages about one dozen complete shirts per day. The greater part of the cost of production is the element of labor, and while the average pay is necessarily under seventy-three cents per day, some of the workwomen make a good deal more, while the superintendents, cutters and the like are well paid. Machinery, in this instance, has enormously increased the power of labor and raised wages.

Professor Brice, President of the British Board of Trade, wants steamship racing to stop, and laws enacted to prevent it; but that is easier said than done. The greyhounds of the sea have an inward fire of competition as hot as that which drives their engines, not to be extinguished by a bucket of legislative cold water, or the remonstrance of a professor or President of any Board of Trade. Speed is the determining factor of the precedence, and consequently the prosperity of the great ocean lines, and it is not to be expected that they will intermit their efforts to continue and increase it. It may be feasible to control and regulate the conditions of steamboat racing, but it will be hardly possible to abolish it altogether.

An oculist of New York City says that there was nothing in any way remarkable about the operation for cataract that was recently performed upon Gladstone. Neither the method of operation nor the use of cocoaine during its performance was novel. The favorable result in the case was not an unusual thing in cases of the kind. The patient did not need to exhibit any "heroism" when in the oculist's care, or even any particular fortitude, as the danger was not worth speaking of, and the pain must have been very slight. It is probable that Gladstone's only suffering arose from the circumstance that he was kept in a dark room for a few days, during which time he was not allowed to read or write, and could not deliver speeches in Parliament or elsewhere. It is absurd to glorify him because he submitted to the extraction of the crystalline lens. "We are constantly dealing with cases of cataract in this place," said the oculist, "and an operator claims very little credit for success. It is proper to say, however, that we do not often operate upon a man so very old as is Gladstone, who will probably, for the rest of his life be, able to see better than he has seen for many years."

"The Southeast Peninsula of Maryland or Eastern Shore as a Place of Settlement for German Farmers" is the title of a German pamphlet just published by Rev. N. Burkart, of Baltimore, founder of two former colonies from Kansas in Dorchester County, Maryland. After describing the special attractions and advantages offered, the writer gives a short history of the German colonies on the Nanticoke River, where fifty families have settled since the fall of 1893. In September of that year Rev. N. Burkart purchased a farm of 1000 acres, with two dwellings and orchards, for $9,000. On this estate, which, for 250 years, has been under cultivation, forty slaves were employed at the outbreak of Civil War. There are now a large number of German households settled there. Other Germans have since bought 222 acres for $1000, a farm of 370 acres for $1000, and, again, 572 acres for $4000. A Swiss farmer acquired 700 acres for $4300. Three farmers from Minnesota lately made a tour of inspection on the eastern shore in the company of Rev. Jacob Burkart, with the intention of purchasing lands in the neighborhood of the Nanticoke settlement. Several families from Fairbolt, Ill., during August, will occupy territories purchased by them in Maryland, after selling their farms in the West.

A PRAIRIE ROMANCE.

BY GODFREY QUARLES.

HE most fastidious would have pronounced Alice Leneant decidedly pretty as on that summer evening she stood on tiptoe, with head bent forward, in the doorway of the great kitchen of the Kansas farm house, dressed in a robe of white, which well comported with her slight figure and fair, girlish face, now slightly flushed with excitement, as she watched some object moving slowly along the dusty prairie road. In a moment she uttered a low cry, and exclaiming: "It's a dirty tramp, and he is coming in here. Oh, dear, what will I do?" beat a hasty retreat into the interior of the kitchen.

Presently, however, she grew bolder, and returning again, looked at the intruder who had now turned in through the gateway and was approaching the house. Soon he was so near that the young lady caught sight of an open pleasant countenance, and growing still bolder, stepped into the doorway to meet him. He came up slowly, and lifting a tattered hat, said:

"Miss, you will pardon me, but as I have eaten nothing since yesterday morning, I am as hungry as a bear, and should like something to eat. It's harder for me to ask than it is for you to give."

Miss Alice, with all her fears, had a kind heart, and seeing that the tramp's haggard face bore eloquent testimony to what he said, she bade him be seated and hurried away in quest of food. In a few minutes she returned with a generous bowl of mush and milk and gave it to the stranger. He thanked her warmly and at once fell to eating with the eagerness of a hungry man. As he ate, the girl, while pretending to read, sat and watched him closely. She noticed that the tramp was young, with a face that was prepossessing, and though it bore signs of dissipation, far from weak. He was tall and broad shouldered; his dress, though frayed and tattered, was not dirty, and his whole appearance gave evidence of better times. He seemed to grow restless under her furtive but earnest glances, and flushing deeply was about to speak, when she broke out suddenly:

"What is your name?"

"Never mind that," he replied, rather bitterly, somewhat startled by the earnestness of the girl's manner. "Perhaps it would be better if I never had had one. As it is, you may call me anything you like."

"Well, then, Mr. Tramp, how old are you?"

"Twenty-three, miss," replied the stranger, while a quiet smile played about his mouth.

"How long have you lived this kind of a life?"

"Nearly three years."

"What led you to it?"

"What has sent thousands of better fellows to the dogs—dissipation," was the answer.

"Have you a mother? She certainly can't be living or you wouldn't be a tramp."

"My mother, miss," said the young man, sadly, "died when I was a child, and I have no near relatives now living."

"I thought as much; that explains many things. But why don't you try and reform? No one need be a tramp unless they have a mind to, need they?"

"I have tried hard to do better; but what can a fellow do when no one will help him and everybody is dead set against him?" was the dogged answer. "When you are once down in the mire it's hard work to climb, especially when there's no one but stands ready to kick you back in again, instead of lending a helping hand."

"But I am ready to help you."

"Your's, miss, are the first encouraging words I have heard in many a day, and they sound pleasant to the ear; yet what could you do?" The speaker having finished his supper, sat the bowl down on the steps, and leaning back against the door-sill as if loth to go, began to fan himself slowly with his hat.

"I would do all I could for any one who wanted to do better."

"There's a town in the East where I could get work and help, but it's 1700 miles away, and I have no money with which to pay my fare," and he paused and looked wistfully at the railroad which ran through the neighboring field. "If I could get there—but what's the use of talking about what can't be done?"

"How much would you need to reach this place you speak of?"

"Twenty dollars would do it, but that, to a man who can't muster ten cents is a fortune."

He ceased speaking, for Alice had disappeared, and through the half-open door of the hall he heard the rustling of garments and the click of tiny boot-heels as she ran up the stairs. A moment later she returned, and again sat upon the doorstep, holding in her hand a small pocketbook. At the sight of this the young man broke out earnestly:

"Really, miss, I did not think that you would pay heed to what I said. It was all idle talk; so please forget it."

"Oh, no, it wasn't. Besides, I like your appearance and want ever so much to help you do better. Here are three ten-dollar gold pieces; they will take you where you want to go, and you can pay them back if you want to when you are able. Now please take them, for I don't need them. And promise me, too, that you will try and do better."

The tramp blushed deeply, recoiled for a moment before the outstretched hand of the girl, while a look of pain came over his face; but at last he said:

"I will take what you offer me on certain conditions. You must give me your address. I know you don't live here, and accept my word of honor, it may be worth something, even if it is a tramp's, that the loan shall be paid with the first money I earn."

The girl drew out a blank card, and hastily scribbling a few words, thrust it with the gold pieces into the reluctant hand of the stranger. "There, take them, and do the best you can."

"Alice Leneant, 126 Madison avenue, Topeka, Kansas! That's a pretty name, and well becomes the one who wears it. If I ever marry I want to marry just such a noble little woman as you are?"

"You are mistaken, for I am not the least bit noble; but perhaps you may yet marry such a woman as you think me to be," replied Alice with a forced laugh. "Now don't talk any more about such funny things, but promise me you won't touch liquor again, and that you will try your best to reform; and then you must hasten or you will miss the Eastern train, which is due at the station at seven o'clock."

"I will promise you," was the low but determined reply.

The girl had now arisen and was waiting for her guest, who arose and stood beside her, to take his leave. Drawing a band of gold from his little finger, he said:

"Miss—Miss Leneant, I have a favor to ask of you; will you wear this ring till I come for it?"

She made no answer, but silently held out her hand to receive the ring. The tramp had caught sight of a rose-bud at her throat, and now asked:

"Will you please give me that as a parting gift?"

She tore the flower from its place and gave it to him.

"Now go," she said, "or you will be too late."

He caught up her hand, kissed it, and murmuring, "You will hear from me if I live," turned away. At the gate he paused, and with a wave of the hand was gone.

When her father and the farm people returned from their evening ride, she hastened to tell them all that had passed. The careful housewife hurried away to see if there was not some of her silverware missing, while John Leneant, a prosperous lawyer, who an hour before had been put into the best of spirits by hearing that an important suit had been decided in favor of his client, patted his daughter's cheek, and said, good humoredly:

"I wager that you have made a losing investment, and I am certain that if you were to run loose down here very long, I would have to take the benefit of the bankruptcy law."

"But, papa," very earnestly, "he was such a fine looking fellow, and so young, and seemed so friendless."

"Ah, my sly puss," responded the father, laughingly, "youth and good looks are dangerous things sometimes, and I am so sure that young scalawag will never be heard from, that you have my promise of a check for five times the amount should he ever pay you."

"I shall hold you to your offer," she said, as she bent to kiss her father good night. But, notwithstanding her father's jest, and the gloomy forebodings of the housewife, Alice slept soundly, feeling conscious that she had done a good deed. During the months that followed she often thought of her strange acquaintance, and wondered if he would ever come to claim the ring. Whenever her father questioned her about her "sinking investment," she would reply good-naturedly that he would yet be called upon to draw the check. One December morning among the letters brought her by the postman she found one directed in a strange hand. She broke the seal, when out dropped three crisp ten dollar bills, and with them a slip of paper on which was written:

"God loveth the cheerful giver. Sometime I shall call for my ring."

No name was signed, and the postmark was almost obliterated, yet she knew it was from her friend the tramp, and felt that he was keeping his pledge. In the first moments of her surprise a strange feeling of happiness stole over her, and then her eyes sparkled brightly as she thought of how she would demand of her father the promised check. But the time never came, for an hour later John Leneant was brought home dead; he had fallen a victim to apoplexy.

Four years had passed since Alice Leneant had generously given the money which took another out of vagabondage, and into a life of usefulness. Her father's death had left her worse than penniless, and rather than be dependent on others, she had preferred to win her living as a saleswoman in one of the large art stores of an Eastern city. During all these years she had never again heard from her stranger friend. Many of those whom she had once called friends had long since grown cold, and she had often found the road of poverty a hard and weary one; but she always, with the nobility of a true woman, put the bravest side out and did not complain.

It was Saturday night, the close of a busy week, and Alice was putting on her wraps preparatory to going home, when summoned to the counting room. With a heart beating fast, from some vague fear, she entered the little room.

"Miss Leneant, there's a gentleman who wishes to speak to you. Mr. Wilmshurst, allow me to introduce you to Miss Leneant; Miss Leneant, Mr. Wilmshurst," and so speaking the clerk turned and again bent over his huge ledger. From behind her veil the young lady noticed that the stranger was a tall, good-looking man, of perhaps eight and twenty, with flowing side whiskers and a well formed mouth which, when he smiled, displayed teeth of dazzling whiteness.

"I don't know as you remember me, Miss Leneant," said the young man, fixing a pair of piercing black eyes upon her, "but I once met you under circumstances that made me your lasting debtor. I have much to say to you of a private nature. Will you allow me to see you home? We can talk on our way."

"Do as you choose," was the rather distant reply. But the gentleman seemed unmindful of rebuffs, and buttoning his overcoat, led his companion out of the store. Once in the street she consented to take his arm, but never once designed to reply, save in the briefest manner possible, to his flow of small talk. At the door of her lodging place she paused, as if to bid him farewell, but he seemed waiting to follow, and so without speaking she led the way into a plainly furnished room. When they were seated Mr. Wilmshurst said:

"My errand with you, Miss Leneant, is quickly told. Four years ago a young man, a drunken tramp, miserable and ragged, halted at a farm house near Emporia, Kansas, at which you were stopping. Do you remember the circumstance?"

"I do."

"He asked for food; you gave him more, that which enabled him to become an honest and temperate man. In parting he promised you that he would never again touch liquor, and that with the help of God he would reform; and he gave you a ring until he should come for it. Do you remember this, too?"

"I do," said Alice, growing slightly nervous.

"That tramp left the farm house a changed man. He always remembered the promise he had made to you, and though often strongly tempted, never broke his pledge. The struggle was a hard one, but he persevered, and at last conquered. Some weeks ago he started for the West once more to meet the young woman who had been more than a friend to him. He found that misfortune had overtaken her, that her parents were dead, and that she had removed to a distant city."

The speaker paused a moment, and then continued:

"Miss Leneant, I was that tramp, and in obedience to the promise made you four years ago, have come to claim my ring; but I will take it back only on certain conditions."

"What are they?"

"That she who now wears the ring will be mine also."

"Really, Mr.—Mr. Wilmshurst, this is so sudden, so unexpected."

"Perhaps it is, but I will give you plenty of time to decide."

And he did. During the months that followed, handsome Alice Leneant found so much to love in the ex-tramp that one evening, in a voice low and tremulous, just loud enough for he who listened to hear, she said: "Carl—Mr. Wilmshurst, I mean—I guess you can take your ring."

Sharp Robbers.

The natives at Colon and Panama were lately discovered in a fairly sharp scheme to rob the steamship company. The transfer of bales and packages of India rubber over the Isthmus is always large in volume after the arrival of steamers from Peru and Mexico. Then there are constant arrivals from Colombia and Nicaragua, as well as local receipts from within a few miles of Colon. These, piled on the docks, make a large aggregate and at favorable opportunity a bale or two would be dropped overboard, and as rubber naturally will float; it was comparatively an easy matter to pilot the booty to a point whence it could be readily landed and disposed of to a "fence." As a bale weighs from 100 to 200 pounds, the haul was a good one to the native. The loss could not be discovered until after the steamer reached New York, and it bothered American detectives for months until the leak was finally located.—Chicago Herald.

The Czar's Chairs of State.

The Czar of Russia has at least a dozen chairs of State, each of which is designated from time to time as a throne; and yet not one of them can lay claim to that exclusive designation. There is, for instance, the chair of State which belonged to Ivan the Terrible. This is made entirely of turquoises set so close to one another as cobblestones in a pavement, the back alone containing 10,000 of these gems, which were selected from the finest specimens known at the time. It is preserved in the treasure chambers of the Kremlin at Moscow. Will anybody tell me which is the Papal throne? I myself know of at any rate three Holy seats that are designated as such, one of them being the throne in the chancel of St. Peter's, and another in the Vatican apartment, where the Pope usually grants audiences, while besides these there is the famous and unique "Sedia gestatoria," or throne borne upon the shoulders of attendants.—New York Advertiser.

A Columbia special says: Governor Tillman received notification Wednesday night that a mob was being formed at Eastover to come to Columbia and lynch Joyner, who killed R. T. Branham. The governor immediately ordered the prisoner to be taken to the penitentiary for safe keeping. An extra guard is on, and should the mob appear at any time it will be repulsed.

A dispatch from Uniontown, Pa., says: The number of armed strikers in the region is increasing daily and the fact is creating much alarm. The strikers assert that they have the right to bear arms. Complaints against Sheriff Wilhelm have been filed with the governor by the Frick and McClure coke companies to the effect that the proclamation is being defied and that Sheriff Wilhelm is making no effort to stop it.

The Ochitie Club, composed of New York and other northern capitalists, has purchased 64,000 of hunting land on the coast of of South Carolina just the other side of the Savannah river and between the coast and ridgeland on the Charleston and Savannah railroad. The club will build a clubhouse and use the land for winter outing and sport. Its objects are pleasure, similar to those of the famous Pineland Club near Garnett, S. C.

Coxey's army camp at Hyamsville is gradually dispersing. The men have been on the point of starvation. Coxey, in an address to them Wednesday, told them that about the only thing for them to do now was to go to Washington and beg, get arrested and have the district to support them. Coxey and his son left for home. What is left of Frye, Kelly and Galvin's contingents are congregated on the government reservation on the Virginia side of the Potomac, opposite Georgetown.

The general executive board of the Knights of Labor at a meeting at Omaha, completed arrangements for canvassing Nebraska in the interests of the populist party, and State Workman, D'Allemand was sent to confer with the populist central committee and fix dates for twenty-four rallies during the fall campaign. Policeman Lindgren was seriously wounded and two rioters badly hurt in a fight which occurred Wednesday in the Grand Trunk yards at Thirty-ninth street, Chicago. A small crowd of strikers attempted to stop a freight train and when the officer went to the rescue he was met with a volley of stones and coupling pins. He fell, bruised in a dozen places. Regaining his feet Lindgren fired, probably fatally injuring Alexander Hurt and slightly wounding a striker named Donnigan. But one of the rioters was arrested.

The deputy United States marshals, who served in the Montgomery, Ala., district during Cleveland's first administration, brought suit against the government for some $40,000 in fees which had been disallowed them. The officers claimed 6 cents mileage when going to serve a paper and 10 cents when returning with the prisoner or witness. If the officer brought, for instance, three prisoners back he claimed 18 cents going and 30 cents returning. The federal court at Montgomery has allowed the claim as to serving the papers, but refused to allow the claims for returning. The case will probably be appealed.

THE PETITION DISMISSED

And the Reduction in Employes' Wages Stands.

In the United States circuit court at Nashville Judge Lurton heard the petition of the employes of the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia Railroad Company for an injunction restraining the receiver from reducing wages 10 per cent, as decided, to take effect August 1st. Judge Lurton dismissed the petition on the ground that the reduction was advisable on account of business depression. The road, for reasons satisfactory to the court, was taxed with the costs of the hearing.

Pleading for Debs.

A motion was made before Judges Wood and Grosscup in the United States court at Chicago Monday morning to dismiss the charges of contempt of court against President Debs, Vice President Howard, Secretary Keliher and Director Rogers, of the American Railway Union. NATIONAL CAPITAL.

NEWS AND GOSSIP OF WASHINGTON CITY.

Brief Notes Concerning the Business of Our Government.

The president Tuesday sent to congress a dispatch from Minister Willis, in which he states that Queen Liliuokalini earnestly requests that the United States will not recognize the Hawaiian republic.

A few minutes after 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, almost immediately after the senate adjourned, the democratic senators went into caucus for the purpose of formulating a programme in regard to the disposal of the tariff bill. For three hours the discussion continued, and at that time, without having reached any conclusion, an adjournment was taken until Wednesday at the same hour.

At the suggestion of Chairman Cockrell, Senator Gordon has made a condensation of the house bill to appropriate $200,000 for the Atlanta exposition. The bill was too cumbersome, in the opinion of the senators, to be added as an amendment. It will be reported in the new shape, if acted on favorably, but as the main points are perfectly preserved, there will be no difficulty in the conference, and the bill pass both houses.

The president has announced the commissioners to investigate the controversies between certain railroads and their employes connected with the recent strike as follows: Carroll D. Wright, who is designated by statute as one of the commissioners; John D. Kernan, of New York, and Nicholas E. Worthington, of Peoria, Ill., selected by the president. Under the law he was obliged to appoint a citizen of Illinois as one of the commissioners.

The officers of the American Bimetallic League at meeting in Washington issued a call for a conference to be held in the city August 16th, of those who believe that no permanent improvement in the condition of the country can be hoped for as long as the present gold standard policy is pursued, and who favor the immediate restoration of the bimetallic standard of the United States, with the free coinage of both gold and silver at the ratio of 16 to 1.

The senate committee on territories has agreed upon favorable reports to the bills admitting Arizona and New Mexico to statehood. Both of these bills have already passed the house. Could they be considered by the senate at this session they would pass. It is, however, not probable that they will be reached on the calendar before the December session. With the Utah bill already a law and these two soon to be, this congress has done well in admitting new states.

TRADE TALK.

Bradstreet's Report of Business for Past Week.

Bradstreet's report of trade for the past week says:

"The disappearance of the great railway strike of 1894, the revival of regular freight schedules and the customary movement of produce and merchandise by water and rail have done much to restore something like the preceding volume of trade. The most encouraging statement is merely that general business is only approaching the usual midsummer proportions. The return to work of potters at Trenton and Wheeling, employes of Pullman, tubemakers at McKeesport, a further return of coke operatives in the Connellsville region and of coal miners in the western and southern states, together with all recently striking railway employes, will furnish more industrial employment within a fortnight than at any previous date since April 1st.

"Large eastern business centers report a feeling among jobbers and other wholesale houses favorable to a revival in trade as soon as tariff legislation shall have been definitely settled. Dealers west, northwest and southwest at the larger distributing centers announce that merchants are running with very small stocks, that they confine to buy only for actual wants in sight. The effect of the recent wide-spread disturbance in transportation and industrial circles are now making themselves felt in bank clearing returns, the aggregate this week being $20,000,000, a drop, as compared with the preceding week, of about 3 per cent, and as compared with the third week in July, 1893 of 16 per cent.

"Southern cities which have felt the effects of the railway blockade report that shipments are now regular, crop prospects generally favorable and the feeling in jobbing circles one of improvement. Aside from this no change is reported from Memphis, Nashville, Charleston, Savannah and Birmingham. Atlanta advises that fall trade is opening satisfactorily and manufactures are busy; Chattanooga that the demand has improved, and Augusta, that while the demand is more active, the crop outlook is less favorable, owing to recent excessive rains. The fruit trade at New Orleans is greatly improved since railroad traffic has been resumed, and there is some demand for building material, favorable crop reports throughout Louisiana have stimulated a better feeling. Galveston jobbers report good order in all lines, particularly dry goods and notions.

SUPERINTENDENT OF EDUCATION,

COMMISSIONER OF AGRICULTURE,

For Representative
W. J. RUDDICK.

The good people of chilton county must give a handsome majority for W. J. Ruddick and the State ticket.

The Peabody Summer school of Pedagogy is to be held in Troy, beginning August 21, and continuing 5 weeks. Every teacher should avail himself of this splendid opportunity. Write Prof. S. R. Eldridge Troy, Ala. for full particulars.

The cause of Democracy was never so bright before during the whole Campaign. White men and Negroes alike are leaving Kolb and his crew. The enemies of Democracy are rattled. They are on the run. In order to keep their people from going to hear Democratic speakers they get up opposition dinners and announce that distinguished speakers will be present, but the people who are thus fooled hear only fourth rate men go through with the same old ranting performance. No wonder their eyes are being opened to the true situation. Law abiding men, men who love the peace and prosperity of their country can't stay in any such crowd.

The A. and M. College at Auburn has established ten Scholarships for needy and worthy young men. Any young man in Chilton County who wants to secure a scholarship, should at once write to Judge J. R. Dowdell, LaFayette Alabama.

The future welfare of this country depends in a large measure upon the success of the Democratic ticket at this time. Every candidate from Col Oates for Governor to Rev. W. J. Ruddick for Representative, is an inteligent and upright citizen who will do his best to serve all classes alike. Let every Democrat fom now until the Polls close use his utmost endeavor to insure the success of the ticket. talk earnestly and truly to you neigabers and get them to come home.

News reaches us that Mr. Ruddick is developing strength all ovo the County. The people believe in him. He will see to it that Chilton County is properly represented, he wil be the tool of no man, or set of men, but will consciensiously do his duty. Tell your neighbor of him and work for his election.

When you vote be sure and make the inspector return your registration certificate. You will need it in November.

According to the estimate of the Populite Papers it would be better for those foreign anarchists about Birmingham to shoot down every Negro and White Man who has the courage to work in the places they have vacated, better for them to burn every railroad bridge, tear up all the tracks, blow up all the mines, terrorize the country and plunge the Mineral district into bankruptcy, than for Governor Jones to quell the riots and protect all the citizens regardless of color. There is no power more dreaded by anarchists than the Military arm of the State. And this is why their sympathizers everywhere raise the hue and cry against the Militia. Of course it costs money to keep up the Military. But are the lives of men worth nothing? In this affair in Jefferson County there is no effort to "Coerce labor," except to compel certain men who won't labor unless they can boss every thing to keep their hands off of laborers who dare to exercise the rights of free men. And we thank God that we have a Governor backed by a great and good people, who are determined that life and property shall be safe in Alabama. The enemies of Democracy, in the guise of the Alliance, as it gasps for breath, may resolute until doomsday against Governor Thomas G. Jones, but the voice of the best people God ever made are saying Amen! Amen!! The Negroes see as they never before have seen that their only friends are the white men represented by the party at whose head Hon. W. C. Oates will soon be placed, and they are coming like a mighty army to support that party. Well does the Birmingham News say it has taken the Negroes and the White Democrats about thirty years to come to an understanding, but that we are now at a common understanding, men white and black, want good laws and they want those laws faithfully administered and they see their only hope is the Democratic Party.

The friends of education were very much surprised to see that Prof. McMorries should be opposed to the Hundley Amendment whose object is to allow the different townships to tax themselves for school purposes. And more surprised that he should have no argument against that Measure save that "too much power is given to the trustees"—The trustees of each township are regularly appointed to look after the educational interests, and surely they would not go contrary to the desires of their constituency. The argument could be used against the power held by the five men constituting the Commissioners Court of Chilton County. They have exclusive power to levey taxes for building court houses, jails, & & & c. A great power, and yet we trust to their good sense and their love of justice to do right.

The crying need of Chilton County is for more and for better schools, and now that we have the opportunity to move a peg higher let us not destroy it. This Hundley Amendment is no partisan measure and ought to receive the support of every voter.

THE DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM.

The Democracy of Alabama in convention assembled, reaffirm the principles of the Democratic party as declared in its platform adopted at Chicago in 1892, and congratulates the country upon the success of those principles in the triumphant election of Grover Cleveland, who, by his generous treatment of our people, has shown that he is the President of the whose country, knowing no North, no South, no East, no West. We recognize the wisdom and patriotism of the president, and believe in his fealty to the principles of our party, and indorse his administration of the Federal Government: while some of us differ with him matters of policy, we are agreed in the belief that he is actuated by motives of the highest patriotism and by an unselfish devotion to the greatest good of the whole people.

While there are differences of opinion among us in matters of detail, we all believe in the free coinage of silver when ever it can be done consistently with the maintenance of a sound and safe currency.

We earnestly urge upon our Senators and Representatives in Congress the speedy reform of the tarif and the prompt repeal of the ten per cent. tax on the issue of state banks.

We heartily endorse the present administration of the state Government, headed by Governor Thomas G. Jones, who has so wisely and courageously his great trust, and we commend him for his impartial and fearless execution of the laws.

We pledge to the people of Alabama a continuance of the good government of our state affairs, inaugurated by the election of George S. Houston in 1874.

The election law enacted at the last session of our General Assembly is in accordance with the principle upon which are based the laws regulating elections in a large majority of the states of this Union enacted with out regard to party, and was intended to obtain at the ballot box a full and free expression of the popular will; and after giving it a trial, should it fail to accomplish the end which it was intended to effect, we pledge ourselves to make such changes and alterations therein as may be necessary to effect that end.
